REV. L. G. CLARK

Unanimously Asked to Withdraw His Resignation.

Mention was made in these columns last week of the resignation of Rev. L. G. Clark of the Baptist church in this place after a very successful pastorate of seven years. We understand the officers of the church met Thursday evening and unanimously asked him to withdraw his resignation. At the Sunday morning service a vote was taken and almost unanimously he was again asked to remain longer as pastor of the church. During his seven years he has seen a very encouraging growth in his own church and in the other churches of the place. A larger membership in his church, a new parsonage, greatly improved edifice represents the Baptist church of today compared with the one seven years ago. When he came here the Methodists were occupying their old church and he has seen five pastors occupy that pulpit. The Presbyterian's have remodeled their edifice in the mean time and their pulpit has been occupied by three different pastors.

The Record joins with his large circle of friends and co-workers in wishing him to remain and not to sever his connection at this place at present.

Mr. Clark has the matter under consideration and will announce his decision in due time.

THE NEW HOTEL

The Opera House Sold to Wm. Thurlie and Will be Remodeled Into a Hotel.

It will be remembered that mention was made in two columns last week of a projected hotel for Northville. The paper was hereby in the post office before we learned that Wm. Thurlie, a retired lumberman of Bay City, had purchased the opera house block of Dr. Moffat of Lansing, and intended to remodel it into a first class hotel. His plan is to take the office in the northeast corner with the reception room in the part now occupied by the Record office, with the dining room back of the meat market. The proposed plan provides for about twenty sleeping rooms up stairs. When completed, the hotel will be lighted by electricity and heated by steam, and also conducted as a first class hotel in every respect. Mr. Thurlie expresses his intention of building a brick block on the land between the present opera house block and the store of C. J. Ball.

It becomes an interesting question where Stark & Harding and the Record will find quarters when this change is made for there are no empty stores or rooms in town. Where will we move? Well, there is room on the sidewalk somewhere for us.

Much of the interest of a town center for its paper, as that is the vocal organ of the place, and speaks not only to the people of the community, but to others more remote. It is the mirror in which is read the daily life of the town. The local paper makes known the advantages of the place in which it is published and proclaims to the public within its range. The character of the town is expressed by its newspaper honestly and conscientiously conducted, and in nine cases out of ten the people and place are judged by this criterion alone. We hold that there is no intelligent person who fails to comprehend the true relation of the local press, and yet many become in a measure wholly indifferent to its success. It matters not how efficient the editor may be, he needs the co-operation of his patrons, their encouragement and hearty support. The paper may be small and unpretentious, but it has a claim upon every individual and in the majority of cases it is even better than the condition of things would seem to warrant. An editor takes pride in making a good paper, and not infrequently puts forth a greater effort than the support which he receives would justify. There is much against which a newspaper man must contend, of which the public know nothing. He is supposed to be able to do everything in the least possible time, and in the most approved manner, and is open to criticism from every source. His failings and successes are alike censurable. But his greatest trials are chargeable upon the public, which considers itself only as a guest to be entertained and instructed without feeling a reciprocal obligation.

Statistics show there are over a thousand charitable institutions in London, and that there are over a hundred thousand people who go supperless and frequently bedless to sleep.

Another distant relative of Abraham Lincoln has died. The day is not far distant when claimants to relationship to the great war president will loom up as numerous as the men who held Washington's horse or carried a letter for him.

An astute German newspaper, the Vossische Zeitung, objects to the translation of "Tom Brown's School-days" into the language of the fatherland on the ground that it is "not without danger to growing youths," and should be given only to such boys as are sure not to imitate the "mad tricks" of its hero.

Children of fame about to cross the great divide would be more likely to receive handsome treatment at the hands of the press if they should defer the journey for a little while. The obituaries have been overworked of late and have run their stock of pretty phrases so low that they could scarcely do a new death justice.

The litigant who not long ago emerged from a Montana war contest laden with the spoils of victory to the extent of millions fell "downstairs" at Victoria recently and no poor man's skull could have been more fatally cracked. There is at least the lesson in the incident that people who think fortune will always smile have not studied the caprices of the goddess.

The London Telegraph, commenting upon the proposal to annex the Hawaiian islands to the United States says: "We could not allow the United States to annex the islands." Tutu Don't get bumpkins. It isn't a question of "allowing" dear Telegraph. Say "we could not afford to have the United States annex the islands" and then send somebody over to "talk business."

With the close devices resorted to by the poor of Paris and the many singular occupations followed for a livelihood, it is singular it does not occur to one of them to eke out a subsistence by gathering up spent bullets sown broadcast on the field of honor. There are never any corpses to be gathered up and no honor to be found, as nearly as can be seen by an outsider, but there are bullets till you can't rest.

That farmer who suffers himself to be governed by rules laid down by his father and grandfather before him, who plants at a certain season because his grandfather planted at that season, who reaps on a certain date because that was the day of the month on which his grandfather began reaping, who sows his wheat in the same field, his grandfather sowed it fifty years ago, is as much behind the times as a post-horse is behind the telegraph.

The English army officer sent over to reconstruct the Canadian militia and render it efficient to resist the awful, predatory designs of the United States has gone back home and reported his task impossible. The young Canadians won't arm and drill for the foreign imperial government, whose rule they do not like, and instead of living in fear of the United States Miss Canada, all willing, awaits advances as a modest maiden should.

The circumstance was noted recently that a trust company in Detroit had given a muscular pugilist a chance to earn an honest penny by thumping gumption and morality into a man about to elope with a handsome young woman, the woman being the company's ward. It is an equal pleasure to note that the trial of the officers of the trust company resulted in triumphant acquittal. They got a little of the beaten track of business, but they shine as reformers.

The performance of the young Newburger Donoghue in skating at the rate of a hundred miles in a little over seven hours, beating his Norwegian competitor, as well as the American who had held the world's record at 100 miles for fourteen years, is so remarkable that some explanations seem to be considered necessary. His wonderful feat is in a measure accounted for by the fact that he wore a new skate, which resembles the dull blade of a carving knife about two feet long. It is said to give the wearer about the same advantage over his competitors on the ice that the bicycle sulky gives the trotter on the race track. The new skate does not explain everything, however. Young Donoghue has shown himself to be a very marvelous skater, and it will be a long time before his record is eclipsed.

The latest dynamiter released from an English prison on condition of leaving at once for the United States is about due at New York. Someday there will be some one bold enough to inquire by what right England uses this country as a penal colony.

If other nations send as many ships to the naval review as they talk of doing, the navy of this country will feel like turning into some babbling rivulet and hiding amongst the bulrushes. It is not yet ready to compete in the heavy-weight class.

RECALLED BY A CHAPTER IN TENNYSON'S LIFE.

Walter Besant Depicts the Method of Education by the Birch-Temptation of a Cane Too Much for Its Possessor.

A lost chapter in Tennyson's life is supplied by Professor Hales in a paper in the current number of the Gentleman's Magazine, writes Walter Besant in the Philadelphia Times. It is a description of Louth grammar school, at which Tennyson was a scholar from 1817 to 1822 or thereabouts. The professor was there for a short time some thirty years later. As the school was then so it had been in Tennyson's time—a medieval school, where they learned by rote, used Dean Coles—called the Eton—Latin grammar, and were caned with vigor. The school seal represented a boy "horsed" on a school-fellow's back and illustrating the school motto, "Qui parit virga, odidit fillium." Caning? All day long the master went up and down, cane in hand laying it on. What says the professor? The boys sat on a long form, the boy "going on" being perched upon a chair, the master walked up and down. "His seat was immediately in front of the form on which we sat, so that he could get at the entire class as he paced up and down. He very frequently availed himself of his opportunities and, with the masterly dexterity and quickness which distinguished him, often succeeded in 'touching up' each one of us in the course of a single promenade."

Sometimes, what brains we had were, I suppose, perfectly added by the horrors we were going through, and so, doing our work worse and worse, the lesson would end in a general rout. The class would be seen flying in all directions hotly pursued by the ubiquitous rod, which seemed at these times to awake into a fiendish life of its own, and to bite and lacerate spontaneously.

That was the kind of school that used to be. It is not quite gone yet. There is one great school at least, where the masters are permitted to carry canes and to use them on the boys. Never would I allow any boy in whom I was interested to go to that school. My own experience, though not quite so ferocious as the professor's has been pretty bad. My first teacher was an excellent scholar, one who had been captain of Westminster and a fellow of his college; he was a sound theologian and preached admirable sermons of the high and dry type; he was a good man and charitable; he had also been champion of the light-weights at Oxford. Yet he had but one method of meeting incapacity and idleness. That method stood always ready for use in a corner. I generally escaped, because I was born industrious. But there was one day when I caught it. That was Monday, when I had to repeat the catechism right through. In that admirable summary of Christian doctrine there are two hidden rocks, on one or the other of which I always split. One was the answer to the question, "What dost thou in the Lord's prayer?" The other was the right order of the short answers at the end. I always mixed up these short answers. They had no apparent connection with the question; they had no meaning to me—not the least; they were not explained, and one answer seemed to me just as good as another. So I gave whatever answer first came into my head—with results.

Leaving this good old scholar. I went to a grammar school. Here the masters carried canes and used them. I remember that all day long one heard the whack! whack! whack! of the cane. All day long it never stopped. There was a big room and two or three smaller rooms—whack! whack! whack! In the big room sat two or three masters, and while the Latin grammar was being heard—whack! whack! whack!—at one end, the arithmetic was practiced at the other—whack! whack! whack! As the door generally stood open we could hear the voice of the head—whack! whack! whack!—roaring rebuke from one room, while from another—whack! whack! whack!—came the thinner voice of the French master, but always roaring and abusing—whack! whack!—with boxing or ears and calling of names—whack! whack! whack! The first morning that I joined the boys of my form ought to have done some exercise which they did not do—whack! whack! whack! "I'll cane the whole class," roared the master; and did it—there were twenty of us. He caned the innocent newcomer, me as well—whack! whack! I had to take my turn, though I was a new boy. "Pluck up, young'un." I still hear the other boys say encouragingly as I stood out—whack! whack! whack!—to take my punishment for an offense I had not committed. Whack! whack!

I now understand that the possession of a cane and the power of using it are too much for most men. A thirst of cruelty is easily generated; a brutal lust for giving pain is born; they must always be using that instrument; no man in the world should be trusted with this encouragement to cruelty. There is some black cell in man's brain which makes him easily inclined to cruelty. The examples of Nero and the Grand Inquisitor, and Bishop Bonner and Robespierre have been equalled in thousands of schools. There are things told of girls' schools; there are things whispered of nunneries; there are cases of apprentices; all showing that the irresponsible power of inflicting or ordering instant punishment should never, never, be placed in the hands of anyone—man or woman. Does not the old plan graphically told by Professor Hales show why boys loathed and hated the very memory of their school, and why the calling of a schoolmaster was held in contempt?

His Internal Impudence. Trivet—What are you doing, Dicer? Dicer—I am still looking for something to turn up. Trivet—But you don't have to look further than your nose for that.—Truth.

THE BABY CHIMPANZEE.

He Has an Ear for Music and Knows When It Salts Him.

He is a six-months old baby, of extremely grave and deliberate manners, and perhaps, the most irresistibly comical creature which has ever been seen in London. He is extremely well behaved, not in the least shy, and is as friendly with strangers as with his keepers.

His arms are as strong as those of a man, while his legs and feet seem to be used less for walking than as a subsidiary pair of arms and hands. He is thus able, when much interested, to hold his face between two hands and to rest his chin on a third, which gives him an air of pondering reflection beyond any power of human imitation.

"He knows there's something up," remarked his keeper, as we entered the house, and the ape came to the bars and sat down to inspect his visitors.

As the sounds of the violin began he suspended himself against the bars and then, with one hand above his head, dropped the other to his side and listened with grave attention. As the sound increased in volume he dropped to the ground and all the hair on his body stuck up with fear. He then crept away on all fours, looking back over his shoulder like a frightened baby, and taking up his piece of carpet which does duty for a shawl, shook it out and threw it completely over his head and body and drew it tightly around him. After a short time as the music continued, he gained courage and put out his head, and at last threw away the cloak and came forward again.

By this time his hair was lying flat and his feet had given place to pleasure. He sat down and, chewing a straw, sat gravely listening to the music.

"He looks just like our manager when a nice piece is on," murmured the violinist as he concluded his share of the serenade.

The piccolo first frightened the monkey, but the soon held out his hand for the instrument which he was allowed to examine. The flute did not interest him, but the bagpipes—reproduced on the violin—achieved a triumph. He just hunched his nose against the bars and then, scrambling to the center of the cage, turned head over heels and lastly, sitting down, chucked handfuls of straw in the air and over his head, smiling, as the keeper said, with delight and approval.

SINCERE THOUGH PROFANE. The Admirer of a Divine Spoke With Earnestness and Vigor.

The late Dr. Bethune, of Brooklyn, loved to tell a joke illustrating the earnestness of one of his parishioners. He was much beloved by his congregation, and the Buffalo News says their indignation was great and righteous when they learned that the doctor had been offered a much larger salary by a wealthy church over in New York. The people in Brooklyn were greatly excited while the doctor's answer was in abeyance, and when they learned that he had refused the temptation and was determined to remain with them their joy was unbounded. Immediately after this Dr. Bethune was crossing Fulton ferry, and on entering the cabin he found every seat occupied and the floor space crowded. Suddenly he heard his name called, and turning round, saw a big, bewhiskered man standing beside him.

"Doctor, take my seat," said the man.

"Thanks, but I will not disturb you," said the doctor.

"But sir," protested the man as he pointed to the still vacant seat, "it is an honor for me to do it."

"You are very kind," said the doctor, about to sit down.

"Yes, sir," pursued the man. "I'm glad to give it. Ever since I heard of that big church trying to get you away from Brooklyn on a call of $5,000 and your telling them that you'd see them—d first I have had great respect for you. And if sir, you'd ever like to take a little turn on Wall street come and see me. Here's my card."

A Red Blot in History. From 1791 to 1890, when warfare was almost continuous, 2,080,000 Frenchmen were successively called under arms. In 1890 only 677,598 remained. In ten years nearly 1,400,000 soldiers had disappeared. And this was only the republic's share. That of the consulate and empire far surpassed it. Napoleon's consumption of men is estimated at 2,000,000 by the most moderate statisticians, and at 3,000,000 by M. Richet in his most careful estimate. Broca and Thiers admit the loss of 1,900,000 of Frenchmen, the rest belonging, according to them, to the allies incorporated in the French armies. But the total remains the same. "It stands as a great red blot in the history." In the language of General Forey, "A man entered the military service at that time never to get out of it alive."—New York Sun.

SAVAGE TRAINED APES.

THEY MAKE A FEARFUL SCENE IN A THEATER.

A Terrible Incident in a Variety Show—A "Professor" and His Wife Badly Mangled by Two Infuriated Beasts.

The patrons of the Wigwam theater witnessed an exciting battle lately, says the San Francisco Examiner, and it was not down on the program. It was a fight in which a man and woman did battle for their lives against a couple of monster apes, and it was only by the courage and presence of mind of some ten attaches of the theater that the enraged brutes were prevented from killing both people.

Part of the evening's entertainment was furnished by Professor Samwells' troupe of trained animals, consisting of goats, dogs, cats and five large apes. Samwells handles the animals himself while on the stage; his wife and her assistants remain in the wings, ready to take charge of the animals as they go off the stage. The monkeys are kept in a large cage, and have always been looked after by Mrs. Samwells, she taking the animals out and returning them to the cage when her husband is through with them. During the last part of the performance the largest ape is dressed like a lady and rides about the ring in a little phaeton drawn by one of the dogs.

When the ape was sent on the stage by Mrs. Samwells that night it was rather sullen and at first refused to get into the vehicle. It showed its teeth every time its master approached, but at last was induced to take its seat in the phaeton.

The professor patted it on the head and then stooped to adjust the harness on the canine steed. Then quick as a flash the cunning brute sprang from the vehicle and fastened its long tusks in his left wrist, driving them clear to the bone. In an instant the house was in an uproar, women screamed and strong men turned their heads aside as the maddened brute bit and tore at the man's arm, while his screams for help rang through the building.

"Grace! Grace! For God's sake take him off! He is killing me!" shouted Samwells to his wife. Mrs. Samwells who was holding another huge ape in her arms, threw the animal from her and rushed on the stage to her husband's assistance. She seized the big ape by the throat and tried with all her strength to choke the beast in order to open its jaws, but she might as well have tried to strangle a Bengal tiger.

She then did what few men would have done—thrust her hand into the brute's mouth and by a superhuman effort wrangled the terrible jaws apart. It was just at this instant that the ape which Mrs. Samwells had left in the wing sprang on the stage, as if to the assistance of its comrade.

There was a cry of "look out for the other one," and the next instant the newcomer had seized the woman by the left hand and driven his sharp teeth clear through it. Samwells now free from the grasp of the first monster, rushed to aid his wife, but he could render her but little assistance, as both his hands were almost torn to pieces.

At this moment several men rushed on the stage, and the fierce brutes were beaten into insensibility with clubs and pieces of boards torn from the scenery. The victims were carried from the stage, as soon as the patrol wagon arrived, were taken to the receiving hospital.

Dr. Simpson, who was in attendance, found that the man's left thumb was almost torn from the hand. The tendons were completely severed, and there were a dozen wounds reaching from the tips of the fingers far up on the wrist. The wounds made by the animal's teeth looked as if they had been inflicted by a tiger, so badly was the flesh torn and lacerated. Every one of the wounds had to be sewn up, and after this was done and the dressing applied Mrs. Samwells was attended to. She was not nearly so badly injured as her husband, but her hand was badly torn.

The animals that made the attack were purchased in this city about two years ago in one of the bird stores, and up to the time they displayed such fiendish tendencies had been extremely docile. The bite of an ape is regarded by surgeons as fully as serious as that of a mad dog, and even if the man's life is saved it is a hundred to one that he will have to suffer the amputation of one, if not both, his hands.

Making It Easy. "So," snarled the father, "you have asked my daughter to marry you, and having gained her consent, you come to me for mine?"

"That's about the dimensions of it," responded the young man bravely.

"Do you know, sir, that I have no money and can give her nothing?" The young man patted the old one on the back encouragingly.

"That's all right, old fellow," he said, "neither have I, so the change will not prove a serious shock to her. What do you say? Is it a go?" It went.

FOR IRISH HOME RULE

PLAN SUBMITTED TO PARLIAMENT YESTERDAY.

Enthusiastic Reception of Prime Minister Gladstone in the Commons—His Speech Advocating the Measure a Masterly Composition.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The scenes at the opening of Parliament to-day, upon the occasion of the beginning of the real fight for Irish home rule, will long be remembered. While Mr. Gladstone yet slept the palace yard was crowded with members and throngs of people eagerly awaiting the opening of the Commons. The early arrivals were those prominent in the Irish cause. Among them were P. J. Foley, member for Connemara; David Sheehy, Secretary of the Irish National Federation; John Roche, Nationalist member for East Galway; and Dr. Charles Tanner, member for Cork. By 10 o'clock sixty members were at the doors awaiting admission. The inner lobby was packed with members at noon, and when the doors were opened the members threw aside their dignity and rushed in a disorderly fashion for seats, shouting and struggling for the best places. Many were thrown violently to the floor and bruised and trampled upon. The veteran Caleb Wright, member for southwest Lancashire, 82 years of age, fell in the crush and was severely injured, being knocked down and trampled on. He was rescued by John Burns with difficulty. Not a few members became angry, and there were several sharp fights at various points. All were finally seated and eager for the feast of Gladstonean eloquence.

Mr. Gladstone entered the House of Commons at 3:30. Every Liberal and Irish Nationalist stood up and greeted him with prolonged and enthusiastic cheers. When Mr. Gladstone arose to introduce the home rule bill there was another demonstration so enthusiastic and irrepressible that it was several minutes before he could be heard.

Mr. Gladstone spoke as follows in a clear, strong and resonant voice: "I may, without impropriety, remind the House that the voices which have usually pleaded the cause of Irish self-government in Irish affairs within these walls have during the last seven years been almost entirely mute. I recur, therefore, to the period of 1883, when a proposition of this kind was submitted on the part of the government of the day, and beg to remind the House of the position then taken by all the promoters of these measures. We said that we had arrived at a point in our transactions with Ireland where the two roads parted. You have, we said, to choose one or the other. One is the way of Irish autonomy according to instructions I have just referred to; the other is the way of coercion. That is our contention. It will be the recollection of the House that that contention was most stoutly and largely denied. It was said over and over again by many members opposite: 'We are not coercionists; we do not adopt that alternative, and neither can we adopt it.' [Ministerial cheers.] That assertion of theirs was undoubtedly sustained by the proposals, especially from the dissentient Liberals, of various plans dealing with Irish affairs. Those plans, though they fell entirely short in principle and in scope of Irish self-government, yet were of no trivial or mean importance. They went far beyond what has heretofore been usually proposed in the way of local self-government for Ireland."

Well, what has been the result of the dilemma as it was then put forward on this side of the house and repelled by the other? Has our contention that the choice lay between autonomy and coercion been justified or not? [Liberal cheers.] What has become of each and all of those important schemes for giving Ireland self-government in the provinces and giving her even a central establishment in Dublin with limited powers? All vanished into thin air. But the reality remains. The roads were still autonomy or coercion. The choice lay between them, and the choice was to repel autonomy and embrace coercion. You cannot always follow coercion in an absolutely uniform method. In 1886, for the first time, coercion was imposed on Ireland in the shape of a permanent law added to the statute book. This state of things constituted an offering against the harmony and traditions of self-government. It was a distinct and violent breach of the promise on the face of which union was obtained. That permanent system of repression inflicted upon the country a state of things which could not continue to exist. It was impossible to bring the inhabitants of the country under coercion into sympathy with the coercion power.

Mr. Gladstone proceeded to dilate at length upon the circumstances under which the act of union was passed, the promise of equality in the laws and of commercial equality under which union was effected. He said: "It was then prophesied confidently that Irishmen would take their places in the Cabinet of the United Kingdom, but it had been my honored destiny to sit in Cabinets with no less than sixty or seventy statesmen of whom only one, the Duke of Wellington, was an Irishman, while Castlereagh is the only other Irishman who has sat in the Cabinet since union. Pitt promised equal laws when the union was formed, but the broken promises made to Ireland are unhappily written in indelible characters in the history of the country. Coming to 1832, when the resurrection of the people began, and thence down to 1890, Ireland can present only a small minority in favor of restoring to her something in the nature of constitutional rights and practical self-government. It is to me astonishing that so little weight is attached by many to the fact that before 1886—before 1885 indeed—Irish wishes of self-government were represented only by a small minority. Since 1885, when the wide extension of the franchise was protected by the secret ballot, Ireland's position has been improved in Parliament. In 1888 there were eighty-five nationalists, or more than five-eighths. [Cheers.] They have been reduced from eighty-five to eighty under circumstances somewhat peculiar. [Hear, hear.] I must own frankly to myself among others, for reasons totally and absolutely unintelligible. [Loud cheers.]

HUGH O'DONNELL ON TRIAL

The Work of Impugning a Jury Begun at Pittsburgh—Court Room Crowded. PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 14.—The case of Hugh O'Donnell, the first chairman of Homestead's famous advisory board, was called for trial before Judge Stowe this morning. O'Donnell is charged with murder during the riot of July 6. The court room was packed long before the officers made their appearance. O'Donnell stood while the indictment, charging him with the murder of T. J. Conners, a Pinkerton, the same upon which Clifford and Circhlow were tried, was read to him. In response to the usual question, O'Donnell replied firmly: "Not guilty." After the preliminary details were disposed of, the work of impugning a jury was begun and will probably consume the greater part of to-day's sessions of court. O'Donnell will be defended by Messrs. Anderson of Youngstown, O'Brien of St. Paul, Paul, Brennan, McCall, Beardon, Cox and Montooth of Pittsburgh.

World's Fair Souvenir Coins

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

5,000,000 of which were donated to the World's Columbian Exposition by the Government, are being rapidly taken by an enthusiastically patriotic people.

As there early promised to be a demand for these Souvenirs that would render them very valuable in the hands of speculators, the Exposition Authorities decided to place the price at and sell them direct to the people, thus realizing $5,000,000, and using the additional money for the further development of the Fair.

Considering the fact that there were but 5,000,000 of these coins to be distributed among 65,000,000 people, in this country alone (to say nothing of the foreign demand,) and that many have already been taken, those wishing to purchase these mementoes of our Country's Discovery and of the grandest Exposition ever held, should secure as many as they desire at once.

Realizing that every patriotic American will want one or more of these coins, and in order to make it convenient for him to get them, we have made arrangements to have them sold throughout the country by all the leading Merchants and Banks. If not for sale in your town, send $1.00 each for not less than five coins, by Post-office or Express Money-order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft, with instructions how to send them to you, all charges prepaid, to Treasurer World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, Ill.

There was a general cleaning of snow and ice from the walks Tuesday morning.

Rumors are afloat that there is to be a brick block built on Main street this season.

Miss Lulu Boget was very pleasantly surprised Monday evening by a number of her Northville friends calling on her in the form of a surprise party.

A very pleasant party assembled last Tuesday evening at the residence of Mr. H. A. Lee in honor of Mrs. Lee's birthday, to say she was greatly surprised doesn't express it, many beautiful presents were brought as tokens of esteem from her numerous friends. A very enjoyable evening was spent and the party dispersed wishing her many happy returns of the day.

The Salem social club are to have a hop, tomorrow, Friday evening.

Large sleigh-loads of people went last Friday evening to the socials at the residences of H. M. White and B. A. Northrop.

The regular meeting of Orient chapter O. E. S. occurs Friday evening, Feb'y 17, at seven o'clock sharp. A full attendance is requested.

The Presbyterian society have arranged with Rev. J. M. Bejding to supply their pulpit indefinitely. Services will be held at their church next Sunday.

A. D. Power & Son have secured a very favorable location for a cheese factory at So. Lyon and intend to erect and operate over there this coming season.

The lady Macabees will give a "cobweb" social Wednesday evening, Feb. 22, at the residence of E. S. Hastings, Cady street. Admission tea etc. All are cordially invited.

When in Detroit, you will do well to stop at the Wayne hotel, opposite the M. C. depot. No hotel in the state surpasses the Wayne for first class meals or elegant rooms.

Send, or bring, your job printing to the Record office. Our prices are right; our work is the latest style; neatly and promptly executed; we need, and we think deserve, your patronage.

While Mrs. E. P. Kellogg was driving on Center street Wednesday afternoon her horse became frightened and overturned the cutter. Mrs. K. was not seriously hurt but the cutter was badly broken and the horse ran away.

The editors of the Pontiac and Romeo papers are quarreling over which place has the prettiest girls. Go on with your discussion and Northville will take the cake in spite of the Holy Advertiser which always claims everything.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union ladies are happy—they have raised within the past few weeks nearly $400 to apply on the purchase and repair of their Temple, and are now in possession. They have a hall ready for public entertainment.

The pressure for houses, and stores is getting pretty strong here. We know of some empty houses in a neighboring burg that we wish could be dropped down here. We could have a good many more inhabitants if there were only places for them to occupy.

Last Saturday, F. S. Neal received telegraphic news that his father, who had just been visiting here, was in Emergency hospital, Buffalo, and unconscious. Mr. Neal left at once for there, and returned this morning.

The indications all point to a good deal of building being done in Northville this year. On almost every hand we hear buildings being talked of. If all the buildings are built that are now talked of, Northville will have the boom of its history. Let it come, there is room for all.

The following arrangements have been made for the K. P. ball for Friday evening. Tickets for the party are one dollar, spectators will be charged fifty cents for gentlemen and twenty-five cents for ladies. Gentlemen purchasing a full price ticket at one dollar will be entitled to bring two ladies with him.

At Orion the Epworth League have opened a free reading room in that village. They keep it open every evening from 8:30 to 10:00 o'clock. The W. C. T. U. of this place intend doing the same thing as soon as they can get their room in readiness. Good idea, make the room as attractive as it can be made and get in all the boys possible.

The editor of the Milford Times is a pretty and charming young lady. She says: "We carry an exceptionally fine line of samples of wedding stationery and we can have orders filled on short notice. Take heed, if you intend to commit matrimony." What are the young men of the "400" of Milford doing to permit this bid to go unanswered.

The Free Press, of Feb. 6th has the following item in regard to a well known former Northville resident and one in whom we are interested.

"Corliss & Andrus have sold to Henry W. Holcomb 1,074 feet on both sides of Merick avenue, near Crawford street, for $71,000, practically a cash transaction. The frontage has a depth of 165 feet. Mr. Holcomb will improve the property in a manner similar to that of other tracts he has handled in the past. Indeed, he has become noted in real estate and building circles for the enterprise he has shown in this direction, and a large number of the better class of residences in the northwestern part of the city are the result of his energy, push and faith in the growing needs of the city."

Henry Tatham and family are now residents of Detroit, having moved there this week.

William Burich, while at work on the cut-off saw at the factory Wednesday, lost one finger and mutilated the balance of his hand. Dr. Burgess dressed the wound.

A prominent F. & P. M. official is quoted as saying that the Company contemplates a new line from Delray to Monroe, the present terminus. The right of way through the business portion of Monroe has already been purchased.

It will be remembered that Mrs. Geo. Wilcox fell from a step ladder last November while washing windows and broke her wrist. Last week while out sleigh riding the cutter was upset and she fell on her injured arm injuring it worse than it was before. She is nursing a very painful member.

A minister preaching his farewell sermon said: "I leave you, brethren, for three reasons: 1. You do not love me; if you did, you would pay me my salary. 2. You do not love one another; if you did there would be more weddings and less fighting. 3. The Lord does not love you; if He did, there would be more funerals."

A printer may have a bank and quipps and never be worth a cent, have caps and smallcaps and have neither wife nor children; others may fun but he gets along faster by setting. He may make impression without eloquence, and still tell the truth. Through others cannot stand and set, he can set standing, and do both at the same time; may use furniture and have no dwelling; may take and put away pig, yet never see nor eat a pie. A human being, he may be a rat at the same time; may handle a shooting iron, yet know aught of a gun, cannon or pistol. He may lay his form on the bed, yet be compelled to sleep on the floor; may use a dagger without shedding blood; from earth may haudiestars; and he may have sheep's foot and never be deformed.

Assistant state secretary H. M. Fillebrown of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. E. G. Horton, physical director of the Crawfordsville, Ind. Y. M. C. A. and Mr. Ernest Hall of Ann Arbor spent Sunday here in the interest of that society. The mass meeting for men in the opera house was attended by at least 200. Mr. Fillebrown spoke on "Success." The evening meeting in the Methodist church was largely attended and of great interest. At the close a committee was appointed to consider the feasibility of some form of temporary organization for men. Untold good in this state and country and should receive the encouragement of every lover of good and elevating agencies.

An exchange says: "Lift your hat reverently when you meet the teacher of the primary school. She is the great angel of the republic. She takes the bantling fresh from the home nest, full of pouts and passions, an ungovernable little wretch, whose own mother honestly admits she is glad to part with her pet for a whole day. The lady who knows her business takes a whole garload of these anarchists, any of whom, single handed and alone, is more than a match for his parents; and at once puts them in a way of being useful and upright young men and eventually good citizens. But, my dear parents, did you ever stop to think at what expense of toil, patience and soul weariness to the gentle and painstaking primary teacher? Lift your hat to her."

The editor of the Jackson, (Minn.) Republican gives the following good advice: "Don't forget the editor when you have a news item. If your wife whips you let us know, and we'll set you aright before the public. If you have company tell us—if you are not ashamed of your visitors. If a youngster arrives at your house and demands food and raiment, buy a quarter's worth of cigars and come around, and if you are a cash subscriber we will furnish a name for him or her, as circumstances warrant. If you have a social gathering of a few friends, bring around a big cake, six or seven pies and a ham—n't necessarily to eat, but as a guarantee of good faith. You needn't bother to invite us, as it may be a little too cool for our wardrobe. We mention these things because we want the news."

The man Sullivan, who so brutally murdered his employer near Durand, was a tramp who was picked up largely out of pity. The Express says: "It is worthy of note that Mrs. Leech had a mortal fear of the murderer from the first. Under no circumstances would she remain alone with him one moment; her very soul seemed to revolt at the thought of such a thing. She instinctively felt that he was a dangerous man, that beneath his assumed smoothness lay the disposition of a tiger. Alas, what a pity that her husband could not have felt the same way, and sent the red-headed scoundrel away before he had an opportunity to murder and steal from one who had taken him in and cared for him. Let this be a warning to our people to never, under any circumstances harbor a tramp."

"OUT OF THY LIFE."

"Out of thy life," could I but find... Where the waters of Lethe run...

THE MISADVENTURES OF JOHN NICHOLSON.

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

He was a young man on whom, at the highest point of lovely exaltation, there had fallen a blow too sharp to be supported alone...

Close under the Calton Hill there runs a certain narrow avenue, part street, part by-road. The head of it faces the doors of the prison...

"If you have a beast of a father," said he, "I can tell you I have a brute of a trustee."

"I'm not going to hear my father called a beast," said John, with a beating heart, feeling that he risked the last sound rivet of the chain that bound him to life.

But Alan was quite good-natured. "All right, old fellow," said he. "Mos' respectable man, your father."

John sat in dumb agony. Colette's foal wails and mulate table linen, and even down to Colette's villainous casters, seemed like objects in a nightmare.

It was a sorrowful and a mighty sobered company that came forth again. The vague terror of public opinion weighed generally on them all...

At last, upon a pledge that each should apply to his family with a common frankness, this convention of unhappy young asses broke up...

The rooks were awake in Randolph Crescent, but the windows looked down, discreetly blinded, on the return of the prodigal. John's pass key was a recent privilege...

CHAPTER III. In Which John Enjoys the Harvest Home.

Shortly after breakfast, at which he assisted with a highly tragical countenance, John sought his father where he sat, presumably in religious meditation on the Sabbath mornings.

"This is a time when I do not like to be disturbed," he said. "I know that," returned John, "but I have a want—I've made a dreadful mess of it," he broke out, and turned to the window.

"Maclean gave me four hundred pounds, to put in the bank, sir," began John, "and I'm sorry to say that I've been robbed of it!"

"Robbed of it?" cried Mr. Nicholson, with a strong rising inflection. "Robbed? Be careful what you say, John!"

"I can't say anything else, sir; I was just robbed of it," said John, in desperation, sulkily.

"And where and when did this extraordinary event take place?" inquired the father.

"On the Calton Hill about twelve last night,"

"The Calton Hill?" repeated Mr. Nicholson. "And what were you doing there at such a time of night?"

"Nothing, sir," says John. Mr. Nicholson drew in his breath.

"And how came the money in your hands at twelve last night?" he asked, sharply.

"I neglected that piece of business," said John, anticipating comment, and then in his own dialect: "I clean forgot all about it."

"Well," said his father, "it's a most extraordinary story. Have you communicated with the police?"

"I have," answered poor John, the blood leaping to his face. "They think they know the man that did it. I dare say the money will be recovered, if that was all," said he, with a desperate indifference...

"Your mother's watch, too?" asked Mr. Nicholson. "Oh, the watch is all right," cried John. "At least, I mean I was coming to the watch—the fact is, I'm ashamed to say, I had pawned the watch before. Here is the ticket; they didn't find that; the watch can be redeemed; they don't sell pledges."

"The lad panted out these phrases, one after another, like minute-guns; but at the last word, which rang in that stately chamber like an oath, his heart failed him utterly; and the dreaded silence settled on father and son."

It was broken by Mr. Nicholson picking up the pawn ticket: "John Frogs, 85 Pleasance," he read, and then, turning upon John with a brief flash of passion and disgust, "Who is John Frogs?" he cried.

"To lend it to Houston, sir," says John. "I thought I had forbidden you to speak to that young man?" asked his father.

"Yes, sir," said John, "but I only met him."

"Where?" came the deadly question. "In a billiard room," was the damning answer. Thus, had John's single departure from the truth brought instant punishment. For no other purpose but to see Alan would he have entered a billiard room; but he had desired to practise the fact of his disobedience, and now it happened that he frequented these disreputable haunts upon his own account.

Once more Mr. Nicholson digested the vile tidings in silence, and when John stole a glance at his father's countenance he was abashed to see the marks of suffering.

"Well," said the old gentleman at last, "I cannot pretend not to be simply bowed down. I rose this morning what the world calls a happy man—happy, at least, in a son of whom I thought I could be reasonably proud."

But it was beyond human nature to endure this longer, and John interrupted almost with a scream. "Oh, wheest!" he cried. "That's not all! That's not the worst of it! It's nothing! How could I tell you were proud of me? Oh! I wish, I wish that I had known! But you always said that I was such a disgrace! And the dreadful thing is this: We were all taken up last night, and we have to pay Colette's fine among the six, or we'll be had up for evidence—sheebeen it is. They made me swear to tell you. But for my part," he cried, bursting into tears, "I wish that I was dead!" and he fell on his knees before a chair and hid his face.

Whether his father spoke, and whether he remained long in the room, or at once departed, are points lost to history. A horrid turmoil of mind and body; bursting furore; broken vanishing thoughts, now of indignation, now of remorse; by an elementary will of consciousness, of the smell of the horse-hair on the chair bottom; of the jangling of church bells that now began to make day horrible throughout the confines of the city; of the hard floor that bruised his knees; of the taste of tears that found their way into his mouth; for a period of time, the duration of which I can't guess, while I refuse to dwell longer on its agony, these were the whole of God's world for John Nicholson.

When at last, as by the touching of a spring, he returned again to clearness of consciousness and even a measure of composure, the bells had but just-done ringing, and the Sabbath silence was still marred by the patter of belated feet. By the clock above the fire, as well as by these more speaking signs, the service had not long begun; and the unhappy sinner, if his father had really gone to church, might count on near two hours of only comparative unhappiness. With his father, the superlative degree returned infallibly. He knew it by every shivering fiber in his body; he knew it by the sudden dizzy whirling of his brain, at the mere thought of that calamity. An hour and a half, perhaps an hour and three-quarters, if the doctor was long-winded, and then would begin again that active agony from which, even in the dull ache of the present, he shrank as from the bite of fire. He saw, in a vision, the family pew, the solemn cushions, the Bibles, the psalm books, Maria with her smelling salts, his father sitting spectacled and critical, and at once he was struck with indignation, not unjustly. It was inhuman to go off to church, and leave a sinner in suspense, unpunished, unforgiven. And at the very touch of criticism, the paternal sanctity was lessened; yet the paternal terror only grew, and the two strands of feeling pushed him in the same direction.

Jenny Lind's Benevolence. The Century is printing a series of papers on Notable Women. We quote from the paper on "Jenny Lind." "The entire proceeds of the American tour, amounting to more than £20,000, were devoted by Jenny Lind to various benevolent objects. From the days of her early girlhood it had been her chief delight to use for the good of others the wealth which her genius had brought her. She was ever ready to sing for a hospital, or a college, or a poor fellow-artist, or for the chorus, orchestra, or scene-shifters of the theaters where she appeared. 'Is it not beautiful that I can sing so?' she exclaimed when she was told that a large number of children would be saved from wretchedness by a concert she had given for their benefit. The volumes which contain such a record might well bear the label which Jenny Lind's old Swedish guardian placed around the packet containing her letters to him, 'The mirror of a noble soul.'"

A Plain-Spoken Linguist. A little Russian boy who has a French governess and is always obliged to talk French, was playing in the barn one day and suddenly discovers that the building is on fire. Rushing to the school-room he exclaims: "Oh, mademoiselle, I don't know whether it's le feu or la feu, but anyhow there's a big blaze in the barn!"

POLLY'S REVELLE.

Calling Coffee Cocoon. Became a nuisance. Some years ago when stationed on the coast of West Africa, I bought a gray parrot, which in appearance greatly surpassed the general run of these birds both in size and beauty of plumage, and which, though I paid little or no attention to his education, turned out to be a remarkably apt scholar.

The first indication of his powers was a perfectly successful attempt to whistle the reveille, which, of course, he had heard on the bugles every morning since his introduction to the barracks, and before long he had mastered pretty nearly every bugle call known in the British army. One morning I was awakened by his calling in a loud tone, and in an exact imitation of my own voice: "Coffee, Coffee! you imp of darkness, where are you? Hurry up and bring my cocoon." Coffee being a little native, as black as your boot, whom I employed to work for me, this incident naturally tickled my risibilities, and I laughed immoderately, the bird joining in the cacophonous and again imitating my tones exactly.

From that time on he was liable to pick up anything heard and repeat it at inopportune moments, which was all very well in its way, but was apt to grow monotonous. Regularly at 5 a.m. he would start a monologue, interspersed with bugle calls and diabolical peals of laughter, which awoke me. I never am very amiable under circumstances of that kind, and would have my shoes on the first missile that came handy at him. If I happened to go anywhere near the mark he would ejaculate: "Poor Polly! Poor, poor Polly!" in such doleful accents that my wrath was invariably converted into laughter, in which the bird joined with great gusto. Sometimes I would yell to the boy and say: "Coffee, take this infernal bird away!" and all down the corridor, like the very echo of my voice, would come: "Take this infernal bird away, bird away!"

"Polly" after awhile became quite a character, and I was offered considerable sums for him, but I decided to take him home and make him a present to the "governor." Of course on shipboard he was among the sailors, and equally, of course, he learned quite a number of commands incidental to their calling, together with a less desirable accompaniment of bad language. When I got him home the way he would yell at an imaginary crew to "square away the main brace," and various other nautical feats was a caution to snakes, accompanying his commands with a string of profanity that would make the toughest old salt hide his head with shame or envy, and invariably indulged in these tricks when we had lady callers.

LORE OF THE LANGUAGES.

Statistics as to the Tongues Spoken by the Human Race.

Some interesting statistics have been compiled by a Frenchman and reproduced in the Courier-Journal respecting the different languages spoken in various parts of the world. He states that the language in which Shakespeare and Milton wrote was spoken by less than 6,000,000 human beings. French was the mother tongue of at least 30,000,000 people at a time when English was spoken by less than 16,000,000, and 50,000,000 of French speaking people were living when the revolution broke out in 1789. Between forty and fifty years the English language equalled the German in number of those who spoke it, and now the latter is left far behind. German is now spoken by 10,000,000 persons in the Austro-Hungarian empire, by 46,000,000 in the German empire, by 40,000,000 in Belgium, and by about 2,950,000 persons in Switzerland. German is also spoken by about 2,020,000 persons in the United States and Canada, giving a total of about 60,000,000 who use the German language. French is spoken by the 38,000,000 inhabitants of France, by 2,500,000 people in Belgium, by 2,000,000 in Alsace-Lorraine, by 600,000 in Switzerland, by 1,500,000 in the United States and Canada, by 600,000 in Hayti and by 1,500,000 in America, India, the West Indies and Africa—in all about 45,000,000. English is spoken by 37,000,000 persons in the British Isles, by probably 57,000,000 of the 60,000,000 inhabitants of the United States; by 4,000,000 persons in Canada, by 3,000,000 in Australia, by 3,700,000 West Indians and by 1,000,000 in India and other British colonies, bringing the total of the English-speaking race to over 100,000,000.
