Guess who I met?
Senior Evan Starr got more than a show when he saw Brand New play at St. Andrews Hall. Starr met lead singer Jesse Lacey after the show. "He was outside having a smoke, and I said hi," Starr recalls. Even after an intense show, Lacey didn't let stardom go to his head. "He was tired from playing, and I was fired from moshing," Starr said. "It was real relaxed. He didn't seem pompous or anything."

Director's cut

Although the One-Act Festival was student led, it still needed a producer. Dan Dobrovich decided to step in and fill this position. "I'm familiar with the drama departments in this community, and I wanted to be a part of it," Dobrovich said. Even with his help, he explained it would still be a challenge for the students to create a successful show.

Students shine

One-Act Festival showcases talents

We are kind of teaching each other and learning at the same time," junior Katherine Frimenko said about the first annual student-led One-Act Festival (top right). This festival allowed the involvement of many different talents, such as play writing, acting, directing and back-stage technology.

(Middle right) "I have acted in many plays but have never had the opportunity to direct one," senior Devan Malone said. Malone is the director of "For Lies or For Latter," one of the plays in the festival. "It is a good experience to be working on the other side of the stage instead of on stage all the time," Malone said. The actors in the festival explained how much different this festival is from other drama productions.

(Bottom) "This is a very informal production," junior Patrick Kelley said.

"I think people will like that, especially high school students." Kelley won the lead part in "The Adventures of Super Loser." Kelley said that this was a significant difference from the other plays he has been in. Although the play was described as informal, the actors explained that preparation was still challenging.

(Top left) "We had rehearsals every single day after school until 4 or 4:30, and there were some days when I had to carry my script around all day, learning lines," sophomore Sydney Stier said. Stier played the part of the fairy godmother in "Rescuing the Princess."

Senior Elizabeth Nork, who played the singing princess, said, "It's really cool because we are able to show different groups of people and different talents."

I n my opinion

The festival started with writers submitting their own original plays. A select few were chosen to be performed by fellow students. These writers shared their feelings on the experience.

"I really want to be a film editor, and writing a play relates to this goal."

Fun, food and football

It was fun having a boys night for a while," junior Andrew Nguyen said about the Superbowl party he went to. "We could be ourselves and just do whatever."

For Nguyen and his friends, the night consisted mostly of food, jokes and, of course, football.

The guys said that the large display of food at the party was more than they could ever eat. It included things like sandwiches, desserts and wings.

(Bottom left) Junior Noel Key said, "There was a lot of food at the party, but my favorite was the wings."

"Besides eating and watching the game, we mostly just joked around and made fun of each other," Key said.

(Top) Nguyen and juniors Ryan Jelso and Eric Maise jockey for the spots on the couch, crushing Key underneath. "There was a high demand for the good seats on the couch," Maise said, "We had to fight for them."

(Bottom right) After watching the halftime show for awhile, Jelso decided he didn't like the music. "We didn't like watching at halftime, so we started a war with Nerf guns, and Noel was playing air guitar pretty much the whole time," he said.

(Center right) Junior Daniel Courtney rejoices when the Giants win the game. Most of the guys at the party said they were rooting for the Giants, but some said they didn't care.

"Andy (Nguyen) was a fair-weather fan," Key said. "He would switch who he rooted for every time one team scored." Key also admitted to not being in tune to the game.

"I made a big fool of myself because I don't follow football," Key said. "I didn't know that Eli Manning was Peyton Manning's younger brother, so I was like 'Wow, he looks like a mini Peyton Manning.' Everyone at the party just started laughing at me."

A d review

One part of the Superbowl is the advertisements that play during breaks in the game. These students shared how the commercials compared to last year's and which commercials were their favorites.

"The commercials were horrible this year, but my favorites were all of the baby ones."

— Junior Matthew Deacon

"The funniest one was the Bud Light ad where the man puts beer in a block of cheese to hide it."

— Senior Katherine Bezak

"I liked the 'A Night at the Roxbury' spoof commercial for Pepsi."

— Senior Joshua Samson

"The Amp energy drink ad with the nipple clamps was the funniest one."

— Junior Richard Mackie

face it: with activities, friends, and homework, high school students are busy.

Junior Katherine Frimenko is no stranger to managing her time wisely. She juggles dance, violin lessons, Student Congress responsibilities, National Honor Society, several clubs and school work. "It's important to have priorities and balance your time between them," Frimenko says.

(Bottom left) Frimenko records her commitments and homework in her school planner daily. Frimenko said, "I always write in pencil, so I can change or rearrange events when I need to."

(Bottom right) Junior Jacqueline Harris keeps track of her schedule with a color-coded Five Star calender. She says, "[It] helps me organize and manage my time, so I don't forget anything. My life goes into that calender."

Following Harris around on one particularly hectic Saturday illustrates the benefit of using a planner.

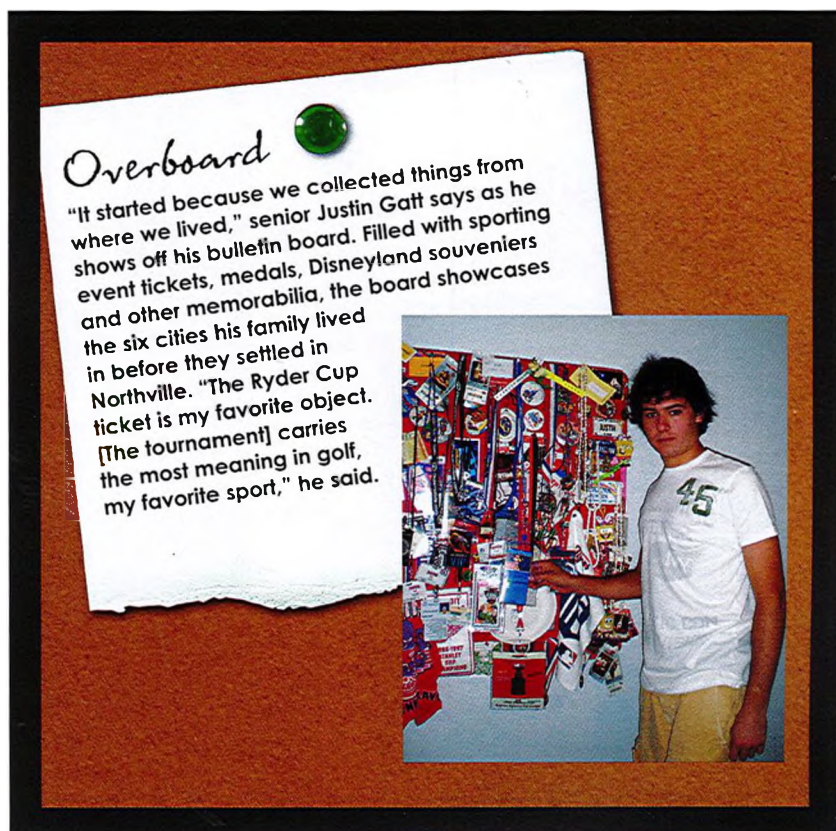

(Top right) The day starts with an ACT class. Completing a few last-minute practice problems, Harris said, "Hopefully it will raise my score when I take the test."

(Top left) Next, she rushes to Irish dance class, the activity that occupies the majority of her time. Harris plans her life around her dance practices. "I usually have dance, so I try to get all of my homework done as soon as I get home," she said.

After stopping at a friend's birthday party and eating dinner with her family, the day ends with a few hours of homework. (Center right) Harris finishes her English paper. "It is due on Tuesday," she said.

"If I didn't have this stuff written down, I would forget everything," Harris said.

Study skills

"I just get bored. I need variety."

Working on homework can be stressful and boring, but tactics from handstands to late night snacks help students get the job done.

(Top and bottom left) "When I study for finals I do handstands, tripods or hang from the side of my bed to get the blood rushing to my head," senior Megan Trotter said. Trotter complained about how she gets bored when studying for finals and finds doing handstands a good change of pace. "I just get bored. I need variety in my study habits," she said.

Trotter also listens to music to stay on task while getting her homework done. "I listen to Frank Sinatra," Trotter said. "Jazz music helps me concentrate on my school work; it's relaxing."

(Top right) Senior Erin Shea takes several hard classes and often finds herself pulling all-nighters to get all her homework done to her satisfaction. "I'm a perfectionist," Shea said with a laugh. "When I'm studying late at night, I like to eat ice cream." She said that the ice cream helps her to stay awake during her late night study sessions. She also finds the sweet snack an escape from the stress of studying. "I feel like I'm rewarding myself. It helps me stay on task," Shea said.

(Bottom right) Junior Patrick Kelley finds that making his own music helps him to keep on track while doing his school work. Kelley said, "I start my homework around three, when I get home from school, and I usually finish around six."

When Kelley gets bored, he said he has a trick to make his homework more fun. "Sometimes I sing while I do my homework," Kelley said. With his study technique, Kelley is able to incorporate the passion he has for singing while completing his more tedious or difficult homework.

Extra! Extra!

Sophomore Christina Bucciere (top left) practices her swing with her dad in the backyard before a game. "My dad always helps me practice to calm my nerves before a big game," Bucciere said.

She is currently on the Northville Stars, a softball team through Northville Parks and Recreation. "I joined the rec team for fun and to get extra practice for the school team," Bucciere said.

(Bottom left) Bucciere works on her pitch to make sure she is ready for her game. She started playing softball nine years ago in Ohio because it was one of the most popular sports in her town. She tried out many positions before she decided that pitching was what she really enjoyed. "I enjoy pitching, it is my favorite position in softball," she explained.

cheerleaders as "The Scorpion."

She is a member of the Michigan Extreme Cheerleading team, and this is her third season participating with this group. "Tumbling and stunting are my favorite parts about cheerleading because I was a gymnast before I started cheer, and it is a lot of fun to be able to put both sports together," Breault said.

(Top right) Breault practices her flexibility before practice starts to warm up her muscles, so that she is prepared for all the tumbling and stunting required. She is also a member of the JV cheer team along with Michigan Extreme All Stars.

Participating on two cheer teams is a way to interact with different groups of people. "It is a great experience to be a part of two different teams. I like competing with the All Stars, but I also enjoy cheering for my school," she said.

The 13 years of hard work and dedication, senior Robin Czerwinski given this award in May 2008 for completing 65 hours of community service at Mott's Children's Hospital. "I like being on the team because we always stick together," Czerwinski said.

Senior James Kremer

I've been playing piano for 12 years. I play mostly classical but have recently started working on newer, alternative stuff like coldplay and five for fighting. One of my favorite songs to play is "Right Now" by Van Halen.

In my opinion

Students from Northville, Novi and Livonia Stevenson joined together to help support the cause at the Niemann-Pick C1 benefit dance. These students shared their opinions of how the schools interacted.

"It was the same feel, just with new faces."

— Senior Mikhail Sokolov

"There were a bunch of people I didn't know, but they all danced together anyway."

— Junior Aarti Kamat

"It was a lot of fun because I got to hang out with different people."

— Junior Eliza Wood

"It was good. There was no tension between the different schools."

— Senior Jonathan Bardsley

Niemann Pick

Affecting 1 in 150,000 people, this rare disease causes children to forget things they have learned, such as walking, talking and eating. Harmful amounts of cholesterol build up in the child's cells and attack the brain, liver and spleen. Symptoms of this disease include seizures, lack of coordination and breathing difficulties.

Online hope

Along with taking donations and planning the dance, creating the website www.hopeforaaditya.ning.com with her mother was one way senior Shama Lakdawala helped to fund research for Niemann Pick. "It is a non-profit organization. People can go on the website to the PayPal and donate money to the cause," Lakdawala said. "We've made over $2,000 so far with these donations."

Hope for Aaditya

Everyone says that we never have enough dances, so I thought it would be a good way to raise money for a cause," senior Shama Lakdawala said. (Bottom left) "My cousin has Niemann Pick disease, type C1," Lakdawala said, "and he is only four." Niemann Pick affects brain cells, creating muscular and physiological problems, such as seizures and dementia. "It is known as the child's Alzheimers," Lakdawala said.

(Top right) Along with decorating, Lakdawala explained that planning the dance was a lot of work and took a lot of preparation. She had help from her friends junior Marissa D'Agostino and sophomore Michaela Keady. "We made 40 posters and drove to Stevenson every day after school pushing the principal to allow us to post posters and pass out flyers," D'Agostino said. "Some Novi girls collected loose change at lunch, which added up to around $120."

(Top left) Two Novi students volunteered to DJ the dance. They played a variety of music, including rap, pop and techno. "It was really crowded, and a lot of the people were from our school. The DJ was really funny and danced all crazy. They played a lot of techno music," senior Madelyn Bielecki said.

(Bottom right) "I think it is cool that we can raise money for a cause and still have fun at the same time," senior Casey Schipper said. "I really hope that the money helps fund the research that is needed for this disease." The dance was a success according to Lakdawala, and the proceeds exceeded her goal. She hoped to raise $3,000 in ticket sales, and the final total ended up surpassing $5,000.

TENNIS: Northville seeks state bid

By Jeff Thesen
RECORD SPORTS WRITER

Finish in the top two or garner 18 points.

Northville tennis head coach Matt Stetson doesn't care what happens, just that it happens at the Division I regional meet Friday just up the road in Flint.

Stetson said, "We were just kind of hopeful and playing with nothing to lose."

"This year, we have an added bit of confidence, which should help. Last year, making it to the state, we know we can hang with just round anybody. That confidence has gone a long way to help us this year."

WIAA champs

The Mustangs have roared through the WIAA, but that is nothing new. They've won it a few times and won the championship again this year Saturday.

But winning the league is only one step of where the Mustangs want to be.

It's all in the hawk

Soccer team finishes with success

The hawk builds character," senior Nicholas Kolbow said, describing the new hairstyle of the boys varsity soccer team.

With this energy and unity, the team took the titles of both district and regional champions.

Senior Jeffrey Cheslik described the feeling of achievement: "We left our mark on the school." The team finished with a winning season and continued their success all the way to state semi-finals. Kolbow (bottom right) steals the ball, blocking the opposing player. The team closed the year earning the title of third best team in the state.

(Bottom left) Junior Abdul-Latif Alashe races an opponent to the ball and prepares for a pass. Alashe described the characteristics of this noted hairstyle; "Wind-resistant and aerodynamic, it motivated us and gave us energy." He also shared his goals for next year: "We plan on winning states with the mohawks!"

(Bottom center) Sophomore Anthony Aquinto sprints for the ball, battling the Plymouth forward. Aquinto related the varsity team's success to their fauxhawks: "They were the only team who had their heads shaven. It was cool because it showed off their unity," he said.

The junior varsity team closed their season with a winning record.

(Center) Freshman Graham Smith, goes in for a kick. Smith shared his feelings on the force needed for soccer: "We practice hard and play hard."

Through energy and motivation, the boys soccer teams worked hard and drove towards achievement, Alashe added. Cheslik agreed, adding that the team stayed dedicated and unified throughout the season.

'Fall'eyball

Volleyball season moves to fall

This year, the volleyball season moved to the fall. The girls said they were a little apprehensive going into it, but in the end, they found the change to be beneficial.

(Top left) Sophomore Kelly Maise spikes the ball in a game against Wayne Memorial. Maise was the only sophomore to make the varsity team this season. "At first, it was kind of tough because I didn't know anyone, but I made friends pretty fast," Maise said. Maise found the season change to be advantageous. "I liked it because it wasn't cold," Maise said. She added that she is optimistic that the team will do even better next year.

"I loved having volleyball in the fall," freshman Danielle Borthwick said. (Center left) Borthwick plays libero in a home game for the freshmen team. The libero can go in for anyone on the back line at any time, and it doesn't count as a substitution.

huddles with Coach Kary Couchman before the game. The freshmen ended their season as division champions. "I think the girls played very well this season," Couchman said, beaming with pride.

(Top right) Senior Allison Holmes sets the ball for senior Jamie Cotrone. Cotrone said she had mixed feelings towards the season change. "It was bad because we had two-a-days in the summer, but it is nice to have a break in the winter," she explained.

Junior Elizabeth Foucher said she was all for the season change. "We no longer have Christmas or midwinter break during our season, and our club seasons are at the same time as the rest of the country, which helps with scouting," she added.

Senior Krysta Cicala, setter for the varsity team, serves in a match against Wayne Memorial. She said her volleyball experience goes as far back as second grade. just have to drain everything out," sophomore Brett Smith said, explaining how he prepares himself before JV football games.

(Top left) Smith follows the path cleared by freshman Devon Pearson in the JV's game against Plymouth. "I just close my eyes before the game," Pearson said, agreeing with his backfield partner. "I don't play around. I just think about what I got to do."

They learned that it is important for every part of the team to be concentrated on reaching their goals. "We always kept our focus, and the coaches always kept their focus; nobody wanted to lose," Pearson added.

(Center left) Senior quarterback William Chew throws a pass against Canton. "I just sit quietly," he said. "I do everything the same every game."

Players said they felt it was their duty to their school to win. "We had to play hard to prove something every week," Chew explained. "You can't let past games bring you down."

Working hard to prepare themselves for games was a common belief among players. "Being prepared for the week to come is very important because you get that initial momentum," senior runningback Andrew Devine said.

(Top right) Devine weaves his way through a collapsed offensive line, looking to evade would-be tacklers. "You can usually tell how a game will be by the first play," he added.

Lining up across from opposing quarterbacks, he could be quite the imposing figure, his teammates said. "Hasse is huge, just huge," junior Joshua Pratt said. Throughout the nine games of the varsity season, Hasse amassed 184 tackles, the second best total in school history and the highest total in the state. "I don't think about that stuff," Hasse said. "I just go out there and try to make plays."

Sideline vs. competitive

Senior Jasmin Caverly

Q: What is the main difference?
A: Competitive is a lot more serious than sideline.

Q: Which in your opinion is more work?
A: Competitive takes a lot more time and is harder.

Q: Which season do you enjoy more?
A: Probably sideline because it is a lot more fun.

Stunt and tumble

Each year, all three teams go to a stunt and tumble camp before the summer. At this camp, the freshman and junior varsity teams learn the basics of stunting and all levels of tumbling. The varsity team learns more advanced stunts and pyramids. Each team is assigned a private coach from the camp's staff. This coach helps the teams with individual questions and spots the tumbling and stunting to make sure the team can perform these safely. "Our private coach this year was really strict. She was really loud," senior Claudia Hernandez-Minvielle said. "Every year when we go to camp, it gets harder. We have to learn a lot of new material and perform it at the end of camp," she added.

Cheerleaders pull through tough season

Varsity team (top left) sets up a stunt with all four stunt groups at one of their football games. "This season has been one to remember because we grew a lot as a team through extra conditioning at our tumbling practices," senior Jasmin Caverly said. "We were pushed a lot harder this season, and it really paid off when we performed at the pep rally. It made the season worth all the work we put in."

(Bottom left) The freshman team performs a pyramid stunt at half-time. "This was my first season on cheer at the high school, and it was a really great experience. We had a lot of fun, and one of my favorite times was our team dinner at Genitti's," freshman Emily Hartman said.

The girls said they bonded while working to achieve their goals their first year in high school. "Our team motto has always been, You can't possibly stick the stunt when thinking of all the possible ways it could fall," Hartman said.

Senior Jonathan Zurek displayed his desire to win this season. "Zurek has made a transformation. He's always been a good runner, but he really stepped up as the key leader of this team," junior Armen Changelian said. "He runs with his heart," junior Joseph Mifsud said. Zurek finished first on the team at the state meet. "I felt accomplished to be first, but the other guys put the same amount of work in," Zurek said.

Match mishaps

"Every player is our team's spirit."

— Sophomore Melvin Joseph

As the boys varsity tennis team prepared for their big matches, they encountered several setbacks. The team, however, said they have learned to make the best of these situations.

"Our number one doubles player [senior Graham McHenry] got a concussion the day before the state tournament," senior Alexander Shashlo said. "Then he came out and played the best match of his life."

(Top left) Senior Matthew Mehil winds up during a conference match. "Matt is such a character," sophomore Nicholas Kalweit said about his teammate. "He really picks the team up when we're not playing as great as we could be, and that really helps us perform to the best of our ability."

sports. "This year he had to choose between tennis and football," sophomore Stephen Irvine explained. "But he chose tennis. He plays a million different sports."

(Bottom left) Senior Andrew Mills practices with McHenry, his doubles partner. "Both of them dominate the entire team," Shashlo said. "They pretty much destroyed our competition at conferences."

(Bottom right) Sophomore Timothy Wasielewski plays a match with the varsity team, which he has been on since his freshman year. "He's so quiet and shy," sophomore Melvin Joseph said. "But he's so good."

"Meghan Kanya works hard off season and during the season by always leading her lane, along with leading her team. She has a great determination and always provides a good example for the team as a captain," junior Jessica Weber said. "This season was a lot of fun with it being my senior year and having a new coach," Kanya said. "We became closer as a team and swam well because of it. There are no other people like swimmers, and I am going to miss everyone on the team so much."

With secret swimmer and sleepovers, the swim team found unique ways to get to know each other. "We had mock elections at one of our sleepovers, and we had over 50 categories," junior Kara Folas said. "We also had a karaoke tournament, and each grade always does a skit, which were mostly about our coaches."

One team member took home a major win for the girls this season. Senior Lannis Smith earned the honor of placing seventh in the district. Riders are placed depending on the number of points accumulated from placing in their classes. Smith ended up with 70 points overall. Reflecting on the season, she responded with her team's motto: "Meet us at the barn; it's going down."

Q&A

Senior Katherine Kowal

Team assistants help riders with grooming, cleaning and show preparation.

Q: How did you get the job?
A: I talked to the captain, Lauren Scheer, about helping.

Q: What did your job include?
A: Cleaning boots, holding the horses and keeping the stable clean.

Q: What was your favorite part?
A: Watching the shows.

Class act

Different riders have different styles

Sophomore Eleanor Feltner (top center) rides her horse, Ace of Hearts, in the Hunt Seat class. In this class, she is a hunter and jumper. Hunters are judged on manners, and jumpers are judged on how quickly the horse can complete a series of jumps with the fewest errors, known as faults.

Feltner has been riding for eight years, but this is her first year riding for the high school.

Feltner said she thought the team was very successful. "I like being with everyone; it's a fun group of people. We always are very supportive of each other," she said.

(Bottom left) Stoker leads junior Stacy Anderson over a jump during a competition. Anderson has been riding for seven years, and this is her second year riding for the team.

Anderson rides in both the Hunt Seat and Western classes. Western judges walking and jogging, and Hunt Seat judges jumping, as well as walking and jogging.

"We had a really good team effort," Anderson said. "I liked the team activities this year because they were a lot of fun. We had burrough, flag and relay races with our horses."

(Bottom right) Senior Lauren Scheer practices speed with her horse, Kim. She has been riding for 12 years, including four for the high school.

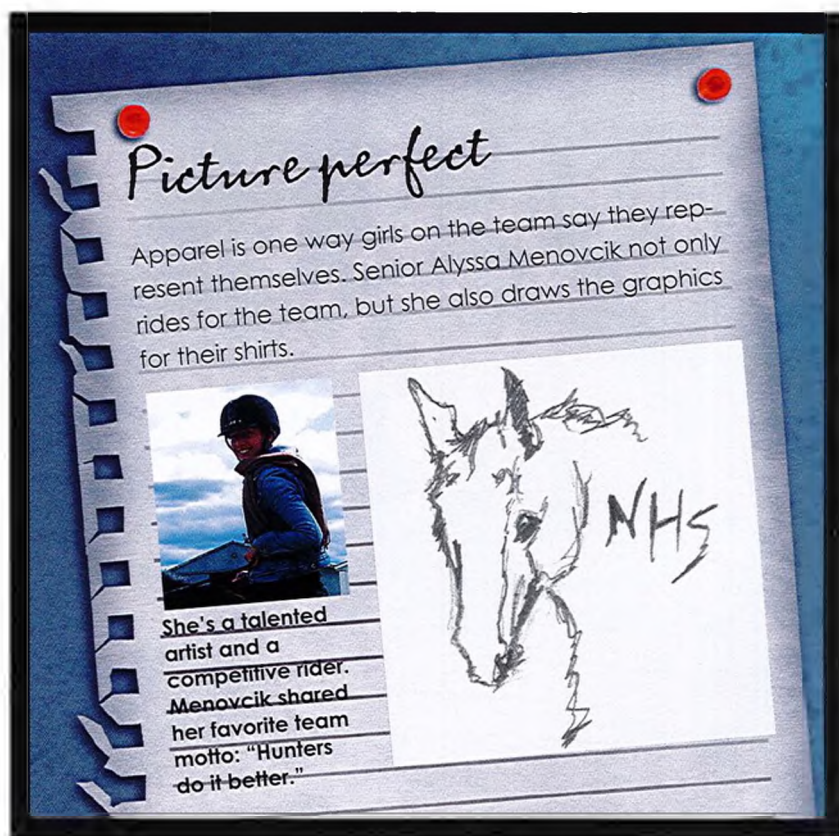

Scheer rides Dressage style, which includes being able to show a judge control of a horse.

Scheer said, "The meets usually start at eight and finish at nine or ten at night. They are really long days, but I love the people on the team. One of my favorite places we go to is this hotel in Shiawassee, Mich. We always have a lot of fun there."

Practice is key

"We practice our routine eight times every practice."

—Sophomore Haley Johnson

The JV and varsity pom squads both ended their seasons by placing at the high-kick competition. Although the season was a success, the pommers said it didn't come easy. It took hours of practice and hard work.

(Top left) Sophomores Rachael Ambler and Julianne Pitcher perform their kick line at the 2007 highkick competition. "I love being able to show everyone the routine we've been working so hard on for so long. Competing is a lot of fun," Pitcher said. This is Pitcher's second season on JV pom and her first year as team captain.

(Below) The JV pom squad shows off their toe touches at Eastern Michigan University during a competition in which they placed fourth. "We practiced our routine eight times every practice to make sure that we had our routine down perfectly. It's a lot of hard work, but in the end, it's all worth it," sophomore Haley Johnson said.

The JV team wasn't the only squad working hard. "We practice Monday through Thursday and sometimes more when we have competitions," sophomore Grace Ackerman said, describing the schedule of her first year on varsity.

"I like having another group of friends that are there for you," Ackerman said with a smile. "We're kind of like our own family."

Haley Goldberg

"My first season on pom has been amazing" Goldberg said. "It will be an experience I will never forget."

Q: What is your favorite part about pom?
A: Getting all the cute clothes and performing.

Q: What is something you and your team do to bond?
A: Before a competition, we braid each others' hair.

Q: What is something you do to get pumped up before you compete?
A: We yell fire-up chants and cheers and try to get fired up.

Zip-Bond

"You look like a fool, but it's OK."

— Senior Eve Avdoulos

Even though golf is an individual sport, the girls team shared a tight bond with each other, different from any other season.

It started off with a fun-filled trip up north, where team members said the relationships grew greater in the midst of all the added fun. "We were in Traverse City, and we decided to play zip bong. It's just a game where you are not allowed to speak or show your teeth. It was a good bonding experience," junior Alicia Weber said.

(Center left) Senior Kirsten Freisen pitches towards the green. "I think we're more tightly bonded this year than other years. We all have the same personalities. We're all very humorous and fun," Freisen said.

(Bottom right) Walking the course alongside a opponent, Weber explains the absence of pump-up cheers before matches. "We wouldn't really do them because I thought it was bad luck," Weber said.

(Top right) Junior Kelly Hill tees off during a match. "We encourage each other to do the best we can before each match," she said.

(Bottom left) Sophomores Chelsea Weber, Bernstein and Caitlin Darish warm up together on the course before their match. "We have funny conversations to make us calm, and we just think about having a good time because it gets us focused," Darish said.

By the end of the season, the girls accomplished many goals as a team, one of them the bond they shared together.

Q&A

Senior Mathew Cassidy

Senior Mathew Cassidy discussed his inspirations and approach to the game.

Q: Which professional do you look up to the most?
A: Kobe (Bryant) because he's exciting and the best player.

Q: What are your personal goals for this season?
A: I try to help motivate my teammates.

Q: What are your goals for the team?
A: We need to go deep in the district playoffs.

"We're unlike any other team."

— Senior Gregory Hasse

Despite losing captain and prolific scorer Alvin Storrs to graduation, the returning Mustangs have responded with a strong season.

(Top left) Senior Martins Trautmanis drives to the hoop for a tough shot during a tough season. "We started off slow, but we really came together as a team," Trautmanis said. "We have a chance at districts."

(Bottom left) The Mustangs' recent success was due in no small part to senior co-captain, Gregory Hasse. "I have to be a leader on and off the court," Hasse humbly admitted. "We're unlike any other team. There's no pep talks, but I still try to lead," he added.

(Center right) Senior co-captain, Michael Rogers also took a leadership role this season. "I try to lead by example and vocally," Rogers said. The team still retains their humor, according to Rogers, however, "We all dance before the games."

(Bottom right) Senior David Burke passes up court, a sign of the improving teamwork. "We're doing good," he said. "We're better at finishing games." Strong team chemistry led the varsity to an 11-10 record.

(Top right) Freshman Spencer Devine of the freshman team is also enjoying a fair amount of success this season. "We're less than .500 but we ended well," Devine said. He added, "I'm almost averaging a double-double."

With such a notable season, many of the varsity Mustangs said they are hopeful about their chances at winning districts. "We can go deep," Rogers said. "We had a good season."

Burke agreed. "I give us two thumbs up," he said with a smile.

Coach shift aids girls' performances

The girls basketball teams established strong bonds with each other and their coaches that they said ultimately improved their performances.

(Top right) Senior Allison Holmes said the new assistant varsity coach, Kristy Bilbie-Bekius, has really improved her game. "We're always laughing and keeping the mood light," Holmes said. "Kristy really supports us in that aspect, and it helps us perform at our best abilities."

(Top left) Freshman Megan Gertley prepares to score from behind a defensive Livonia Churchill player. "The junior varsity team has definitely improved, with an almost undefeated season," senior Sarah Stern said. "They got a new assistant coach too, and I think it has really benefited them in their games and practices."

Whether they had to adapt to new leadership or not, all three teams said they benefited from the bonds they formed.

Tools to success

"Wrestling is 90 percent mental and 10 percent physical." — Senior Evan Bentley

Senior captain Jonathan D'Anna takes his position as he prepares for the match (top left). "This season was a lot tougher than previous seasons because I got injured way more," D'Anna said. Not only did the season bring injuries, it also brought memories. "I'm really going to miss everyone on the team, being a captain and the thrill of the competition," D'Anna said.

(Center left) Senior captain Brian Bagian gets a grip on his opponent while ending his match. "Making weight this season was really hard because I had to drop more than I ever had to before," Bagian said. "It definitely paid off in the end. I did really well and won a lot of matches," he said.

get rid of some of the stress. "To settle the team down, each meet I bring beef jerky because everyone likes it, and it calms us down," Mantay said.

(Top right) The referee raises senior captain Evan Bentley's hand, signifying his win. "The crowd goes nuts, and I feel like a champion," Bentley said. Victories, however, never come without hard work. "Coach always says 'Hard work beats talent when talent's not working hard.' You need to be mentally tough; wrestling is 90 percent mental and 10 percent physical," Bentley explained.

(Bottom right) Freshman Ian Stirton faces his opponent while beginning a match. "As a first-year wrestler, it's all about improvement," Stirton said. Stirton said he improved during the season. "The first few losses were tough, but after that, I became stronger and did much better," he added.

"Brian [Bagian] is a really good wrestler and recently received his 100th career win," sophomore Daniel Amaro said. "He got first place at conferences and districts this season." Not only is Bagian a talented wrestler, he's also a team leader. "Whenever we lose, he gives us speeches to motivate us," Amaro said. This season was the team's best since 2001. "I try to make sure everyone is always working hard, and we did better than everyone was anticipating," Bagian said. "I'm proud of what I've done," he said, "but there is always room for improvement." Bagian said he plans to wrestle in college.

Three's company

"We're more brothers than we are cousins," junior Jack Bentley said. Bentley wrestles with his older cousin, Evan, and his younger cousin, Adam. "The whole family comes to watch us at our meets," Bentley said. The boys help each other out with their wrestling. "Evan has helped us a lot this season. Whenever we lose a match, we try to make each other feel better, and we support each other all the time," he said.

Coming back from an All-American performance in 2007, senior captain Broderick Blickle picked up right where he left off. "Brody Blickle," junior Alexander Maloure explained, "is a Northville swimming god and definitely the best swimmer in the conference." Blickle led the team over rival Brother Rice, also performing exceptionally during the Mustang's second place finish at the conference meet.

The dive team also had a strong season, led by the performances of their freshmen. "I definitely improved," freshman Ryan Trotter said after the end of his first season as part of the team. "I'm looking forward to next year."

Swimmers refuse to bow under pressure

Compiling a record such as the swim and dive team has over the past two years sets the bar high and puts a target on a team's back. Swimmers, though, refused to succumb to the pressure of this weight upon their shoulders.

Instead they showed their strength, taking in stride something so many others would crumple beneath. What sets swimmers apart is that they use this so-called crushing burden to their advantage; they embrace it.

(Top) Senior Broderick Blicke breaks the surface of the water, gasping for air as he swims the butterfly. An All-American team captain, Blicke led the Mustangs to a second place finish in the conference.

(Center right) Junior Alexander Malloure swims freestyle as the third leg of a relay. Malloure was part of the boys conference champion 400-meter freestyle relay team, along with Blickle. "There was no doubt in my mind that if I got it even, Brody would win," Malloure said, explaining his relay team's performance at the conference meet. "And we did win."

The season was host to many victories, including an early season win against rival Brother Rice High School, then the highest ranked team in the state.

Although the team failed to win the conference championship for the first time in years, it is too early to eliminate their confidence from the equation. "We've been slapping around the rest of the league for three years," Mal-loure said. "And next year will be no different."

Sophomore Michelle Steslicki made great improvements this season. Even though Steslicki ended her season with a knee injury, which prevented her from performing vault, she stuck it out. "It gave me more time to work on my other events," Steslicki explained. Although her vault helped increase her all-around score, she said she stepped up and worked on the other events to help her team.

Varsity hockey shows off their skills

Snipe show" cannot be defined by just one individual or be categorized by just one goal.

The term originated from the varsity boys hockey team and can commonly be heard during practices, games and even in the halls.

Senior captain Jordan Duff explained, "We give 110 percent all the time, every time."

(Top right) Senior captain Timothy Hohl skates past his defender and takes the puck towards the net. "When it comes to a snipe show, I skate down the ice, cut one way, go to the middle, shoot bar down, right side and top shelf peanut butter," Hohl said.

follows through on a slap shot. "Our team is ranked high, and we won our division," Riehl said.

(Bottom right) Junior Theodore Keranen protects his goal and prepares his stance as the opposing team comes towards him with the puck. "It's all about the will to win, and it helps to have a lot of team chemistry," Keranen said, explaining how the team achieved their victories.

Supporting the team and all of their successes, the fans filled the bleachers of the rink to cheer them on. "It feels good to have support from our fans, and I'll miss playing in front of the whole school," Riehl said.

(Center left) Senior Michael Moerman stands by his opponent and awaits the drop of the puck. "We've had a very successful season; it was fun hanging out with the guys on the team," Moerman said.

"I'll miss going to practice all the time and hanging out with my friends," Hohl said. "I'm really proud of our success."

Varsity team splits in two

This season promised to be the start of new beginnings for the girls hockey team. Instead of having varsity and JV teams, the varsity split into A and B teams.

(Top right) Junior Morgan McGuirk rests on the bench in between plays. "The team division still keeps both teams close, and it gives B team more chances to play better teams," McGuirk said.

Being placed on B team has been a good experience for McGuirk. "I have made a lot of new friends. A is better than B, but B is doing really well this year, and the freshmen are amazing," she said.

(Bottom right) Junior Molly Eley fights her opponent for the puck. For having new teams, the girls said they have still managed to stay close. "The teams practice separately, but we are still supportive of each other," Eley said. "We go to each others' games and cheer each other on by making posters."

(Bottom left) Senior Elizabeth Nichols takes a breakaway down the ice. "I still think that the Varsity B team is JV. The teams are both great, and I have many friends on Varsity B," Nichols said. "The name really doesn't matter because they are better than other JV teams and need to play varsity teams for the challenge."

(Center left) At the beginning of a play, freshman Morgan Malloy battles for the puck. "My favorite memory this year was playing Regina and switching sticks with Zazo," Malloy said. "We played with our backhand for two periods."

(Top left) Junior Genna Guibord sets up for a save. She said the teams are supportive of each other, and everyone always has a good time. "I had some good memories at the hockey sleepovers," Guibord said.

Junior Morgan McGuirk is on her way. "At first, I was sad to leave my friends and stay on the B team, but I've made a lot of new friends," McGuirk said. She had a strong season with 15 goals, 11 assists and only eight penalty minutes. "This is her third year playing, and she has improved greatly," Coach Scott Corless said. "She is applying what she has learned, and her practice is really paying off. She is destined for Varsity A."

For the Jan. 26 game against Bloomfield, Varsity B went full out to support Varsity A. Before the game, the girls got together and made posters for every player.

Junior Captain Angela Ramsey has been on the bowling team since her freshman year. "Angela is one of our best bowlers," senior captain Erica Frogner said. Ramsey came in third place at the All-County Farmington Tournament this season. "Bowling is fun because it's a serious sport, but it's not too intense. Bowling is more about just having fun," Ramsey said, explaining why she enjoys it. She said she is excited to bowl again next year.

New addition

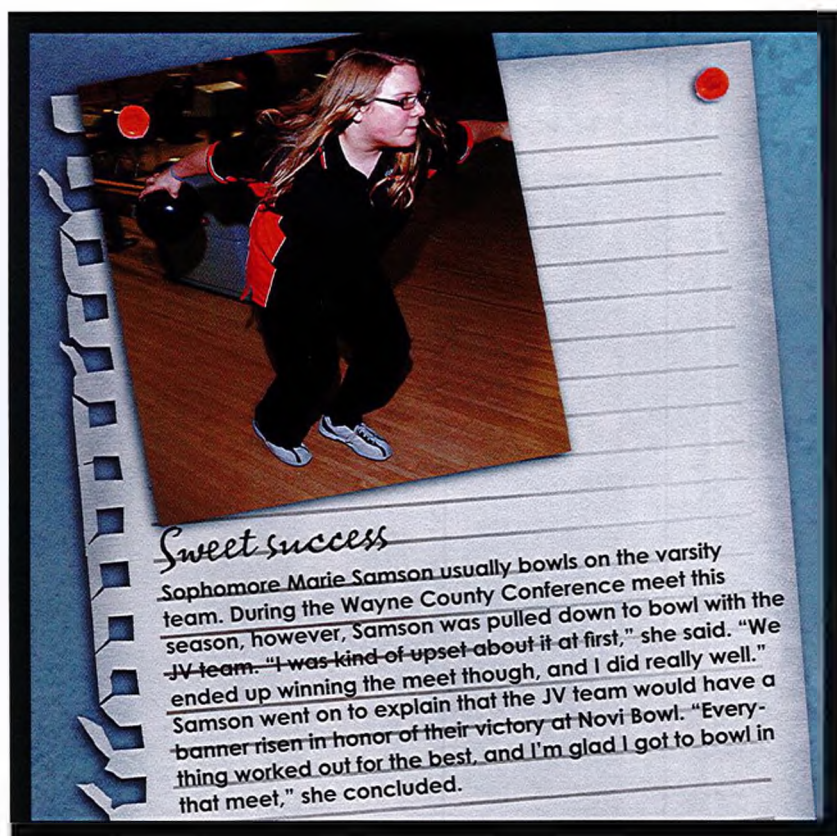

Junior Whitney
Gusfa

The girls had some new additions to the team this year. One of these girls was junior Whitney Gusfa. "I think I've improved quite a lot this season, despite a few bad scores here and there," Gusfa said. "I'm so glad I joined the bowling team this year. I've made a load of new friends. I'm sad to see the season end, and I am definitely joining again next year." Gusfa said she hopes to make the varsity bowling team next season.

Bowlers look forward to next season

The sound of balls crashing into pins is not unfamiliar to the members of the bowling team. After yet another successful season, the bowlers said they are looking ahead to next season.

(Top left) Senior captain Erica Frogner winds up to send the ball down the lane. Frogner feels she did well this season, and she has enjoyed every minute of it. "As a captain, I try to make [bowling] fun for everyone on the team," she explained. "Everyone becomes really close, and it's the most fun thing ever."

gets ready to fling the ball down her lane. Shelly has been a member of the team since her freshman year. "Bowling is a great sport," Shelly said. "My favorite part of the bowling season was driving to and from meets; it was good team bonding." Shelly said the team did very well this year, despite the loss of some key bowlers.

(Center right) Junior Sarah Marilley approaches her lane, her smile proof that bowling is all about having a good time. Marilley improved throughout the season and said she is excited to have even more fun with the team next year as a senior.

While underclassmen might be expected to play lesser roles on teams, one of the highest-scoring individual performers on the figure skating team was, indeed, a freshman. Q&A

Meghan McGillis

Freshman Meghan McGillis talked about her first year as part of the figure skating team.

Q: What did you expect before you joined the high school team?

A: I expected a lot of good skaters and a lot of fun girls.

Q: How do you feel with your sister on the team?

A: I can ask her for help because she is always there.

Q: What's the hardest part about being a figure skater?

A: You're all alone. You just have to go out and perform your element by yourself.

Skaters confidently determined lis prepares herself to go into a jump during a competition. "Going out by yourself is really nerveracking," McGillis explained. "You can't believe that it's your time. You just have to try and make that feeling go away before your element starts."

Skaters have to be determined to complete successful elements; the undying belief in their own success is paramount. "Confidence is really important," Love said. "Because if you don't think you can land a jump, you probably can't."

Dear Ms. Handman, Amy Badito and Michael Collins:

Thank you for the 2007 High School Yearbook distributed at the June 12, 2007 Board meeting. The Look (2007) like which was sent at the Senior All Night Party is a very appropriate one. The yearbook is outstanding. I had the opportunity to review it and was impressed with the design, pictures and stories that captured events during the successful 2006-07 school year.

I appreciate the effort taken to edit the High School athletic teams. That is a laborious way of handling that. We are honored to receive the yearbook and to recognize the quality that goes into this book. The amount of time and effort that staff and students put forth is noted and appreciated.

Enjoy your summer. Looking forward to future yearbooks.

Sincerely,

Back to school

"Registration signals the end of summer and the beginning of the long haul," junior Brian Earle lamented.

(Center left) Students return to school and stand in line, but there's more to registration than turning in forms. "I like getting my picture taken and seeing how everyone changed over the summer," sophomore Kelsey Olinik said.

Olinik added that the registration process is more relaxing than freshman orientation was.

ART

AUTHENTIC CREATIONS.

1. Senior Alyssa Marcangelo puts the finishing touches on a drawing to be entered in the Scholastics Art Competition.

She and other artists shared their inspirations. 2. "I wanted to play with shadows and experiment with oils," Marcangelo said.

3. [On sketching her sculpture.] "I just erased and re-drew outlines until I liked what I got." — Sophomore Elaine Mitra

4. "It started out as a self portrait, but I wanted it to have a more surreal look since I was using a new type of paper." — Junior Chelsea Turner

5. "I've always liked dealing with cartoons. I wanted to show the manipulation of a character without actually making it move." — Senior Stephen Gallant

6. "The great teachers I've had, Mr. Hoffman and Ms. Miller, have pushed me further to learn and have given me inspiration." — Senior Jessica Grzych

7. "I wanted to draw exactly what I saw, and that's why there are details like people reflected in the bottle." — Junior Joy Chen

8. "I wanted to play with color theory, portraying emotion." — Junior Emily Grant

9. "I was getting sugar for my tea, and I realized the cup was festive, and it would make a good holiday picture." — Senior Elizabeth Nash

10. "My mom; she is very enthusiastic about everything I do." — Junior Gregory Oldham

11. "It's a mix of my own style with Andy Warhol. I also took different pop images in my life from my backpack and applied it onto the board." — Senior Seth Weddle

12. "I made it shades of blue to show the melancholy of vanity." — Senior Erin Lindholm

13. "I was inspired by a spiderweb necklace that I saw." — Senior Samantha Naszradi

14. "My little brother Trevor is my favorite model because he's very expressive." — Senior Joy Lerner

BROADCASTING

BRAND NEW.

Beginning with the switch-over from tape decks to digital, the broadcasting system went through a makeover as extreme as any reality show, according to senior Justin Ulrich.

Senior Michael Wagner said that not only were the computers and Apple products in the studio this year easier to use, but the class as a whole communicated well also.

"I like that we get to deliver a show to over 2,000 people," Ulrich added. "I'm really going to miss it after this year."

According to Ulrich, the broadcasting students have worked hard this year to improve the morning announcements.

ANALYZING LIT AND FILM BROADENING PERSPECTIVE.

As it can be gathered from its title, this class is about analyzing novels and films, but according to senior Veronica Juan, "There's more to it than meets the eye."

"The projects link themes to movies, and our analyses relate movies I never thought were relatable," Juan said.

Senior Michelle Steiner added that "Mr. Bowen and his amazing analytical skills are intellectually stimulating."

"Mr. Bowen's funny stories make the class more interesting," Juan agreed.

Whether it's the deep, philosophical nature of the class or the teacher, the numbers are up for ALF, making it one of the most popular English electives.

AP ENGLISH

CURIOUS ADVENTURERS.

"iSearch allows students the ultimate independent research project. They can risk being lunch for cougars, like Robin Czerwinski and her friends," teacher Christopher Cronin said.

Czerwinski's project, which explored human connection to the environment, involved camping in the woods in this debris hut shelter. Seniors Rebecca Soyster, Caitlin Northcutt, Jacquelyn Turner and Maria Schneider joined her on the adventure.

WRITING CENTER CHALLENGING CURRICULUM.

Looking through the Writing Center window, it may not be immediately obvious how much the all-girl staff, who said they are often buzzing on a sugar high, do.

"We actually do a lot more stuff than people think," senior Clara Fecht said.

Besides the normal comma checking, spelling changes and eliminating to-be verbs, there are a lot of things that go on behind the scenes.

"Every day is a new experience," senior Jessica Horowitz said.

Reading novels, writing essays and logs, advertisting for the Writing Center, partying with the teachers and eating excessive amounts of candy are just a few of the things it takes to be part of this group.

STRATFORD TRIP

CANADIAN EXPERIENCE.

Take a break. Stop, breathe, and leave the pressures of school behind for just one day.

(Bottom right) The annual trip to Stratford, Canada allows students, like sophomore Morgan Meinicke-Hamilton, to enjoy the written word in a more interactive atmosphere while still giving them the freedom to experience the culture of this town in their own ways.

Eric Ostrowski and Molly Ladhoff for an ethnic lunch.

This year's performance was to Harper Lee's "To Kill A Mockingbird." Although it was not a Shakespearean play, sophomore Madison Owen said she enjoyed it. "My favorite part was watching the girl who played Scout," she said.

Senior Kaila Adam added, "I liked the second act better than the first because it kept my interest. There was more conflict and action."

Since all English 9 students read this story, it allowed comparison between the book, movie and play. Owen said, "I really liked reading the book since it gave you more detail, but the play was my favorite mode because I liked seeing everything come to life."

by Joy Lerner

FRANÇAIS

DELICIEUX! One great way to explore another culture is by sampling its cuisine. Since the French are known for their food, students certainly enjoyed learning about this culture.

(Below) During the holiday season, French teacher Suzanne Murray's French II class experimented with making their own yule logs.

These cakes are traditionally taken to parties, but in this project, students were able to enjoy them in class — with a few of their own touches.

"Yule logs are supposed to be made with cake and rum, but I used Ho-hos instead," sophomore Lindsey Funfgeld said.

(Above) After teachers judged the cakes based on taste and presentation, Funfgeld and her classmates sampled each other's creations.

In the end, students said their appreciation of the French culture grew.

ESPAÑOL

¡EXCELENTE! Spicy, mild, chunky, smooth, red or yellow: All of these adjectives can be used to describe salsa.

(Bottom right) Driven by the promise of extra credit, teacher Suzanne Murray's Spanish II class brought ingredients to mix into salsa.

(Top right) Sophomore Scott Vandenberg adds the onions to his mixture. He said he used traditional ingredients, like tomatoes, green pepper and vinegar, because they taste good together.

(Top left) Junior Emily Leary also went for the classic taste. As she stirred in the cilantro, she shared her inspiration. "Mine is a homemade recipe from a friend," she said. Since Leary likes to cook and bake, she said she enjoyed this hands-on experience.

a nontraditional route for their ingredients. Sophomore Paige Wilson used her mother's recipe for black bean mango salsa. Leary said she liked Wilson's salsa because the lime gave it a delectable zing.

(Center left) As the students taste their classmates' mixtures, Wilson provided her insight into which was the most interesting salsa. "I liked the strawberry one because the fruits in it gave it a juicy taste instead of a traditionally spicy one," she said.

Sophomore Hannah Coulter, the creator of the strawberry salsa, said her inspiration came from the "salsa gods of the internet."

Salsa Day added variety to the Spanish II schedule, much like the unique ingredients added to the variety of salsas. "I like trying all the other salsas and seeing what others make," Vandenberg said.

DEUTSCH

FANTASTISCH!

Heads snap up as students hear junior Nathan Hrivnak's dolphin impression coming from the TV speaker.

In addition to the standardized, written portion of the final, German students also have to create an original video to prove their speaking abilities.

"The German kids are clever, and they usually get really creative," sophomore Steven Chesney said.

Juniors Emily Carroll and Hrivnak made a voiceover to the "Spongebob Squarepants" episode "Schwambob" for their video. In this episode, Spongebob finds swear words on the side of a trash can. However, instead of voicing the words, Hrivnak bleeped them out with his dolphin impression.

"The Spongebob video was the funniest one I've seen this year," Chesney said.

Other students take the video project in another direction. "Students are encouraged not to do anything too illegal," according to Chesney, "but once in a while, one slips through the cracks."

"There was one incident where a group of students drove up to McDonald's at night and ordered in German at the drive-thru. They persisted, disregarding the distress of the poor workers, and the police showed up," Chesney said.

"Despite warnings from [teachers Hubert Rast and Karen Motz], students continue to push the limits of their videos for humor, and those tend to be the funniest," Chesney added.

CONSUMER MATHEMATICS

GAINING SKILLS

Students in Consumer Mathematics don't have to wonder when they'll ever need to use the material they're learning.

"It applies math to everyday life," senior Lauren Skalski said about the class, which is designed to help students learn to use math in the everyday world. The content of the course includes concepts such as loans, income tax and savings.

Another way math is applied to everyday life is through the students' involvement in the Credit Union, which is open during lunch on Mondays.

(Bottom right) Three students at a time have the opportunity to help run the Credit Union. Seniors Matthew Hartman, Kevin Kotas and James Mammano learned to complete transactions with the help of a representative from the Credit Union.

Students are responsible for balancing money drawers and entering information into a computer. Math teacher Karen Besek said this experience gives the students "experience in a simple financial service industry."

Before working at the Credit Union, students fill out an application and complete an interview. "It gives them the experience of having a job interview," Besek said.

Students who worked at the Credit Union said they gained something from the opportunity. "You learn a lot," senior Krystal Nault said. Senior Julianne Manees added, "If you don't know anything about a bank, you can learn something from doing it."

Senior Connor Morrell also had a chance to help run the Credit Union. "It was a fun experience and a really good way to learn about credit unions for the future," Morrell said.

"If I had the option to do it again, I would," Manees said.

(H) GEOMETRY

HELPFUL REVIEW

Math teacher William Kinney has found a way to prepare his students for tests; he often uses the last class period before the test to play a game of Jeopardy.

(Top right) Each row of students is a team. The first team to hold up three correct answers on their whiteboards gets the points for that question.

"If you win, you get candy," sophomore Allen Chen said.

Students said that they liked this method. "I think it's a good review technique," junior Summer Sandhu said.

Junior Kelsey Winiarski said she also finds the game helpful. "You realize how much you don't know," Winiarski said.

(H) PRE-CALC

HANDOUTS. Is there something fishy going on in Honors Precalculus? Students in the class discovered trigonometry identities in a new way.

They were given a sheet of identities, along with the first of four worksheets, which were all named after fish. The worksheets increased in difficulty and were labeled Guppy, Minnow, Barracuda and Shark.

The students could ask questions but were mostly teaching themselves. After completing a worksheet, students were given a certificate.

(Top left) Sophomore Renee Gideon said she liked having the opportunity to work in a group for this project.

Gideon also said she thought that learning this way was easy, fun and effective.

STORY PROBLEMS

INTERESTING INTRODUCTION.

"Some teachers do math warm-ups, I do story warm-ups," math teacher Lynne Tuer said.

Tuer said she likes to start her classes off with a story, so students don't have to "hit the books" right away.

"It eases you into class," senior Keegan Warner said, "It's like she's a friend telling you about stuff in her life."

Tuer tells stories about everything from her fear of spiders to picking out baby names with her husband. "She tells a lot of stories about her crazy Aunt Estelle," Warner explained.

Regardless of the topic, students said they enjoy her tales. "Tuer is the best story teller I have ever met in my entire life, and she's hilarious," senior Samantha Solomon said.

INNOVATIVE TECHNIQUE.

Math teachers have various ways of helping their students learn math concepts, formulas and principles.

Math teacher Cheri Warner has her own way of helping her Algebra II students remember the quadratic formula. Warner said she uses a song to the tune of "Pop Goes the Weasel."

"It's easier to learn it with a song," Warner explained.

(Bottom left) One student, junior David Yanagi, made up his own way to remember the formula. With the help of fellow classmate, junior Megan Sklut, Yanagi said he made up his own version of the song to the tune of Soulja Boy's "Crank Dat."

After the song was written, Yanagi said he actually got up in front of the class and did the "Soulja Boy" dance.

"They were pretty entertained," Yanagi said.

WALKIE TALKIE SCANDAL

JOKE'S ON THEM.

It all started when the trombone players, also known as the "Crooked Halos," decided that the drum majors have too many privileges, like hot chocolate at the football games and walkie talkies to communicate with each other.

"We felt that the privileges are not completely deserved for some of them, so the trombones came up with the idea to use walkie talkies to tune in on their frequencies. We used the ring-in buttons 30, 40 or 50 times," junior Ian Cartmill said.

After that, the tenors joined the scheme. "This year, they hooked up an iPod and played "Barbie Girl" over the frequency," Cartmill added.

He said he thinks the drum majors, annoyed with the random rings and songs at the most inconvenient times, never discovered the culprits, until now.

SANTA PARADE

JOLLY TRADITION. Bundled under layers of clothing, the marching band spreads holiday cheer during the annual Santa Parade.

Senior Georgina Morris said, "When we're playing, everyone's excited because they like hearing all the Christmas songs they know and love."

They lead the parade, marching to "A Christmas Special," a medley of festive songs from "Jolly Old St. Nicholas" to "Deck the Halls." by Joy Lerner

BAND-O-RAMA

KEEPING TIME.

Known by members as the "Great Band Sleepover," Band-O-Rama lasts for several hours. It features songs from every band, but those involved stay positive.

"The audience enjoys the concert, even though it's so long," sophomore Megan Milewski said.

The people attending are not the only ones who enjoy going, according to Milewski. "I think it's fun because it's reminiscent of band camp," she said.

Pokrandt for Jazz II. "I love playing the barry sax because the sound is loud and overpowering, and you can really feel the bass beat," Rohlf said.

(Center right) For senior Laura Felosak, the most exciting part is "marching into the auditorium after intermission and surprising the audience with our immense sound."

(Top right) The part of the performance unique to Band-O-Rama is that the assistant drum majors are given a chance to conduct the band. "Conducting is what I look forward to all year," Felosak said.

by Joy Lerner

DRUMLINE

LEGACIES LIVE ON.

"Getting to know the people on drumline at the beginning of the year is one of the best parts about being on drumline," sophomore Kaylee McDougall said.

However, before they are accepted into the drumline, freshmen have to go through rigorous training. This includes secret, until now, initiation activities.

Following tradition, newcomers played the game of Dizzy Stick.

"First you hold a drum stick above your head. Then, while looking up at the stick, you spin around 20 times. When finished, you have to drop the stick and jump over it," McDougall explained.

Playing down the line is another practice done by drumline.

"Playing down the line is torture for new people," McDougall said.

This test of skill involves the drum major playing a beat. Then the rest of the drumline stands in a line and repeats the beat. If someone down the line plays the incorrect beat, they start again at the beginning of the line.

"Many freshmen have trouble, since they are nervous," McDougall said.

These traditions have stood the test of time, but will this year's freshmen?

by Callan Gavigan

SOLO/ENSEMBLE

MUSIC TO MY EARS. Stage fright affects the best of singers, but for freshman Harleen Kaur, this was not an issue.

"Sometimes it can be nerve-racking [singing for a judge], but thankfully, I didn't get nervous this time," Kaur said.

Between her love for competition and pressures from her voice teacher, Kaur said she chose to perform the folk song "Danny Boy" and the Italian song "Danza."

After one semester of Varsity Choir and a few weeks of voice lessons, Kaur received an overall 1 at Solo and Ensemble.

CAROLING

MONEY MAKERS! Standing outside during a Michigan winter proves how far some choir students will go to fund their trip to New York City, the location of this year's choir tour, according to junior Adrienne Cohen.

"It's worth braving the cold because New York is going to be exciting," she said.

(Below) Seniors Daniel Ketchum and Victoria Dedes and juniors Amol Kamat and Cohen sing carols in the Northville Commons Pavillion.

Even in the frigid air, the singers managed to stay positive. "Singing at these events is fun, and people enjoy it," Dedes said.

Cohen said her favorite part was going to all the different places they sing. "My favorite event was the one at Meadowbrook because that was the nicest one," she added.

VAL-A-GRAMS

NOTHING BUT LOVE.

When class is interrupted on Valentine's Day, students know they will hear a love song to go with their candy and cards, but what they don't know about is the work that goes into making it happen.

Senior Larissa Joseph elaborated on her role: "I stuff the cards with suckers, take money, make sure people are working the booths at lunch and make sure all the Val-a-grams get to the right places," she said.

For all the monotony of sorting and stuffing, Joseph said she is proud of the fundraiser's success. "The money we raise goes to World Vision. Through this non-profit organization, we feed and clothe a child in another country for a year," she said.

In addition to the event coordinators, the singers also put a lot of effort into their performances. Juniors Yang Zhang, Janet Skrbina, Philomela Gan and sophomore Zhounan Xie spent time outside of school practicing their song, "Soymilk and Fritters." Hard work aside, students really enjoy Val-a-grams, according to Joseph.

HOLIDAY CONCERT

O' CHRISTMAS TREE.

The sweet sounds of the season rang out during the annual Holiday Choir Concert.

"I wait all year for this concert because I like the music and the whole spirit of it all," junior Valerie Juan said.

(Top left) BackBeat and TrebleMakers "Don't Wanna Wait" for Christmas as each person's inner child comes through in a combined performance.

"I liked seeing them all up there singing that song together because it showed that there was a lot of camaraderie between the groups," senior Maria Schneider said.

(Top right) Senior Elizabeth Hawkford sings her solo in "O Holy Night" for Chorale, another closely-knit choir. "The people in Chorale are really dedicated and fun to sing with," according to senior Tiffanie Yu.

(Center left) During "Bethlehemu," a Nigerian Christmas carol, the choir sways back and forth together to the beat of the djembes. "I liked doing the movements on stage," senior Daniel Baker said. "It got us more involved in the music."

(Center right) After being featured in a commercial during NBC's "Clash of the Choirs," Chorale added their rendition of "We Wish You a Merry Christmas" to the final show.

(Bottom left) Near the end of the show, all of the choirs in the performance come on stage for the "Christmas Carol Medley." During the parts where only guys, like seniors Matthew Wegzyn, Chase Noble, Michael Collins and Baker, are supposed to sing, they push through the line of girls to the front. "It's the one time when our part is more important than the girls," Baker said.

After the medley, the choir was joined by the band, alumni and teachers for the "Hallelujah Chorus."

"It's fun getting together on stage because everyone harmonizes really well," Schneider said.

PHYSICS

POTENTIAL MOTION.

Teacher Jonathan Thomas-Palmer's physics classes experimented with moving the Earth in a lab.

"We were proving Newton's Third Law; for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction," senior Jingyi Sun said.

According to Sun, Thomas-Palmer had everyone stand on their desks and jump simultaneously to the floor.

"The Earth moved up to meet us as we jumped down; hence, we moved the Earth," Sun said.

We move the Earth every day, just not very far. "If every human on Earth jumped simultaneously, we would only move the Earth about the distance of the radius of the electron orbiting a hydrogen atom," Thomas-

Palmer explained.

This may not seem right, considering the human population of Earth is approaching 6.7 billion, but Thomas-Palmer said that the mass of all the people on Earth still does not compare with the mass of the Earth itself.

Thomas-Palmer said he does this lab because he likes that it involves students in their world.

TOP LABS

POPULAR EXPERIMENTS.

In a survey of 50 students, the following science labs were rated most popular:

1. Tie-dye (Chemistry)
2. Pig Dissection (Biology)
3. Cedar Point (Physics)
4. Mystery Solutions (Chemistry)
5. Sand Tables (Geophysical)

AP ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE

QUIRKY CAMPING.

The annual AP Environmental Science camping trip turned out to be more than lectures from teacher Ron Meteyer.

(Top left) Students, like seniors Priya Thyagarajan, Meghan Kanya, Robin Czerwinski, Elizabeth Nichols and Heekon Cha listened while Meteyer talked about everything from the Kirkland Warbler to the effects of dams on the environment and found other ways to have a good time, too.

(Bottom right) Senior Annielaurie Medonis said, "Mr. Meteyer talked a lot about logging, but it made more sense when I could see a log jam for myself."

(Bottom left) At the logging museum, senior Matthew Mehill found a cardboard cutout of a lumberjack. "I just thought it would be funny to pose with him because I'm a cutup," Mehill said.

(Middle left) After the logging museum, the class traveled to the sand dunes of Lake Huron. "The funniest part was watching people trying to walk back up the sand dunes," senior Kimberly Siegel said.

"The dunes were really steep. It took me a couple of tries before I could make it back up without slipping," Medonis added.

(Top right) On the shoreline of Lake Huron, seniors Elizabeth Souther, Elizabeth Nash, Jonathan Akin and Joshua Arter take a walk along the beach. "My favorite part of the trip was going to Lake Huron and dipping my feet in," Siegel said.

"I learned a lot and had fun at the same time," Medonis said. "I don't know what more you could ask for out of a field trip."

BSCS BIOLOGY

READY OR NOT. Every year, students give mixed reviews about the pig dissection in Biology.

"It's funny how some people were grossed out by it and others were reaching in and almost tearing things out," commented junior Breanna Connett.

On the other hand, senior Michael Baldwin said he didn't want anything to do with the fetal pig.

Senior BreAnna Montgomery said, "We named our pig Catherine, so it was more personal."

Some students even had alternative reasons influencing their opinions. Senior Lisa Stevens said, "It was fun, but I hated going into the class and smelling the chemicals."

Whether or not students enjoy dissecting fetal pigs, this project remains an important part of BSCS Biology.

SZUKAITIS' GARDEN RENEWING HOPE.

After a fire burned down the horse barn in 2003, Maybury State Park has tried to find the funds to stay open.

Teacher Scott Szukaitis said he has devoted his time to maintaining a vegetable garden, where all proceeds go directly to the farm. Everything from cantaloupe to sugar snap peas can be found on this plot, roughly 13 times the size of the average classroom at 12,000 square feet.

Szukaitis' Michigan Natural Resources students help maintain the garden until the end of the year. Then, when the produce is ready, it is sold both at the farm and through the elementary schools.

TECH DESIGN

SCHEDULING FOR THE FUTURE.

As students ponder the course selection guide, many wonder what Tech Design has to offer for them.

To clear up the confusion, some of the students in Tech Design provided these explanations and shared their favorite aspects of the class.

"It's a cool class with flight simulators and a lot of other fun activities," junior Seth Perry said.

Perry said he wasn't sure what to expect at first, but he was soon given the layout of the class.

"We take a bunch of pre- and post-tests," Perry said. "I really like the aerodynamics too. The whole class is very interesting."

Freshman Timothy Shea agreed that he enjoyed the aerodynamics part of the class. "We do a lot of experiments," Shea said. "They're fun."

Along with experiments, the students of Tech Design have fun with fiber optic lasers. "They're so sweet," Shea said. "It's definitely my favorite part of the class."

Junior Ryan Sweeney said he has activities he's looking forward to. "I can't wait for the robotic part," Sweeney said. "We're working on electronics, but I'm really excited for later in the semester." During the robotic segment of the course, students experiment with a robotic arm.

Sweeney added that he enjoys the laidback curriculum of the class. "We're allowed to pick and choose what parts we want to do," Sweeney said, "so, it's a lot of fun."

When the time comes to choose classes for the upcoming year, students interested in robotic arms and fiber optic lasers should keep Tech Design in mind.

CELEBRATIONS

SENSE OF SMELL.

As students walk through the hallways where the Family and Consumer Sciences classes are located, sweet aromas fill the air, and these smells are just the start of what students in the cooking classes enjoy.

(Top right) Along with having fun, students learn cooking techniques. "I want to learn how to not burn food," senior Donald Ellison said.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

STAYING HEALTHY. A prerequisite to taking Celebrations, Food For Thought helps students understand common kitchen terminology and techniques.

Students learn what goes into a meal, various ways to prepare one and how to be safe in the kitchen at the same time.

"Right now we're looking at nutrition labels and how the food affects us," senior Courtney Gates said. "It's interesting to learn about the nutrition in all the food we eat."

Students said they aren't just interested in nutrition. "It teaches me better skills to use in the kitchen," junior Noor Judge said. "I really enjoy making food, so I'm really excited to start cooking."

By teaching students the proper diet to follow to improve their health, Food For Thought acts as a helpful reminder for students to stay healthy and active.

COMPUTER-AIDED DESIGN

TECHNICAL TIMES.

"We started out with 2D drawings," Paree said. "Now we're getting into more complex figures that take more time to accomplish."

These drawings act as a springboard into the world of engineering and help students to think about their future after high school. "I've always wanted to be an engineer," Paree said. "That's why I signed up for CAD; it's a great class where we get pictures and recreate them on the computer."

(Top right) Sophomore Lauren Staszal is the only girl in her CAD class. "I really think more girls should take the class," Staszal said. "It's a great class, and a lot of what I learn applies to my other hobbies."

Staszal also participates in Robotics, where she uses her newly-learned knowledge to help the team. "It's wonderful being the only girl," Staszal said. "I focus on the project at hand, and it helps, since this relates to what I would like to get into in the future."

Staszal explained how she enjoys making a connection between practice activities and the real world. "It's cool how everything connects with one another," Staszal said.

(Bottom right) "I enjoy working on the practice material in class," sophomore Evan Pomeroy said. "Making it on the computer is the next step up from drawing."

Pomeroy said he isn't sure as to what he wants to do with his future yet. "I'm not sure if I want to be an engineer," Pomeroy said, "but, it's a good way to test out different occupations that I may like to pursue." When asked what his intentions were for the semester, Pomeroy said, "I just want to pass the class."

Applied Technology and FCS stories by Sarah Rounsifer

ECONOMICS

UNBELIEVABLY DELICIOUS. "It was fun," sophomore Michelle Culbert said.

The Economics candy project is designed to teach students about business manufacturing, and how specific factors directly relate to business. "I learned a lot too," Culbert added.

Social Studies teachers grouped students together into businesses where they packaged candy into plastic bags. At the end of the hour, the students took home the candy they earned.

"I didn't have any candy left over by the end of the day," Culbert said. "All of my friends ate it."

CIVICS

UNDERTAKING CHANGES.

ChIRP: Choose, Investigate, Research, Present. It's as simple as a phone call.

"It's to have students actively try to solve the problems rather than having them just memorize vocabulary words," Social Studies teacher Chris Ford said.

Junior Ann Rushing proposed a change to the cafeteria trays. "We could just switch out a portion of the Styrofoam trays and buy some biodegradable ones to replace those," Rushing said.

Other projects included putting up a bulletin board for the drama department and fixing the congestion on Beck Road.

"It was hard ... because nobody picked up the phone," senior Samantha Solomon said about trying to contact people about adding lanes on Beck.

"It was really interesting to see how we could make a difference in our own school," junior Andrew Shaw said.

"It helps them better understand government on a local and state level," Ford said. "It's really beneficial."

AP EUROPEAN HISTORY

VISITING VAN GOGH Students had the opportunity to see Van Gogh's work up close at the Detroit Institute of Arts (DIA) on the AP European History field trip, but that's not all.

According to its web site, "The DIA's collection is one of the largest, most significant in the United States, comprising a multicultural and multinational survey of human creativity from prehistory through the 21st century."

(Top left) Junior Kevin Mantay reads a brochure about Mexican artist Diego Rivera's Detroit Industry fresco, considered Rivera's most important work in the United States.

"It was cool," Mantay said. "Some of the people in the painting were made to look like they were looking at you."

Wu admires the mummy exhibit. This display is one of the collection's key attractions.

(Bottom right) A tour guide provides information about the early people of America in the Native American exhibit. Chronologically, the collection covers nearly 3,000 years of history.

(Center right) The African art exhibits, including African tribal masks, are one of the museum's hallmarks and were integral to the founding of the DIA. The exhibit comprises some rare world-class works from nearly 100 African cultures.

(Top right) Junior David Summers hides behind his copy of the visitor map in the front lobby. Summers said he gained a new appreciation for artwork while on the trip. "Yeah, I would definitely go back," he concluded.

SOCIOLOGY

WATCHING FOR SYMBOLS.

Racism, sexism, and stereotypes are just a few examples of the elements found in Disney movies watched by Sociology students.

"It's an evaluation on how Disney affects our society,"

Social Studies teacher Jean Calabrese said. "It's about what we see as entertainment, fun and how it affects us."

"It's a class favorite," Calabrese said. "People grow up watching Disney movies, and they like to see and analyze the films."

The Sociology classes watched movies, such as "The Lion King" and "Aladdin."

"I really liked watching Aladdin and Mulan," junior Aarthi Arab said.

Some students said they heard rumors that the department may cut the unit, citing it as inappropriate or controversial. Calabrese said she's heard the rumors, too, but they're not true.

Arab thinks the Disney unit is an important part of the course. "It's the reason I took the class," she said.

US HISTORY

WORLD TRAVELERS.

Social Studies teacher Ed Gabrys assigned students to research immigrants in their own families who came to the United States.

"After the students get the oral history, they research the push and pull effects that may have caused that person to emigrate," Gabrys explained.

"I learned a lot," freshman Melissa Finn said. "I'm really glad we did it."

COOKE PROGRAM

X-TRA SUPPLIES.

As long as teachers have been assigning projects, students have been in need of various types of school supplies. Whether it's poster board, pens or glue, there is now a place in the school where students can go to get it.

Last year, Special Education teacher Art Lennox realized that though students could purchase beverages and snacks in the cafeteria and clothing at the spirit wear table, there was no location where students could purchase school supplies.

Lennox said he sent out a survey to teachers asking if a school supply store was a good idea. Responding teachers were supportive and gave Lennox ideas about the kinds of things the store could sell.

"It's a good socialization experience," Lennox said.

Students deal both with the supplies and money and help with the actual transactions when supplies are sold.

"It helps them learn about some banking procedures," Lennox said.

The supplies are purchased using money from the Credit Union, and profits from the store's sales go back into the Credit Union.

Not only do students have a place to buy supplies, but Lennox said his students enjoy it, and he hopes to continue the supply closet next year.

SPECIAL EDUCATION

X'ING OUT AIDES. This year, Special Education teacher Lynne Thompson-Heebner — and all teachers on staff — were forced to find ways to adapt to a new policy.

In the past, Thompson-Heebner had student aides in her classroom to help her students with various activities.

Things have changed now that the aides are gone. "We don't create nearly as many projects," Thompson-Heebner said.

Thompson-Heebner said she enjoyed having the aides. "They always came in with fresh ideas," she said.

Thompson-Heebner's students have also had to adjust. "They definitely looked forward to it," she said.

She added that she hopes to one day have the help of student aides again.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

YOU WARMED UP.

In the past, Physical Education classes have typically begun with a running warmup. However, beginning in February, the PE teachers used a new warm-up technique.

"Kids tend to get bored with just the running," PE teacher Lise Lenahan said.

Students now rotate between three distinct warm-up stations.

(Right) Students spend their first moments of class jumping rope, running laps or doing calisthenics (far right).

Students spend four minutes at each station, bringing the time spent warming up to 12 minutes.

"We're hoping to continue this type of warmup," Lenahan said.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION ZONE CHANGE.

While many staff members teach in only one department, Chad Dicken makes the transition from English to Physical Education every other day.

"I definitely have a love for both," Dicken said.

He has been teaching English for eight years and PE for two.

Still, he said he enjoys teaching courses such as Physical Conditioning, Team Sports and Recreation.

Dicken said he especially likes teaching Team Sports because he enjoys sports like flag football, volleyball, basketball and hockey.

"The people down there are great," Dicken said of the other PE teachers.

As much as he enjoys teaching PE, Dicken said he maintains his love for teaching English.

FITNESS TESTING ZENITH OF ACHIEVEMENT.

In Physical Education, grades are based on more than participation.

Every student in a PE class must complete fitness tests. Scores on these tests, along with whether a student improves, are factored into the grade the student receives.

Not all students like the fitness tests they are required to pass. Senior Violet Palushaj said the test she dreads most is the sit-and-reach. "I'm just not as flexible as I used to be," she said.

Other students feel that the impact tests have on final grades is unfair. Senior Nicole Jeffrey said students involved in sports have an easier time passing the tests.

"I don't think your grade should depend on whether you play sports or not," Jeffrey said.

Holiday Helpers

Several clubs got in the giving spirit this season as members volunteered to spread holiday cheer and help those in need.

(Bottom right) National Honor Society members wrapped gifts collected by Civic Concern. "We almost ran out of wrapping paper and had to wrap the tiny gifts in scraps," junior Sarah Trumbore said. Trumbore lifts a bag of presents to bring to a participating family.

(Top left) As a staff member, Kinde received a treat of his own. Student Congress members ordered poinsettias to give to teachers. Senior Robyn Baidas unloads the flowers from boxes. "A staff appreciation committee does something every month for the staff. It was a nice surprise," Baidas said.

(Bottom left) As part of a holiday festival, freshman Catherine Culkin plays Christmas songs on her trumpet at Barnes & Noble. "It was fun when people came and said I sounded good, and they enjoyed it," Culkin said.

TECH CREW

ALONG BEHIND THE SCENES

Hidden away behind the curtain, an army of black-clad workers help make the imaginative world on stage come to life for the audience.

"[Tech Crew] is nessecary for the show to run," junior Mark Jackson said.

(Bottom right) For the spring musical, "Cats," tech crew members plan to create a junkyard on the stage. "I'm cutting the wood for the platforms [that actors will stand on]," senior Daniel Baker said.

In addition to creating an interesting set, members are responsible for ensuring that the pieces are structurally sound.

(Top left) Sophomore Kaylee McDougall and junior Jenna Dehne work on the set. "I was making sure the leg was level so when dancers stand on the platform, it won't collapse," Dehne said. "We typically build everything [for the plays]," she continued.

(Top right) Senior Elizabeth Zielesch, junior Jamileh Atallah and sophomore Elaine Mitra spray paint a refrigerator that actors will crawl out of during the musical. Atallah said, "To come up with ideas [for the set] is easier than actually building the pieces."

During the show, members change sets during the production. Robinson explained, "It's fun [behind the scenes] but a little tense. It's more relaxed when you know what you're doing."

GUITAR & BASS CLUB

AMPLIFY. Once a week, Guitar and Bass Club members get creative, testing the boundaries of their musical talent. Senior Daniel Klarr said, "One time, someone brought in an effects pedal, and I cranked out crazy things that shouldn't come out of an amp." To improve technique, players of different skill levels practice together and share knowledge. Junior Kayla Copsey said, "[The club] gives us a chance to get together and share musical experiences and ideas. It's a good collaboration."

OAF

BIG SCREEN.

To celebrate the art of film, OAF members meet weekly to watch movies chosen by their adviser, Social Studies teacher Tim Orto-pan. "We talk about how they created different scenes," sophomore Nathan Menovcik said. "Ortopan tells us background information about the movies," he continued. Learning about the components that make up films helps members better appreciate the significance of motion pictures in their lives.

DRAMA CLUB BRAND-NEW DIRECTION.

Drama Club members were in for a surprise when new director Dan Dobrovich stepped on the scene. "He's so much fun. He's one of those guys who tries to be strict and intimidating, but it's all in good fun," senior Larissa Joseph said. Dobrovich adds to the accepting and enjoyable atmosphere of Drama Club. Freshman Megan Dause said, "He understands us and acts like us." Sophomore Claire Hannum added, "He likes having students in charge."

BUILDING WITH BOOKS BUILDING KNOWLEDGE.

Members of Building with Books work to provide students in less fortunate countries with better educational opportunities. "We are trying to raise funds to help developing nations," sophomore Kelsey Libbe said. After fundraising, members have a chance to complete a trek in the summer, during which they help build schools. Libbe added, "This summer we are going to Africa." Member sophomore Parul Kathuria said, "You know you're doing something good."

GERMAN CLUB CELEBRATE!

"German Club is the fun part about learning a foreign language," junior Benjamin Naber said. "It's a big party," he continued. Once a month, club members gather to celebrate German holidays. For one of their events, students run the Oktoberfest in the fall. "It is a celebration of the harvest season," junior Lee Finch said. Student participation in events like Oktoberfest help increase their knowledge of German culture.

YES MENTORING CONNECTION.

To improve their mentees' high school experience, YES mentors provide extra help for struggling students. Members explained the importance of reaching out to fellow classmates. "[It's] so they know they have someone who cares," sophomore Kelly Burford said. "It's good to help people who need an extra push and help get them motivated," she continued. In addition to motivating students academically, mentors also encourage them to participate in events outside of classes. "It's a really good program," sophomore Albert Chen said.

SPANISH CLUB

DANCE

Dressed in bright, flowing costumes, 12 dancers, representing Spain, France, Argentina and Uruguay, entertained at the Spanish Club's annual Flamenco dance performance. "They wore very bright, colorful costumes," Spanish teacher Tillie Cowen said. Cowen explained further that the event helped students learn about different cultures. Club officer junior Emea Ta agreed, saying, "It's important to experience the culture, not just the language. It helps people open their minds." Junior Melissa Williams added, "It's good to have experiences where we're not just looking at the textbook."

SELECT ENSEMBLES

DESIGNATED FEW. To earn a spot as a member in one of the elite select ensemble groups, musically talented freshmen and sophomores auditioned to become one of the designated few. Participants performed in front of an audience in groups of four. "It was better that we got to sing in groups instead of solo," sophomore Audrey DiComo said. Two-year member sophomore Hilary Agoston added, "I was really nervous. I was kind of intimidated, but it was my second year, so it wasn't too bad."

SELF DEFENSE CLUB

ESCAPE DANGER.

To avoid being at risk in a dangerous world, Self Defense Club members practiced techniques to protect themselves. "If I did get into a situation, I wouldn't feel entirely helpless," senior Jessica Horowitz said. Although students say they appreciate the security they have gained through practicing self-defense techniques, they actually attend the club mainly for the workout.

LITERARY MAGAZINE

EXPRESS YOURSELF. "It's a magazine run by the students for the students," sophomore Christina Hallam said. Members of Cavalcade, the school's new literary magazine, work in artistic ways to express their ideas. Senior Jordan Ajlouni explained, "Creativity at Northville is being dampened by social standards." Although it is currently a small publication, members hope that, with continued support and development, the literary magazine will grow in magnitude. "The underground, creative aspects will be brought to light and eventually grow," Ajlouni said.

ADOPT-A-STUDENT

FOLLOW ME.

"When new students come to the school, we show them their classes, lockers and lunches, but sometimes we meet outside of school to get to know them," junior Tianna Garland said of the Adopt-A-Student program. Junior Kehrie Priest explained, "[The best part is that] you don't have to sit by yourself at lunch because you know one person at least, so you won't be a loner."

ROBOTICS

GEAR UP! Competing against 1,500 teams worldwide, junior Daniel Keys explained that the Robotics team is thrilled to be attending two regional competitions plus Nationals. "It's been four years since we went to Nationals," Keys said.

To start the season, teams across the world are given the same assignment and must build a robot capable of completing a task. This year, teams are required to move their robots around a 50-foot race track and throw a large ball to gain extra points.

(Top left) To ensure the robot is ready to accomplish this year's mission, Keys grinds a steel shaft that will be made into the axle for a wheel.

(Bottom left) To continue the preparation process, junior Donald Ebben and freshmen Elizabeth Hadley and Robert Singletary work on sensory structures for the robot. "We need this to navigate around the playing field when the robot isn't being remote controlled," Ebben said. As Ebben works on sensory-based movement, other members help develop other technology to control the robot.

(Center right) Planning another aspect of the robot's design, Robotics members group together as one of their many parent mentors helps develop ways to test the ball that the robot must throw in competition.

(Top right) Freshmen Matthew Drago and Joshua Johnson test the strength of a mechanism designed to hurl the ball across the track.

With such well-developed plans, members are confident with this year's design. "Hopefully the design for this year's robot is really good," Keys said. "We think it's one of our better designs," he continued.

TREBLEMAKERS

HARMONY. Nine voices mix to form an orchestra of sound for Victorian festival goers each fall. This September, members of TrebleMakers showcased their talent by performing the national anthem and other songs they chose themselves.

(Top) Performing one of the songs the group selected, TrebleMakers sing "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" for an audience at Mill Race Village. "We sang it three times: The first time was proper, the second time, we acted like baseball players, and the third time, we turned it into a rap," senior Caitlyn Knisely explained.

and Laura Felosak sing "Tell My Ma" for the crowd. In their performances, members work on the group's balance and blend. Fecht said, "We're always careful to listen to each other and make sure we sound on."

(Bottom left) Junior Erica Johnson watches while members of BackBeat perform during the show. Both select choirs allow members to develop their musical talent. Johnson explained, "As a singer, [TrebleMakers] has allowed me to understand my voice in a group setting and individually. I am more comfortable with the girls and the audience."

The harmony between the girls' voices and personalities creates strong friendships. Johnson said, "We're all very outgoing and love to be in front of an audience."

Knisely added, "If you like the people [you work with], you are a lot more successful."

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

HELPING HAND. National Honors Society members spend 20 or more hours a year donating their time to the community. These juniors shared their favorite volunteer activities this year.

"The Solstice Run because we got to watch the runners finish."

— Maudie Smith

"The Winchester Fun Fair because I got to work with kids."

PEP BAND HOME AWAY FROM HOME.

Members of Pep Band bring home-team spirit to away football games and boost the team's morale. "It shows that everyone is dedicated to the [school]," sophomore Allison Rohlf said. Pep Band's presence creates a familiar atmosphere and provides support for the team. "It's comforting to hear songs from the home games," Rohlf concluded.

MODEL U.N.

IMPACTING THE WORLD.

Coming together in mock United Nations meetings, students share their knowledge of the world around them. "We get to talk about world problems and figure out ways to help other people," sophomore Elisabeth Formica said. Junior Stacy Sutter added, "[It] is a fun and enriching experience." Sutter said that most students who attend the conferences are interested in politics and approach the experience with an open mind. Formica concluded, "It's nice having a say [in world issues]."

TEENS AS TEACHERS & ZERO TOLERANCE

JUST SAY NO.

"We tell them why we are drug free; they really look up to us," junior Yang Zhang said. Members make presentations at local elementary and middle schools to teach children the importance of a drug-free life. In one exercise, members offer participants candy, which their teachers advised them not to accept. "[The idea is to] prepare them for high school and show them how to just say no to drugs," junior Kathryn Gorsuch explained.

QUIZ BOWL

KNOWLEDGE.

Quiz Bowl members use their knowledge to advance in academic competitions throughout the year. Junior Robert Gallagher said, "We each contribute our own strengths in different subjects." Members meet to prepare and strategize for future tests. "[Our advisers] give us practice questions and see if we know the answers," freshman Helen Mulcahy said. Gallagher explained the questions often found on Quiz Bowl tests: "They are generally facts that pertain to everyday life," he said.

MAD

LEAN ON ME.

When the school or community are in need of help, Make-A-Difference members step in to lend a hand. While providing valuable assistance to others, students still enjoy the volunteer experience. "I think it's fun to do stuff with the school," freshman Dakota Wright said. "Everyone should do that." Junior Linda Wang added, "It's good to help other people because you feel good about yourself."

BACKBEAT

MUSIC MEN.

For BackBeat members, music is more than just a hobby. The hours that the singers spend perfecting their a capella songs create close friendships and unforgettable memories. Senior Matthew Wegzyn said, "My favorite parts are the performances outside of school. That's where most of our inside jokes originate." Several members shared their favorite performances from the year.

SAND VOLLEYBALL CLUB

NEW GAME.

"I like to play volleyball, and the girls [school MHSAA team] wouldn't let me," senior Brian Bagian said about joining the new Sand Volleyball Club. The cold, fall weather ended the club's season early; however, members plan to meet once a week in the spring. Bagian said, "It's outdoors, so it's more fun. It also utilizes Hines Park." The club offers students a chance to spend time with friends while completing a low-key workout. Senior Grace Myers said, "It's a different way to be active."

DANCE COMPANY

OPENING NIGHT.

The new Dance Company started their season with a bang, performing a New York-themed dance spectacular for family and friends.

(Top) Dancers begin a kick line during the Fly to NYC tap dance. Company members practiced since August to learn the 12 routines featured in the show. "Some weeks we had four rehearsals," freshman Stephanie Curran said.

(Center right) Members strike a pose in the Streets of NYC production, one of the largest dances in the recital. Despite months of preparation, sophomore Chelsea Vick said everyone felt nervous the night of the show. Freshman Kaliana Basoukeas said, "The captains gave nice speeches that got the group going and got rid of our nerves."

The dancers' confidence throughout the show paid off with a successful performance. Basoukeas said, "It went really good! We got a lot of good reviews afterwards."

FRENCH CLUB

PARLEZ-VOUS FRANCAIS? If you understand this question, you may want to join French Club. Senior Alyssa Marcangelo said, "We play oral games to improve our speaking ability." Aside from mastering the language, members learn about French culture. Junior Amanda Webster said, "We eat French food and show French movies." This knowledge of French culture adds to club members' overall appreciation of the language.

SCIENCE OLYMPIAD

PROBLEM SOLVED. Science Olympiad members work in pairs to solve problems in all areas of science. "The majority [of tasks] are paper tests, a couple involve building, and there are lab-based events," captain senior John Gburek said. He added, "Whoever is assigned the event independently meets to prepare." The team comes together at meets held at local universities. Junior Jimmy Li said, "My favorite part is the competitions because you meet friends from other schools."

FORENSICS

QUICK RESPONSE.

Members of Forensics must think on their toes while completing different public speaking tasks, including impromptu dialogues. Sophomore Zhounan Xie said, "We [also] memorize parts in drama skits that we find ourselves." Members gave the first word that came to their minds when asked about Forensics.

BOOK CLUB

READ SOMETHING.

It is special when teenagers spend their free time reading books, let alone discussing them. Once a month, book club members meet to talk about the theme and author of their latest novel. "When people relate the story to their lives, they get so into it," senior Lauren Glumm said. "It usually relates to everyone because we're all teens." Glumm concluded, "Having everyone put in their thoughts about literature is cool."

RECYCLING CLUB

REDUCE, REUSE, RECYCLE.

"Every day is Earth Day," senior Carly Goldberg said. Each Thursday, the Recycling Club members disperse throughout the school hallways and empty the recycling boxes that teachers leave outside their doors. The bags of paper products and plastic bottles are then carted to the large recycling bin in the school parking lot. Goldberg described the club's importance: "We need to conserve our resources." Freshman Faith Miller added, "I like knowing that I helped the world."

METALSMITHS GUILD

RED HOT! The metalsmith enthusiasts have gained new steam this year because of a grant for a new kiln. This led to improved working conditions for metals students. "Lately we are working on enameling and doing our [class] projects if we need extra help," junior Kyrsten Persells said. Adviser and art teacher Cheryl Brooks explained, "We work on new skills and strengthen skills that students already have."

STUDENT CONGRESS

SUPER LEADERS.

Anyone can be a super hero around Halloween. This fall, Student Congress members planned a night of Halloween-themed fun for faculty families. "We organized the whole thing," junior Arianne Frink said.

explained the work that went into creating this station. "We made a pit up on the stage by putting together four tables and filling it with hundreds of balloons. We had everyone from congress helping."

With all of the activities available, many families have made the night a tradition. (Center left) Physics teacher Jon Thomas-Palmer enjoys the night with his daughter, Ryan. "I've always loved Munchkin Mash," Palmer said. "We have it on our calendar at home," he added.

Congress members had a hard time choosing the cutest children when it came to all the little "munchkins" running around. "Lots of kids were really adorable," Dunn said. (Top left) Frink shares a bond with English teacher Jeff Balagna's son. "I really like Keenan, and Mr. Balagna lets me hold him," Frink said. "[He] was so cute!" she said with a smile.

DEBATE TEAM

TIME'S UP!

With only a short amount of time available, debaters face an interesting challenge. Arguing affirmative or negative on the topic, many find time an issue and resort to improvisation. Junior Jessica Shost said, "This year's topic is whether the U.S. government should increase public health assistance to sub-Saharan Africa." Time is also a vital part of preparing for debates. Shost added, "[We] gather information little by little a couple months before hand."

ROTARY INTERACT

TIME WELL SPENT. "It's a community service club," junior Anna Billings explained. The club officers search for possible volunteer opportunities in the area and hold general meetings once a month where students sign up for events. "One thing that's really special about Rotary is that it's completely student run, so when you achieve something you really feel the impact of your accomplishments," Billings continued.

MULTI-CULTURAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION

UNITY. "It's something new," senior Chang Liu said. Founded last year, the Multi-Cultural Student Association promotes diversity and a greater knowledge of other cultures. "It's fun because we get to know lots of people from different places with different traditions," Liu said. Once a month, members meet at ethnic restaurants or watch foreign movies. "It's a pretty cool way to recognize the diversity in the school," senior Daisy Tan added.

NYCAC

VOICE. The Northville Youth Committee Action Council works to give teenagers a voice in the community. The group forms sub-committees that brainstorm ways to make change possible. One of last year's projects included the salad bar added to the school lunch menu.

Senior Lucy Hough described the top five projects planned to improve Northville this year.

1. Open Mic Night
2. Casual Dance
3. Poetry Slam
4. Downtown Improvement
5. School Improvement

FRENCH HONOR SOCIETY

VOLONTAIRES: That's what members of the French Honor Society are. For four hours a year, students volunteer their time to fulfill their membership requirements.

Several members shared what they have done so far to earn volunteer credits.

SADD

WISE CHOICES.

In order to promote good decisions, SADD hosts four seasonally-themed movie nights a year. Northville families bring their children to enjoy a night out. This year, the children wore their Halloween costumes to celebrate the season. "My favorite part is just seeing the kids. They're so cute and so enthusiastic," senior Jingyi Sun said.

Each year, SADD members choose a different activity for the children to participate in. "This year we're making [Halloween] masks," junior Kanika Kochhar said. (Top right) One participant admires the mask she created before the start of the movie.

Before taking their seats, parents purchased concessions from SADD volunteers. (Center right) Kochhar places a bag of microwave pop-corn on the concessions table. She explained that proceeds go towards SADD's efforts to encourage a drug-free lifestyle. She said, "It raises a lot of money because we sell a lot of food and drinks." (Bottom right) Junior Su Yang Choi pours a glass of pop for a customer as SADD president Sun oversees her.

In order to provide a more comfortable environment, this year beanbags were laid out in front of the screen in addition to several rows of chairs for adults. (Bottom left) Five kids in their Halloween costumes claim front row seats before the movie begins.

As the last activity of the night, SADD chose to show the movie "The Corpse Bride." (Top left) Participants enjoy the movie with their families in a night of safe fun.

"The biggest scandal for this year is we have a PG movie instead of a G movie," Sun said, "so you can see how risky we are."

GAMING CLUB

X-BOXERS.

Battle cries echo from the X-Box corner of the library and the Halo room while several students hunch over an intricate table game, complete with dragons and knights. "You play whatever you want as long as you have the ability to," senior Peter Ehlert said. Since the year 2000, many students have gathered to share their love of gaming. English teacher David Bowen added, "We have alumni that come back every week. That means something."

SOCIETY OF ASPIRING TEACHERS

OUR FUTURE.

If you like working with students, this is the club for you. "We explore teaching," senior James Gietzen explained. Physical education teacher and club adviser Elise Morrison provides information to students seeking that career pathway. "You get to interact with people interested in pursuing the same career," senior Gina Greco said.

IMPROV

ZANY! Definition:

A comical person given to outlandish behavior. Club members agree that it is the zany characters that really give Improv its humorous reputation. "There's a lot of games, and they're all really hilarious, but it's really the people that go, not so much the games, that make it fun," sophomore Sara Sopko said.

Baby boom

Another year, another ten babies (or so)

With five here and more on the way, the number of babies expected this year may well surpass the overwhelming ten that arrived last year.

Amber Furst's daughter Gretchen started the baby boom last year on Nov. 9, 2006.

On Nov. 18, Evan joined excited big brother Nate in the Obrigkeit household. Science teacher Melanie Obrigkeit said, "He was born smiling and has been ever since!"

Adam Dicken, who has two parents on staff, arrived on Nov. 27. "He brightens everyone's day," English teacher Chad Dicken said.

The Dickens are now expecting another baby. "We wanted them to be a year apart, so we're excited," science teacher Melissa Dicken said.

Findley Henderhan, born Dec. 29, is always happy. "My husband and I always say, 'We don't deserve a baby this good,'" English teacher Ronalee Henderhan said.

James Warner was born to math teacher Cheri Warner on Jan. 6. "He plays pat-a-cake, waves, crawls backwards and loves to eat," Warner said.

Cody Sclater was born Feb. 21 to business and computer teacher Cheri Sclater. "He's very hard to dress," Sclater said, "It's like a wrestling match to get him dressed."

Zachary Parker, born March 15, is the second child for math teacher Michele Parker. She said her daughter Abbey is very proud to be a big sister.

English teacher Rachel Besco welcomed her son, Theisen, on March 29. "He has a great smile," Besco said.

The same day, English teacher Jeff Balagna welcomed his first child, Keenan. "He thinks it's hilarious when people sneeze," Balagna said.

English teacher Melanie Korczyk had Dylan exactly a month after Keenan was born. "Dylan is a super happy, super laidback baby," Korczyk said.

Twins Ben and Eric joined English teacher and football coach Ryan Hockman's family on July 27, right before the start of the football season.

Math teacher Joe Schembri welcomed his son, Joseph, on Aug. 23. Schembri said having two children is totally different than having only one.

Counselor Jason Murphy's first child, Campbell, was also born on Aug. 23. Murphy said, "I drive like an old man ... I just want to make sure she's safe."

On Oct. 13, Counselor Lisa Sadikot brought home Sofia, a sister to big brother Adam.

Q&A

Greg and Brian Long

Spanish teacher Brian Long explains what life is like as an identical twin.

Q: Who was born first?

A: I was. No one really knows how much older I am because the doctor was playing with my brother and forgot to look at the clock. He just decided it was about eight minutes.

Q: What is the best thing about being an identical twin?

A: Growing up, you always have a best friend.

Q: Did you ever dress alike as children?

A: No. My mom was really big on us being individuals.

Q: What is the biggest difference between you and Greg?

A: We have very different personalities. He tends to be pretty shy, and I'm obnoxiously outgoing.

Q: Did you ever try to trick anyone by switching places?

A: We were seniors in high school. He went to my computer class, and I went to his World History class. My brother goofed off the whole time, and my teacher had no idea. I went to his class and the teacher knew right away and decided to give a pop quiz that day. I failed it, and my brother got an A- in that class just because of that one quiz.

Mission: organization

mrs. Prestel is the most organized person I know," senior Lauren Van Hamme said.

From lockers to planners, students have various ways of staying organized, remembering information and displaying things that are important to them. Teachers have their own ways of accomplishing this.

French teacher Elaine Prestel uses stations to structure her students' time in class. There are different stations for correcting homework, speaking tests and learning new material.

Prestel also has a shelf used to hand back assignments to her students. "I look at it, stamp it and put it there," Prestel said.

While some teachers use their classroom space to stay organized, others use it to showcase sports seasons.

Social Studies teacher Christopher

Ford is also the junior varsity boys tennis coach and displays the placemats from the last six boys tennis banquets behind his desk.

In addition to the placemats, the board also includes a University of Michigan sign, a picture of former President Gerald R. Ford and a copy of the Declaration of Independence. "I think it's nice to pay attention to our primary source documents," Ford said.

Other teachers have different priorities when it comes to their classrooms.

English teacher Joe LaDuke said he wants his classroom to be a "respectful place where everyone contributes." He has a bulletin board covered in paper that his students are free to write on. "It allows students to let go of their thoughts and feelings," senior Lauren Glumm said.

Q&A

English teacher Scott Corless explains what led him to become a teacher and why it was a good decision.

Q: How long have you been teaching English?

A: Six years.

Q: What made you want to be a teacher?

A: I had high school students working at our company, and I was in charge of training them. The days they were working were the days I enjoyed most.

Q: What do you enjoy most about being a teacher?

A: That moment that a student finally gets it is kind of cool.

I started studying Spanish in the third grade. I had excellent teachers in school. I really like high school students. My heroes are Christi McAuliffe, Jaime Escalante and Guan Long!

After orientation, Student Congress organized a dance for the freshmen so that they could mix and mingle and get to know each other better. These students shared their favorite part about the dance.

He said:

"I met a lot of new people; it was pretty crazy."

— Todd Else

She said:

"I met a guy at the freshman dance, one of the leaders, and we danced, and now we're great friends."

Operation Orientation

The transition to high school can be rough, but freshmen said they adapted just fine.

"I wasn't very excited," Jacqueline Kjolhede said about orientation, and she said her attitude didn't change throughout the day. "It was just really boring," she added.

Conversely, Jillian Pacion said she was excited for high school. She developed a friendship with her leader, senior Joshua Arter. "I'm really glad we stayed in touch," Pacion said. "Orientation was a lot of fun."

(Bottom right) During orientation, the group leaders organized ice-breakers so the freshmen could learn about their new classmates.

(Bottom left) Junior Joshua Buoy leads freshmen in an ice-breaker during orientation. "I had fun, and it seemed like all the freshmen did too," Buoy said.

(Center right) Senior Shana Sullivan leads her group of freshmen around the building. "It was really hard to make sure they didn't get lost and to keep them away from their friends," Sullivan said.

(Top right) Freshmen line up in the hall waiting to get their yearbook and ID pictures taken. Kathryn Swartz said she wasn't bothered by the long lines. "They seemed to move pretty quickly," she said.

Haley Ferrario

Fresh start

Haley Ferrario moved to Northville the day after school got out in Washington. During the summer, she said she ventured through downtown. "I really love the small-town feel," Ferrario said. Coming to orientation late, she said she was a little lost. "I never really found my group," Ferrario said. Despite the setbacks, she said she found that orientation helped her feel more comfortable at school.

Q&A

Kevin Bain

Kevin Bain, a first-year varsity diver shared his experience on the dive team. Bain has been diving for three years.

Q: What is the most challenging aspect of diving?

A: It's mental — not being afraid of the water or hitting the board.

Q: How many high school meets have you competed in?

A: Just one; I got first.

Q: What is your favorite part?

A: My coach; she's awesome.

Q: What is your favorite dive?

A: A back half twist.

My first day of high school was a disaster. I went to the wrong lunch. I thought my third hour had a lunch, so I walked into third hour after half of it was already over. It was really embarrassing. I also managed to trip while going up the staircase.

Broken memories

Andrew Baldwin

"I have been playing on the Rising Suns co-ed rec soccer team since I was seven," Andrew Baldwin said. He is the goalie for the team.

During one unfortunate game, he broke his finger. "I didn't really know; I just reached out for the ball, and it was broken," he explained. Baldwin said he can't play any sports until after the holiday break. "I am really excited to start playing sports again," Baldwin said, "and it will be nice to be able to write again."

I n my opinion

Now that the graduation requirements for the class of 2011 have changed, freshmen must plan their high school academics based on the new standards. Here's what students had to say about how this impacts them:

"It feels like I'm being held back because I'm limited to the classes I can take."
— Logan Hill

"I don't really mind; it has no effects right now that I know of."
— Erik Gothard

"I don't like it because I'm not good at science, and I need to take another year of it."
— Katherine Gatz

"It makes everything so much worse because it all got so much harder."

Q&A

Christian Hoppens

First-year percussionists often play pit percussion before becoming part of drumline. Christian Hoppens is no exception.

Q: Do you enjoy pit percussion?
A: Yeah, it's pretty fun. We don't have that much to do, so it's nice.

Q: What's your favorite memory?
A: Band Camp in general was great. We just played cards.

Q: Who is your favorite drumline member and why?
A: Probably Vinny Sheu because he's a freshman and hysterical.

- Try to make it through the hallway without being bumped
- Hang out with friends during lunch
- Get back to 4th hour ~~before~~ before class starts
- Barely catch my bus on time

Q&A

Devanté
Murray-Clayton

The move from middle school to high school is a big adjustment. Devanté Murray-Clayton described how the change affected him.

Q: How are you adjusting to the new high school environment?
A: Excellent, I like it more than middle school.

Q: What is the biggest difference from middle school to high school?
A: Waking up early.

Q: What do you like most about being in high school?
A: The food is much better.

Q: If you could change anything about the school, what would it be?
A: The teachers; they should be more exciting.

"I think I have driving astigmatism," Michaela Keady said as she laughed, describing her driving style.

Driving permits allow novice drivers to chaffeur passengers about in the company of an adult. Some said they feel the growing pains of being a beginner by learning through experience, sending passengers ducking for cover or bracing for impact.

"My mom is always hanging on to stuff in the car," Nathan Lunn said. "She gets so scared."

(Top) Jessica Compo looks ahead as she pulls into a parking space at Northville High School. "When I drive, everybody always screams; it really scares me," Compo said. "My mom always grabs my arm when she gets scared."

(Bottom left) Michaela Keady displays her driving technique. "I always have a little bit of an anxiety attack. I feel like I lose my vision, and I can't read signs," Keady said. "I get so nervous."

Along with their passengers not enjoying free rides, one new driver was not entranced by the thrill of getting behind the wheel for the first time.

(Bottom right) Lunn looks back on learning to drive, keys in hand. "My driving instructor kind of turned me off to it," he said. "He was pretty scary."

Despite the work of infamous instructors and cautious parents, students said they are still excited to experience this new adventure and feel they are ready to take the next step: obtain a driver's license.

"I was really nervous before the road test," Alexandra Roach said.

(Bottom right) Roach smiles as her friend compares her to the picture on her license. "It was worth it because I love being able to drive anywhere."

For some, planners document their whole lives. "I write almost everything that I do every day in my planner," Kelsey Gaidica said. Her planner is color-coded with reminders and details of her daily activities. "I decorate when I'm bored in class, and it helps me remember everything," she said.

A gem of an idea

Emily Doyle turned one of her hobbies into a successful business. "I had no idea what to get my friend for a gift, so I made her some earrings," Doyle said.

Doyle's jewelry turned out to be quite a success. "My boss asked me to make a pair for all of the girls that I worked with, which is 18 girls," Doyle said. Through word of mouth, Doyle earned herself even more customers. "I gave a pair to Mrs. Cavanaugh, and other people saw them and asked how much I charged for them," she said.

I n my opinion

These students explained how sophomore year is different than freshman year. Here's what they had to say:

"Freshmen are immature. I didn't act like that because I didn't want to look stupid."

— Nicholas Kalweit

"The respect you get as a freshman is basically nothing. This year, it's better."

— Mackenna King

"Being on varsity cheer is the biggest difference this year. They work us much harder."

— Sarah Joseph

"Now I see people who are younger than me walking around the school."

Q&A

Peter Mues

With so many movies coming out each year, it can be hard to pick a favorite. Peter Mues talked about the film he liked best this year.

Q: What is your favorite movie from this year?

A: "Rodentz." It's the best because it is the worst movie ever made.

Q: What is it about?

A: It's about college kids that get chased by giant mutant rats.

Q: Who is your favorite character?

A: Gary because he is part of the "Tucked in Shirt Alliance."

Q: What is the best quote from the movie?

A: "I'm sorry, the door is stuck." (Gary)

Off the board

Sophomore Jessica Yu explained why she puts memorable items from school activities on her bulletin board, such as her homecoming ticket

"It's a good reminder of how much fun I had," Yu said. "It was my favorite one so far, so I really wanted to remember it."

Aspiring actress

Jillian Reed explains her acting lifestyle.

Jillian Reed is not only a singer, but an actress too. "My agent sends me on auditions for commercials and television shows," Reed said, "and I recently auditioned for Zoey 101." Reed said she spends half of the year away from home. "I live in California during most of the spring and summer," she explained. Even though Reed lives a busy life, "she still makes time for her friends," junior Kelsey Floyd said.

(Bottom right) Shafer Oudeh said he spent the majority of his time on his original artwork, which was centered around themes of destruction and mayhem. "I normally draw for fun, so the original art was my favorite aspect," Oudeh said.

(Top right) Chelsea Glenn's portfolio was a class favorite, according to CPC teacher Lisa Rohde. She said Glenn's creativity was emphasized throughout her portfolio. "It's the one project that lets you have complete creative freedom," Patrick Kelley said.

(Top left) Students in Rohde's first-hour CPC class participate in the 'WOW' page activity. Each student looks at everyone's portfolio and writes a positive comment on a 'WOW' sheet for the student. "It was nice to hear what my classmates thought about my work," Lauren Wysocki said.

(Center right) Marissa D'Agostino writes a comment on Glenn's 'WOW' sheet. D'Agostino and Kelley agreed that the comments are great positive reinforcement for the hard work they all put in.

Mural memory

Louis Dorantes described his most memorable school moment. "At Hillside, Ms. Jones wanted me to paint a mural by her classroom," he explained. "There was already a mural of Kermit the Frog, and I didn't want to ruin it," Dorantes said. Dorantes didn't know his teacher had a plan. "She told Michael Leja that if he could convince me to paint over it, she would take him to Sizzling Sticks," Dorantes said. "When Michael saw me talking to Ms. Jones one day, he screamed Sizzling Sticks and threw white paint all over Kermit." Although Kermit was lost forever, Jones finally got her mural.

Q&A

Lee Schechter

Getting a driver's license, having more homework: sounds like junior year. Lee Schechter described a typical weekend in his junior year.

Q: What do you usually do over the weekend?
A: I play kidnapped a lot. I'm known as the human GPS among my friends.

Q: Have your weekend activities changed since last year?
A: Yeah, I have a lot more freedom this year.

Q: Why have these changes occurred?
A: I got my license this year, so I can drive myself where I want to go.

Q: When do you usually do your homework on the weekends?
A: I procrastinate all weekend and start late on Sunday, which turns into early on Monday.

To do before the ACT

Samaniha
Sorenson

"I really don't want to stress about the ACT when it comes time to take it. Hopefully, since I am already prepared, it will go as smooth as possible."

1. Take a practice ACT
2. Sign up for a prep class
3. Get a study buddy ☺
4. Get a lot of sleep
5. Don't forget #2 pencil!

Who said it?

Match the person with his or her quote about the parking lot.

1. Benjamin
Walstrom

2. Hilary
Youtsey

3. Thomas
Storch

a. "Amy Sweetapple always parks over the line, so I have to ask her to repark, so I can fit in."

b. "I really like the cool stickers I get when I don't park in my spot."

c. "I drive a tank, so sometimes I accidentally hit people after school."

Answers: 1.b; 2.c; 3.a

To do

before senior portraits

Kimberly
Boloven

"I got my photos taken at Prestige. I am really happy with the way they turned out," Kimberly Boloven said. She said her to-do list helped her achieve great photos.

1. GO shopping for new clothes!
2. Make an appointment to get pics taken.
3. Get your hair done.
4. Brush your teeth & SMILE!

Say Cheese!

"I got to leave school an hour early, so I could get ready," Elizabeth Address said.

(Top left) Address had her year-book photo taken by Prestige Photography and the rest of her portraits taken by Steve Fecht. "I had some taken at Steve Fecht's studio, but he also came to my house, and we took some in my backyard," Address said.

(Center right) Address looks at her photo options in Fecht's studio. She said she liked having Fecht take her photos because he gave her lots of choices, and it was a very comfortable setting.

(Bottom right) "I even got to have my dog in a couple photos," Address added. She said she liked having the photos taken in her own backyard. "It was really easy having them taken at my house because I could just run up to my room to change my outfit and get ready," Address said.

(Bottom left) Address lays on a wall in her backyard, posing for one of her photos. "I have trees and an archway in my backyard that we took some photos by and a little stone wall I laid on," she said.

(Top right) Address's mother, Linda Address, holds a reflector for Fecht while he takes a photo. "My mom got to help. She held a thing that reflected the sunlight onto me," Address said.

Although Address said she was happy with the way her photos turned out, looking back, there were a few things she would have changed. "I picked out my outfits the day of my photos," Address said. "I didn't like my hair in some of the photos, and I wish I would have worn shoes," she added.

Behind the camera

"It's all about you," photographer Steve Fecht said. "You're a supermodel for a day. Prepare to be pampered." Fecht has been shooting senior portraits since 2002. "I decided to leave my position as Director of Photography for The Detroit News and open my own studio in downtown Northville," he explained. He said he shoots a little bit of everything, from family photos to business professionals and events. "We just recently began booking weddings at the studio," Fecht added. About taking senior portraits, he said, "Every student is unique, which makes each session unique and special. No two days are ever alike, because no two shoots are ever the same." He explained that "the most successful senior portrait sessions are those that are well thought out ahead of time by the student." While students are rewarded with photos they love, he finds the job has its own rewards: "I am lucky to be able to do what I love while meeting great people along the way."

Photographer Steve Fecht sets up his camera for a senior photo shoot.

Q&A

Julia Bawden

Julia Bawden answered a few questions about a memory that sticks out best in her mind from freshman year.

Q: What do you remember most about freshman year?

A: I remember going lazer tagging, and there were these super-intense kids that were just going nuts. They completely turned off the lights, and my friend ran into a wall and hurt himself.

Q: What makes this experience stick out most in your mind?

A: It was one of the times I've laughed the hardest in my life.

Q: What was going through your mind when this happened?

A: I laughed at first because it was so funny, but then I felt bad.

Q: Do you plan on doing this again any time soon?

A: We talked about doing it again, but it never happened.

Q&A

New students usually have a year to adjust to a new school, but Marissa Capistrant moved from California and said she only needed a few months.

Marissa Capistrant

Q: Describe the transition from California to Michigan.

A: It was hard at first, but it's easy now because of great friends.

Q: Where do you plan on going to college and why?

A: I want to go to Grand Valley because it's less expensive than [school in] California.

Q: Is it strange that your first year at Northville is also your last?

A: It's kind of weird that I'm not going to see most of the people here again.

Press power

Michael Collins

Second-year yearbook staffer Michael Collins said he has enjoyed his many responsibilities on staff during his senior year. "I complete spread assignments and help out Leslie [Tilson, the editor]," Collins said of his usual assignments.

He explained that one of the challenges is getting good quotes from sources: "You can't control others," he said.

Despite the minor difficulties, he concluded, "It's a lot of fun because you are able to represent what the final product looks like."

Being a senior comes with the knowledge of the ins and outs of the school. When asked what piece of advice would be helpful to underclassmen, these students replied with opinions from their own experiences.

He said:

"Become friends with Ed."

I have had so many amazing experiences throughout high school, so I couldn't pick just one thing that I would miss. I loved being a part of the swim team, band, and choir. It will be hard next year when I won't get the chance to hangout with all the members of these groups. They were definitely a big part of my life!

Random recall

Jarad Gusfa

It's not one of those moments one would expect to remember forever, but Jarad Gusfa recalled his friend Brendan Flayer breaking his collarbone during a game of football. "My friends and I sometimes go to Hillside to play football on the weekends. One time, we were playing, and Mike Sokolov landed on Brendan and broke his collarbone. It was funny because it was random, but scary at the same time because he didn't know for sure if something was wrong," Gusfa said.

Q&A

Elizabeth Kerr

Seniors prepare to take the next step in life and apply for colleges.

Elizabeth Kerr shared her application experience and expectations for college.

Q: Did you apply to many colleges?
A: I only applied to one, so I was really glad I got accepted.

Q: Are you going away to college or living at home?
A: I'm actually going 11 hours away. I'm going to Bethel University [in St. Paul, Minn.].

Q: What's the first thing you're going to do with the new freedom?
A: Probably just hang out with my friends and meet new friends.

While the group had fun, Noble said the only reason they followed him was "the novelty of it being Mike Wagner's brother."

I will miss my Robot, Melissa Kasztowny! Woot!

— Abigail Wright-Geddes

Enjoy your senior year 'cause it goes by really fast.

— Andrew Mills

David Clarkson

The first time I rode my bike without training wheels I rode straight into a mailbox. It was gnarly at best.

My favorite childhood memory was when I started to ride a two wheel bike. I was so excited that I just rode up and down the street until it was dark outside!!

Megan Piotrowski

Jessica Ratts

Ashley

I remember playing T-Ball, but instead of paying attention I made sand castles.

One time, I fell down the stairs and my brother laughed at me. We always look back on this, it's how I know that he's family- who else would laugh at my injuries?

Every summer my family would rent a cottage in Traverse City with my cousin. We always had matching clothes. ☺

Elizabeth Nash

Amanda Sutton

When I was little I loved shrimp, but I couldn't pronounce all my words yet. So, whenever I tried to ask my mom for "shrimp cocktail" it would turn out being "shrimp cottontail" instead.

Joy Lerner

One Christmas, my parents bought my sister and I a mini snowmobile. It was the best present, until my friend's brother ran it into a snowman and a tree, and broke it. ☹

Meredith Merlanti

Back to the future

"I loved elementary school. Everyone was such a big dork, and no one cared."

— Larissa Joseph

It seems fortunate for Joseph that no one cared, because she had just one such memory from elementary school.

"One day, I was playing with these boys from school on the merry-go-round, and my skirt flew up. Everyone saw my hot pink underwear; I was really embarrassed," she explained.

Thankfully, many of us have changed since our grade school days. "I used to be really shy, and now I'm a lot more outgoing," Brett Bunnell said. Bunnell moved to Northville his freshman year and explained that while some things have changed, not everything has. "I've always been a mischievous boy and still am," he added.

And for some, even their friends are the same. Abby Presley said she found one of her best friends in an unusual way. "In second grade, I was walking through the halls, and I tripped over Bri Diegel. I ended up having to go to the hospital and get stitches. We've been friends ever since," Presley explained.

Reflecting on the past caused some seniors to realize the lessons they've learned along the way. "I never got the Barbie car I always wanted, but I've learned the important things are family and friends and not what people think," Kristina Kaldis said.

Eric Paree concluded, "I'll miss trips to Custard Time, but everything I need for life, I learned from Mr. Balcoff."
