A BOOMING YEAR.

Northville Will Experience a Regular Building Boom This Season.

A LARGE BUSINESS BLOCK.

And Sixteen Residences Are Already Under Course of Construction.

Present indications point to one of the most prosperous periods Northville has seen for some years past. There are new buildings, especially residences, springing up on every hand. We call to mind just now some fourteen residences already contracted for, or under course of construction. In detail they are as follows:

James Beatty's new residence head Main street, to cost $5,000, is well under way.

Al. Blair's new house and other buildings on Rogers street will cost, when complete, $1,700.

Will Ambler has commenced the erection of a $1,200 residence for himself on Cady street.

S. E. Carrington's new residence on Church street, which has been commenced, will cost upwards of $1,700.

Archie Morris' new house next to Mr. Carrington's, for which the foundation is laid, will cost about $1,300.

Peter Ely is another of the four who are building houses in W. P. Yerkes' addition, Church street. Pete's will cost about $800.

Geo. Bradley has commenced his new house along side of Messrs. Carrington's, Morris' and Ely's and it will figure at about $900.

F. R. Beal is about to build two $1,000 residences on Grace ave., North side. One for W. J. Safford and another for Frank Ainslie.

J. A. Dubuar is finishing up a $750 tenant house over in the Dubuar addition near the railroad track, Northside.

F. D. Butler has his new $1,400 residence in the Buchner addition under way.

A Mr. Mead is building a residence on Grace ave., Northside, next to J. Kimmel's. It will probably cost $1,200.

C. Stewart is putting up a new home on Plymouth avenue which will probably cost $1,000.

Lou Cameron is building a neat new residence on Plymouth avenue to cost about $1,000.

J. Calhoun is about to erect a new house on Grace ave., Northside, to cost $800.

Will Slater is building another house on his lot just south of his residence on Wing street. It will cost in the neighborhood of $1,000.

C. L. Dubuar's new lumber yard sheds, and office will cost $800.

J. A. Dubuar is building a $400 bending and store room on the east side of his factory.

The Ambler Mercantile Co.'s new buildings, office, ice-house, etc., just finished cost something like $2,000.

C. L. Dubuar's new $3,500 Main st. residence was completed this year.

The Horton-Whipple-Highland brick block on Main street will cost some $12,000 and work will soon be commenced upon it.

Besides all this, Mr. Beal and Mr. Dubuar will most likely erect several more houses before the summer is over.

THE GYMNASIUM FUND.

The Directors Render Their Final Statement.

Following is a statement of the receipts and expenditures of the gymnasium fund as rendered by the executive committee:

Amount subscribed	$86.75
" collected	66.75
Balance yet due	$20.00

The expense in detail is as follows: Mr. Ball, lamp $2.00; G. H. Gibson, wood $2.00; Waterman & Co., paper $1.50; Dubuar Mfg. Co., lumber $9.00; Knapp & Yerkes, apparatus, etc., $22.91; H. German, 7 weeks janitor, $12.50; L. Lundy, labor $1.75; D. Shaffer, labor $8.25; B. A. Wheeler, chimneys, $5; G. S. Vanille, lumber $1.45; H. Mooney, rope .50; V. O. Whipple, rings $2.00; L. V. Carpenter, mattress $5.75; H. Jackson, drayage, .25.

Total amt of above bills $70.46
Am't paid on " " 59.96
Yet due " " 10.50
Bal. cash in treasury 6.79
This shows a balance, providing all debts were paid, on the wrong side of the ledger, and it is presumed that the committee would be glad to receive the amount, $20.00, yet due from subscribers.

OUR FOREIGN VISITORS.

Two Highly Connected Finland People Spend a Week in Northville.

It will be remembered that mention was made in these columns last week of the visit at this place of Dr. Oscar Nordqvist and wife of Finland. Mr. N. is the Inspector of Fisheries of that far away country and is in this country investigating this industry. He has now visited all our leading government and state hatcheries. His term of office is not like our officers; but his commission is for life. Imagine the happy smile that would light up Commissioner Clark's countenance if such an appointment should fall to him.

Mr. Nordqvist is a great scientist and has made extended trips in pursuit of his chosen study, zoology. He is also a linguist and speaks fluently seven languages. In 1878 the king of Sweden decided to send out an arctic expedition to explore the passage north of Russia and Siberia, known in history as the North-east expedition. Mr. N. was chosen, on account of his fitness for the position, as scientist and interpreter. The expedition passed to within 60 miles of Behring Straits where they were caught in the ice and were held for ten months. To find them the Jeannette relief expedition was sent from America. The relief ship, it will be remembered, was destroyed by the ice and nearly all of the crew perished. The Swedish expedition passed the winter alright and in the following summer completed the passage and passed through Behring Straits, landing at Alaska. They passed on south to Japan, China, India, through the Suez canal and home, completely circling Europe and Asia. They have the experience of being the only ones who have ever made the north-east passage.

Mrs. Nordqvist, who is in company with her husband, is an accomplished lady, speaking five languages and is a skilled musician. Her father is minister of correspondence, a position similar to our Secretary of the Interior. After a few days' visit they go from here to the world's fair, expecting to return home in June. Mrs. N. is a delegate to the Woman's Congress which meets in Chicago next month. They left their home in January and on account of the ice in the Baltic sea had to come by St. Petersburg, Berlin, Liverpool and London and have visited the principle cities of this country, including Northville which they think one of the finest. They are highly pleased with the workings of the U. S. fish hatchery here. Mr. Nordqvist says he considers that Mr. Clark of this place and Mr. Antisdal of Maine are two of the best posted fish-culture men in the world.

IT WAS ALL A HOAX.

Northville to Be Set on Fire. We Don't Think.

Quite a fury of excitement was created here Saturday and Monday by the report that a letter had been received through the post-office by Postmaster Horton, the village council, or some one else—anybody and everybody—to the effect that Northville was to be set on fire at once. Everyone was talking about it and although no one seemed to seriously worry about the matter still however, coming as it did so close upon the heels of Plymouth's great disaster, there was a perceptible cloud of restlessness hovering about the town. Monday morning we thoroughly investigated the matter from start to finish and found the whole thing, as was supposed, a hoax. Postmaster Horton informed us that no such letter had been received through the Northville post office by him and the council and everyone else whom it was alleged had received the notice were prompt in their denial. The person who started the lie should be dropped into the center of Northville's famous mill pond.

Will Graduate from Our High School This Year.

Mabel Clark, Marguerite Thompson, Thad Knapp, Ralph Horton, Hoyt Woodman and Roy Smith graduate from the Northville High school this year.

As class officers they have elected Marguerite Thompson, president; Thad Knapp, vice president; Mabel Clark, secretary; Hoyt Woodman, treasurer. Thad Knapp is the valedictorian and Mabel Clark salutatorian of the class.

The class colors are pink and blue; the class flower is the sweet pea.

It will be rather a novel sight to see gentlemen graduate from the Northville schools. We believe the last time it occurred was in '90, when Clarence Clark won his sheepskin.

NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN

A FRENCH statistician thinks he has discovered that the human family is gradually becoming shorter, that the average height of a man in 1610 in Europe was five feet six inches and in 1820 but five feet five inches, and that now it is but five feet three, and three-fourths inches. By the year 4000 A. D. he figures that man will be but fifteen inches high. His figures may be all right for Europe, but he has not taken into account the American tendency. A few observations among the corpulent-eating people of Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky would compel him to change his conclusions.

The growing number of uses to which natural products are applied and the failure thus far to make the earth and the waters more fruitful, in quantity and variety, keeping pace with the requirements for consumption, suggest that the improvident human race may have a kind Providence to thank if it keeps on getting enough to eat and wear. The fact that an average of half a million Chinese die of starvation each year may not sustain the Mosaic theory, but it indicates the necessity, for mankind to go seriously about the task of augmenting the productive forces of the earth.

A MOMENT'S glance at the plans for many of the temporary hotels now in process of construction in Chicago cannot but be full of suggestion of what may occur before the summer is over unless the utmost care is exercised. Many of these quarters for transient guests are sky-scrapers and, constructed exclusively of wood, constitute veritable tinder boxes which under the high winds, almost continuous in Chicago, would be licked up by flames in sixty minutes. If once the flames are started, for the unprepared guests to escape from them would be next to impossible.

A DISCOURAGED and distracted man blew his brains out a few days ago in New York all because of the continual clanging of the Grace church chimes. It is said there is no more melodious chime in the metropolis and yet even of melody a man may come time after time just as he does of a continuous diet of sugar or simple syrup. After all, of what possible use are church bells or church chimes? Originally their mission was to call people to worship or notify them of the hour of prayer, but who now waits for the call of a bell? Time was when there were no clocks and when sun dials were expensive. Then bells had a useful mission, but that time is gone. Any man who can afford a shirt can now afford a clock, so cheap have they become. It is pitiful that bells must continue to clang and so distract the brains of men that the only relief is found in blowing them out.

Our younger men who are graduates of colleges and universities are found to be lamentably deficient in general information. They know nothing and care nothing outside of the field in which they are especially interested. The result is that we have a large number of persons who are doing a large business on a very small capital. They are thought to be educated, and their opinions ought to be worth something, but most of them do not know enough to know that their education is so partial and incomplete that their opinions are not worth much outside of their own callings. This is the trouble with many specialists, notably the trouble with doctors who make a fat of the eye or the ear or the nerves, and who urge their points often so far to fail to consider these organs in their proper relation to the human system. The world is full of men who are held back in their work by the fact that they do not know enough to beware of their limitations.

The example recently set in New York of permitting a divorced and bankrupt husband to succeed in getting his divorced wife incarcerated in a private insane retreat in order that he might enjoy the fruits of her industry and genius, is a blot on the civilization of the nineteenth century. That was a kind of crime which it was supposed Charles Reade had broken up among English-speaking people when his crusade against it was given such wide circulation. But New York still winks at its perpetration. No longer ago than last month Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer was forcibly removed from her home and placed in a private asylum for the insane at Bronville, Westchester county, N. Y. Without examination as to her sanity, without any chance of defending herself, under cover of darkness, by surprise and violence this successful business woman was taken from her New York home and locked up. The act was almost as atrocious as the dark deeds perpetrated under the tyranny of the Venetian republic.

PERHAPS the armies of Europe are formidable, but Uncle Sam has been figuring on the number of young chaps on his farm fit for military duty and finds that he has 9,000,000 of them. He does not feel in immediate danger from an invasion by Chileans or Cannucks, no matter how mad they may get at him.

ITALIAN feuders have decided not to import their horses on ships carrying immigrants this year. The microbes are getting so large now that they might get on.

THE FARM IN KENTUCKY WHERE LINCOLN WAS BORN.

Yet It Is Unkept and Desolate—Edward Madden Suggests That the Farm Be Purchased by the Government and Properly Cared For.

It is MORE THAN surprising that no one in a nation so populous, so patriotic and so quick to appreciate the merits of its greatest citizen has conceived the thought of buying the birthplace of Lincoln in the old commonwealth of Kentucky. This month marks the anniversary of the assassination of the martyred President, but what more appropriate time could be found to consider the debt the nation owes him?

Here in the County of Hardin, then, and later now, Abraham Lincoln was born. This is the first Liberty Bell ever cast in the history of the world. It is intended that every step in the great work of the Columbian bell shall be marked by some historic anniversary. It will be cast April 24, that day being the anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington as President of the United States. The bell will be rung for the first time July 4, under the supervision of the Board of Lady Managers, in whose care it will remain while in Chicago. At the close of the exposition

Lincoln left Kentucky early in life, first for Indiana and then for Illinois, while Jefferson Davis went to Mississippi. The South has many times manifested its desire, both by private and legislative action, to honor the memory of the unsuccessful President of its Confederacy, not only in the conception of the Richmond monument, but in various other ways.

The State of Kentucky, rich and powerful, and never with more than a nominal debt, has erected monuments to the memory of her heroes who died in the War of the Rebellion and the Black and White wars, to her heroes like Boone, Kenton, and to the martyrs of the war of the Rebellion, yet has oddly enough permitted to pass by neglected and almost forgotten, the home of Abraham Lincoln.

The original cabin in which Lincoln was born is no longer in existence. Union troops rode out of their way returning toward Louisville at the close of the War of the Rebellion and when finally the heirs, a family by the name of Creel took possession, a new house had to be built and very little of the old timber was available. The entire acreage of the estate amounts to about one hundred and five acres, and is within two miles and a half of Hodgenville, or about fifty-seven miles southeast of Louisville. The land is not very productive for crops, but is extremely picturesque in its appearance, and by the addition of adjoining small farms would afford a splendid military parade or camping ground. Monticello, the home of Jefferson, and Mount Vernon, the home of Washington, have been beautified. Grant is to be forever remembered at Riverside. The State of Pennsylvania is ready with $40,000 to improve the battlefield of Gettysburg, and so have other States and the nation erected and maintained with proper care and respect proud memorials of their love for dead heroes. Forty-seven thousand individuals are estimated to have contributed nearly $400,000 to the Grant fund, yet no human being has in all these years come forward to head a popular movement in memory of Lincoln. There are several ways in which the Kentucky place might be acquired and beautified, as for instance, by an act of Congress placing it under the National Cemetery law, by the establishment of a commission or through the medium of a commission of reputable citizens as in the case of the Grant monument fund.

L. T. Durrett of Louisville has in his possession the originals of most of the Lincolniana—marriage certificate, photographs, etc., which were used by Messrs. Nicolay and Hay in their history as it appeared in the Century Magazine. The statement has been made from Chicago that a syndicate has bought and removed to the World's Fair grounds the cabin where Abraham Lincoln was born, but if such a cabin is to be shown here it is not the original, as the writer is thoroughly acquainted with all the facts in the matter.

The illustrations which appear in this article are from the originals referred to. Col. Durrett was formerly the editor of the Louisville Courier, and once fought a duel with the distinguished George D. Prentiss, then editor of the Louisville Journal. These two papers now forming the Courier-Journal. Col. Durrett is wealthy and owns a private library of more than thirty thousand valuable political and historical works. The illustrations accompanying this article are from "Abraham Lincoln: A History" by Messrs. Hay & Nicolay, copyright by the Century Company, New York. EDWARD F. MADDEN.

HE FELT LIKE CRUSOE.

A NATURALIST FINDS AN ISLAND IN THE PACIFIC.

Like Alexander Selkirk, He Could Almost Have Said, "Their Timeliness Is Amazing to Me"—Inhabited by Convicts.

George W. Dunn, the naturalist and collector for the world's fair and different educational institutions and museums, has been exploring the little-known and curious island of Bundalope. He tells a story in the San Francisco Examiner almost as strange as any by Defoe. The island lies out in the Pacific, eighty miles off the lower California coast, and almost opposite Cape San Sebastian. It is thirteen miles long and four wide, and is made up of mountain and valley land, the mountains rising to a height of 4,500 feet.

"I went down there," said Mr. Dunn, "in a little second-ton sloop from San Diego, and after a good deal of trouble got ashore by jumping on a piece of projecting rock. I was well rewarded by what I saw, for altogether it was about the strangest place I ever got into. The foliage was beautiful. The island is partly open and partly covered with trees, consisting of three kinds of palms, cypresses, pines, oaks and others, every one different from those on the mainland. That to me was a curious thing. They were only eighty miles away, too. I had not been on the island long till I ran into herds of odd little brown wrens. They swarmed everywhere and were very inquisitive. When I sat down on rocks to rest the wrens would come and light on my boots and look into my face inquisitively, as if to ask what I was doing there. They were not afraid, for they knew extremely little about man."

"The only human beings on the island were about twenty refractory Mexicans, who were there to look after goats. Mexico uses it as a sort of penal colony, and that is principally why they were there. They were not allowed to fire a gun, and when they wanted any goats they had to run them down or lass them. As these goats have been there many years, have increased to 50,000 and become as wild as deer, you can judge what a feat it is to get one of them. As I saw the fleet greasers after them over the rocks I was minded strongly of the experience of Crusoe in Juan Fernandez. It was equally as strange, and it was true. The Mexicans ran with wonderful speed. Up a mountain or down or across, it made no difference. And they almost always got their goat. I saw them run over piles of rocks and along the edges of precipices. They were just as sure-footed as the goats, and nothing is supposed to excel in this respect. A goat in speed and ability to climb safely over dangerous places. Sometimes they would get almost upon them and then throw their lassos. At other times they would simply run a goat down. There was rarely ever more than one greaser after a goat. The horns and bones of the dead goats are piled in places many feet thick on the ground. There are a lot of wild cats down there, too. Years ago somebody let loose some domestic cats down there. You know how fast they increase. There are lots of them there now, and everywhere over the hills you may see both cats and goats. I suppose the cats live on both birds and fish. The climate is so advantageous, however, that there is always varied animal life there."

"One other strange thing I found in addition to the many I have alluded to, was that if I wanted any water I had to go up hill to get it. The springs are all on top of the mountains. You never find them down by the shore. While wandering about full of wonder at what I saw I found an old crater on top of the mountain chain, midway in the island. The dead crater was curious to behold. It was about 300 feet across and almost that deep. All about it was smooth and broken lava. Piles of basalt were scattered here and there. Earthquakes had shaken and half closed the crater. The captain of my sloop was having a hard time outside. The wind came up lively, and continued to blow steadily, so that I couldn't get aboard of her. The result was I had to stay on the island five days, during which I had to live about all the time on the edible palms."

Physicians explain in an interesting fashion that the electric current which applied to the tongue seems to taste sour. The gustatory or tasting nerves, according to the doctors, are industrious and well-meaning little things, and although it is not their business to take cognizance of any impression made by touch, they do their best to look after anything that happens to come their way. Thus, when subjected to the electric current, they telegraph the fact in their own language to the brain, and as their language is exclusively that of taste they inform the brain that an electric current is sour. The ordinary unscientific citizen, having confidence in the stories told by his gustatory nerves, really believes that the electric current has an acid taste. He forgets himself. Mr. Newcome, kissing his hostess—There's one for mamma and one for baby sister. Miss Una Ware, with apparent indignation—Why, Mr. Newcome, you forget yourself! Mr. Newcome, delightedly—So I did. Well, here's one for myself.—Puck

CONQUERING THE MULE. Novel Methods Lately Put Into Practice in the South. [Abbeyville, S. C., Correspondence.] The good people of Abbeyville have been favored with a visit by a party of mule dealers from Indiana, who have driven a flourishing trade lately. The members of their stock in trade, however, have proved themselves as contrary as is the nature of the beast, and the Indians have put their purchasers up to quite a new wrinkle in the way of persuading the obstreperous animals. A stout strap fastened to each side of the mule's head, which is made as tight as possible around his mouth, is tied to the tail of a horse, mounted by the owner of the mule, and then the horse is started. It is a dead pull on the part of both for a few minutes, and the question seems to be, which will come off first, the horse's tail or the mule's head? After a little time, however, the mule seems to be persuaded that there is a power ahead of him which he cannot exactly ignore, and he trots along contentedly for awhile, only to stop and gaze about him with an expression suggestive of a hope that he can suddenly get loose from his incubus. A tap of the whip or a pressure of the spur upon the horse puts an end to all thoughts of Tramp—Yes, mum, I'm a professional and removed to the World's Fair grounds, the cabin where Abraham Lincoln was born, but if such a cabin is to be shown here it is not the original, as the writer is thoroughly acquainted with all the facts in the matter.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. CURE SICK HEADACHE. Aches they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint, but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all, head-ache is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not. Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not grip or purge, but by their gentle action place all who use them, in vitalis et sentis; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail. CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK. SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Love in Lodgings.

BY ELORENCE WARDEN.

"Well," said Temple, reproachfully, "we know they came down in the same train with us..."

"What if you did? You only danced with her one night at a ball. You can't call that much of an acquaintance..."

Poor Temple winced, and slowly made his way out of the kitchen. He stumbled up the steps to the back door...

"Can you look where you are going?" What's the matter with you? said he crossly.

But Hildred was breathless. "That Cub" was all he could ejaculate as he rushed out.

Temple followed and became witness to a tragic scene. Just inside the front garden gate stood Harry, looking downcast and ashamed of himself...

"There's your bread," he said, putting on the table the newspaper parcel, the covering of which fell loose and disclosed a quarter loaf.

"Well, and the rest of the things?" asked Cameron, with an angry frown gathering on his face.

"I—I, well, you see I haven't brought them. I borrowed your money, Hildred—I'll pay you back, honor bright as soon as I get my next pocket-money to buy these rabbits."

CHAPTER III.

A Desperate Resource.

"What!" moaned Temple, as Hildred's confession exposed the fact that their capitalist was only a man of straw after all.

he was not a bit master of himself, but there was a note in his sweet voice which his brothers had never heard before.

"Did you throw that?" inquired Cameron in a voice of thunder, as he glared at his youngest brother.

"Yes, I did," shouted Harry, who was dancing with rage. "You're a cur, that's what you are, to hurt my animals just because you're angry with me..."

Cameron seized his brother's arm and, having taken the latter by surprise, had dragged him through the doorway before Harry, with the agility of a cat, freed himself from his grasp and squared up at him.

And without waiting for the invitation to be accepted or rejected, he made a lunge at his brother, and the next moment a regular fight began.

"Now, Cameron, though not more than the middle height, was thick-set and sturdy, while Harry, though nearly a head taller than his brother, looked only a sort of half-grown fledgling all legs and wings.

The fact was that the mild-eyed and sweet-voiced "Cub" had been having a fight a day and some times two for the last three months at Eton.

"That's all right," rejoined Harry as sweetly as ever.

A minute later the Cub was in the back garden, with all his rescued pets, crying as if his heart would break because Cameron, when he threw down the guinea-pigs in his passion had killed one of them.

"To every purchaser of our double illustrated Christmas number with colored plate we give a Gold Watch," said Temple softly.

"Well, let's see yours," rejoined Cameron.

I don't believe I, for one, was ever in such a mess before, and I've been in a good many. I can tell you. Now there's only one way to get out, and that is by all sticking together, and by nobody minding what he does as long as it's for the general good.

"Well, but I say—what do you want us to do, you know?" said Temple, deprecatingly.

"If anybody is going to make a confounded fool of himself, by starting objections, he can go outside," said Cameron, dropping his dignity and staring at his elder brother, with an expression of face to which his black eye gave a pathetic ferocity.

"Shut up, Temple," cried Harry, whom victory had made bold.

"I think there can be no serious difference of opinion as to the absolute necessity for the course you propose," Cameron remarked Hildred sententiously.

"Me, too," chimed in Harry. "I'll do whatever you like."

Temple then, reluctantly and with suspicion, acquiesced in the arrangement. But at the very first suggestion which Cameron made, he jumped up and objected again.

"No kidding!" broke in Harry.

"To everybody's surprise, the stately Hildred volunteered to go instead of Temple. But Cameron gave him a series of exaggerated winks to dissuade him from his high enterprise, and Temple was at length half-coaxed, half-buffed into undertaking the distasteful errand."

The two ambassadors were gone nearly two hours. For poor Temple, haunted by fear of being seen by Linda Freese and her father on the threshold of the accursed place, lingered about until Harry persuaded him that if they waited until it was dark all the shops would be closed.

"So they sauntered up to 'Seaview' on the best of terms. Temple still babbling tranquilly of his love, ignorant of the crushing blow which was in store for him.

A little Auburn, Me., boy evidently has older sisters, for when his teacher asked him the other day to define the word "fellow," he spoke right up promptly and said: "A fellow is somebody who comes to see yer."

A man living in Spencer, Mass., saw an advertisement which appeared in the Milton, Fla., Clarion reads as follows: "February 20, 1893. Editor Clarion: Sir—Allow me to tell the public that I lost my wife December 23, and she left three children, and I have found a step-mother for them. All are invited to come and see the marriage. She is a widow, and has been for three years. Look out, Tuesday, March 3, I will marry Mrs. Charlotte Whitaker, W. F. R."

The editor of the Scotsman not long ago received an envelope which bore in addition to his address a request that the indorsed letter should be handed to any bookseller in Edinburgh. The letter ran: "The kind of book that I want is a courting book—a book that will tell me how to talk to the lass that I love, a book that will tell me the words to say to her and the words to ask her when I am courting her. It is the sort of book that I want. No matter how few or how little the words may be."

HUMORESQUE. "Wife," said a henpecked husband, "go to bed." "I won't!" "Sit up, then. I will be obeyed somehow." Teacher—Nellie Smith, compare the word late. Nellie, whose father edits an evening paper—Late, last, extra. "Why did he go on the stage?" "Oh, his friends egged him on." "Why did he leave it?" "The public egged him off." Bridget—What is the result of casting bread upon the waters? Broods—In our house it returns the second day as a pudding. "I know why so many of our girls are unhappy when they are married to foreigners," said Maud. "Why?" asked Mamma. "They can't get well enough acquainted with their husbands to pronounce their names."

FOR MEN.

[Edited weekly by one of them.] Young man set your standard high. Be a hero in the strife.

A lie is a lie, no matter in what pleasing form it may come.

The Grand Rapids Y. M. C. A. has just completed a $90,000 building. It is the pride of the Valley City. Some of our town's people have seen it and know of its beauty. The association numbers 700.

You who are interested in our movement ought to keep a watchful eye on all around you. Many new men are coming into the village and want looking up. Invite them to the meetings. Get them to go to church.

Of course you will find hypocrites in the church, but when you want one quick you can save time by looking outside of it.

Conduct follows ideas and it is a hopeless case for a young man or any one else who never thinks better than he acts.

The topic of Sunday's meeting was "Joseph, the incorruptible young man." Fifty were in attendance.

Every male citizen in our village is cordially invited to our meetings. We hope to see you in attendance as often as possible.

Life on the Plains, at the Northville Methodist church tomorrow, Friday, evening. The opportunity will probably never occur again.

Jap Elliott is the busiest man in town these days. He is doing the villages tapping of the water mains. Elliott is an expert mechanic and in this line and the village did well to secure his services.

Dr. Burgess estimates the cost of putting water works in his barn and lawn at about $35 complete. He thinks to put it in his house or the lawn alone, would have been about half that amount.

The refrigerator bonus fund is not quite all collected as yet. We had hoped to turn over the last dollar to the company a week ago and publish a final statement. There is a little back yet which will probably be paid in season for next week's publication.

Sunday evening Rev. Mr. Beiding will preach his third sermon in the series on Joseph, entitled "Joseph Before the King." These sermons are proving very interesting, the crowded audience attesting to the fact. The descriptions and historic data of the discourses are authentic and drawn from the best writers and Egyptologists of the day.

Northville's Ideal Dramatic Company was to have produced the "Spy of Gettysburg" at Milford next Tuesday evening, but on account of a local entertainment there they very kindly postponed their entertainment for a week later. Here's hoping that Milford people will appreciate the favor and give them a good turn out when they do go. The club had been to the expense of getting their printing all out and the conflicting dates are to be regretted.

Mrs. Custer, widow of the celebrated Gen. Custer, is giving readings in various places in Michigan.—Orion Review.

Not so, my dear brother. Mrs. Custer has given no readings in Michigan this year. The one she gives in Northville tomorrow night is her first in the state during 1893 and it will probably be her last for several months to come.
We were only able to secure her services here through a promise made us last winter that when she next came west again she would visit Northville.
She leaves New York today and arrives here tomorrow night and on Saturday morning leaves for Chicago to attend the opening of the World's fair. This is her only stop and only reading in Michigan and Northville is thus especially favored.

F. D. Butler has commenced the erection of a neat new residence on dolph street.

Something got the matter with one of the factory whistles Monday night and for a time people thought a fire was in progress.

Visitors to Detroit will consult their own interests by stopping at the

At no hotel in the metropolis is so good a service rendered.

For ND, a ladies pocket book containing less than $2.00. Owner can obtain same of Ed. Shields, at Teichner &

Ypsilanti people are now said to be fast taking out cyclone insurance policies. Lightning seldom strikes twice in the same place and that city in all probability will never receive another wind visitor.

No one should miss hearing Mrs.
Gen. Custer, in her famous reading, Garrison Life on the Plains, at the Northville Methodist church tomorrow Friday evening. The opportunity will probably never occur again.

It takes 100 barrels of flour a month to feed the poor at the Wayne county house. This month the contract was let to John Ziegler, a hustling young Walt merchant, and Yerkes Bros
Milford mill ground out the supply.

A person to pick up the RECORD would not know that there was a grocery store in Northville. There are a number of them however, but for some reason they appear to hardly like to have it known. A grocery ad can be made just as profitable as a dry goods or shoe advertisement.

Nothing like going away from home to get news. According to the South Lyon Picket, Power's cheese factory here for the season just past received from the farmers nearly 250,000 lbs. of milk making about 250,000 lbs. of cheese, bringing nearly $25,000 and netting the patrons a fraction over 85 cts per 100 lbs. of milk.

There are so far seventeen water taker applicants. They are as follows:
Wm. Thurlte, F. N. Clark, Al Blair,
Dr. Burgess, E. S. Horton, S. Knapp,
D. B. Northrop, Dr. Kingsbury, Mrs.
R. Beal, M. N. Johnson & Co., C. L.
Dubuar, W. I. Ely, M. D. Gorton,
W. H. Yerkes, F. D. Butler, J. B.
Wilcox. The Mrs. Chadwick block on Main street will also be connected.

When the county newspapers find foreigners invading the field of home merchandise and selling goods to the farmers, they arise and whack the intruders, and advise the farmer to buy his goods of the home merchants.
And when foreign printing houses send their representatives among the merchants and business men, many of these same business men give their printing and get inferior work.

Do not fail to see and hear Mrs. Gen.
Custer in her famous reading, "Garr-son Life on the Plains," at the Methodist church tomorrow, Friday night.
This is purely a piece of personal enterprise on the part of the publisher of this paper. We have gone to a large expense to get this talented lady to visit Northville and if the patronage shows it is appreciated, we have several other treats in store for our citizens.

The Holly Advertiser is usually among the first exchanges which we open up. Last week a magazine looking paper was kicked around the office two or three days before we discovered that it was Jim Slocum's new venture, whereby he changes his 7 col. quarto paper to a 4 col. 16 page. We don't like the look of it ourselves, but then if it suits Bro. Slocum and his other 5,000 readers we don't know but what we might get used to it after a while.

One day last week Milton Carleton our county treasurer was in Canton township, paying off the men who had worked for him during the winter.
While his one hand was filled with silver and gold, some one jostled his arms. A quantity of coin fell into a sailor's big rubber boots, the tops of which were as wide as a bushel basket.
Carleton asked the tar to take off his boots and give up the cash, but the sailor vetoed the bill. Carleton grabbed the man by the collar of the coat, stood him on his head, and took off his boots.

The types last week made us say that the four lower rooms, primary and intermediate, of the Northville schools would get a raise next year from $250 to $350. It should have read from $250 to $300. The summary is as follows as compared with the year 1892 just drawing to a close:

Principal	1892	1893
Preceptress	$650	$1,000
1st Grammar	400	500
2nd "	350	350
3rd "	350	350
1st Intermediate	250	300
2nd "	250	300
1st Primary	250	300
2nd "	250	300
Total	$3,050	$3,400

Last Friday, Peter Gillispie, North-ville's well known miller, slipped down the mill steps injuring himself his ribs while lifting grain in the mill.

He is somewhat better this morning.

It is reported that the Postmaster General has decided that, no postmasters will be removed until the ends of the terms for which they were appointed, except for incompetency to discharge the duties of the office.
Postmasters who were appointed to fill unexpired terms will also be allowed to serve four years. If such ruling has been made it is in the line of reform, and will establish a precedent which future administrations will not dare ignore. If the ruling is carried out Northville's efficient, and popular post-master will hold office until January, 1894.

F. S. Neal the hustling editor of the Northville Record and bustling business man, has engaged Mrs. Gen.
Custer, wife of Gen. Custer the famed Indian fighter, to render in Northville her charming reading, "Garrison Life on the Plains," Friday evening of this week. Mr. Neal has been at considerable pains and expense to secure this famous woman for an entertainment in his town and in all probability, a full house will be the result. No doubt there are some of the South Lyon G. A. R. boys and their families who will attend.—So. Lyon Picket.

An elderly Holly lady named Smith is said to have started seven times by train from that village for Milford and was carried through to Northville, Plymouth, or Detroit everytime. The old lady, it seems, is quite feeble and she would take the next train backwards. The train makes but a short stop at Milford and the brakeman seeing her coming down the steps backwards thinks she is just getting on and he says "Folk alive there lady, all aboard," and pushes her back in the coach again and the train pulls out.
She would take the next train back,
but with like result at Milford, she was carried home to Holly again.

It is cited as a sample of journalistic "cheek" that one-eight of the newspapers of the county have applied for passes to the world's fair, and that to grant them will cost the directory $802,500. As yet no special emphasis has been laid upon the fact that for a year past every editor's desk has been burdened every week with world's fair news (?) all ready to be put in type.
Isn't it rather cheeky to ask an editor to run a "world's fair column" and then kick because he expects, as a right, a season ticket? The best way, perhaps, is to let the world's fair pay for its advertising. Some of the cold cash might return in the way of admission fees.

TWO SCALDED TO DEATH

THE CYLINDER HEAD OF A LAKE STEAMER BLOWS OUT.

Two of the Crew Scalded to Death and Two Others Very Severely Injured—Other Michigan News.

A shocking disaster, resulting in the death of two men, the probable fatal injury of a third and the severe scalding of a fourth, occurred in Lake St. Clair. The "straightback" steamer Choctaw, Capt. W. W. Brown, coal-laden, from Cleveland, to Milwaukee, had fairly entered the lake when the cylinder head blew out with a terrific report and frightful results.

Nelson Chambers, the cook, who was standing nearest the engine at the time, was so badly scalded that he died within 10 minutes. C. Jones, fireman, 39 years old, residence unknown, died in a few minutes after reaching the marine hospital at Detroit. E. P. Thompson, oiler, was badly burned about the hands, face, neck and head, and in the mouth and throat from inhaling the escaping steam; recovery doubtful. F. Smith, engineer, had his hands badly scalded, but his condition is not dangerous.

The immense iron hull shook from stem to stern with the shock, and as the action of the engine ceased she began to under the strong easterly gale prevailing. Capt. Brown immediately ordered the anchor dropped and the Andaste, a vessel of the same line as the Choctaw, was signaled and took the injured men to the U. S. Marine hospital, Detroit.

LATER—Thompson died from the effects of his injuries, this making the third victim. It is now believed that a faulty steam gage was responsible for the disaster.

STARVING THEMSELVES.

One of the Followers of "Prince Michael" Dies From Fasting to Mute.

The few flying roll people who are left in Detroit are starving themselves to death in obedience to orders. Alice Stoneman, nearly 50 years old, died at the house of Law Land, one of the "pillars" of the "Latter Day Israelites." She was a mere skeleton, wasted away by orders of the "pillars," at the head of whom stands Eliza Court, alias "Princess Mike." Taylor, one of the members of the colony, made a coffin out of plain boards. Into this the body which looked no larger than that of a child was put, the box was placed on the colony's express wagon and William H. Bechel, the first "pillar" after Eliza Court, and Law drove off with it to some cemetery. Mrs. Stoneman left seven children, six of whom are in the city and four at the colony, yet none of them were permitted to see her after death. She had fasted 58 days.

Lansing Officers Fight With Burglars.

"Doc" Bentley, West Bentley and Bert Donnelly all desperate characters, were cornered in a Lansing saloon by the city officers. The men were wanted for the numerous burglaries in Lansing and vicinity during the past two months. Officers Black and Hayes started in the front door while Marshal Sanford and Detective Abels guarded the rear. The thieves made an attempt to get out of the front door and "Doc" Bentley pulled a revolver and began firing. During the scrimmage his accomplices fled and "Doc" made a break for the alley with bullets flying fast after him. He fell directly into the arms of the officers in the rear and placing his revolver against Detective Abels' breast, pulled the trigger; fortunately all the shots had been fired. Over 12 shots were fired in all in less than two minutes. Bentley was lodged in jail, and his house searched. A large quantity of stolen property was recovered, representing nine different burglaries, including the robbery of the depot at Diamondale last November. Bert Donnelly was arrested and a posse began scouring the woods west of the city for West Bentley. "Doc" Bentley, has served time for burglary, and is a very desperate character.

Royal Arcanum Grand Officers.

The grand council of the Royal Arcanum will meet in Kalamazoo next year. Officers were elected at the Muskegon convention as follows: Grand regent, H. C. Hedges, Lansing; grand vice-regent, John Deisser, Kalamazoo; grand secretary, S. A. Greags, Detroit; grand treasurer, W. S. Campbell, Detroit; grand orator, L. H. Plues, Saginaw; grand chaplain, J. S. Driggs, Hudson; grand guide, H. H. Apin, West Bay City; grand warden, E. F. Woodcock, Niles; grand trustees, C. A. Patin, Almont; F. A. Stiven, Ionia; H. R. Backster, Grand Rapids; grand sentry, L. B. Edinborough, West Bay City; representative to supreme council, J. W. Cochran, Midland; alternate, I. T. Beach, Almont; state medical examiner, J. H. Wellings, Lansing.

They Should Be in Jackson Prison.

For some time past Bay City has been the scene of acts of vandalism which the police are at loss to explain. First several fire alarm boxes in the manufacturing district were found plugged so that it would have been impossible to have turned in an alarm. Then the Michigan Central railroad reported that switches in its yard were frequently found turned and in one instance the lights had been so changed so as to show the wrong signal. A few nights later, in the same vicinity, someone fired a revolver at a passing car, the bullet being on a line with the motor man's head, but striking the car window just back of him and directly in front of the only passenger on the car, whose face was struck by the flying glass.

More Appointments by Gov. Rich.

The following appointments have been made by Gov. Rich: George F. Parsons, of Manistee, and J. E. Vincent, of Saginaw, assistant paymaster-general with the rank of captain; David R. Cook, of Hastings, agent of the state board of corrections and charities for Barry county.

King & Chase's large saw and planing mill has been burned at Quincy. Loss about $7,000.

Freddie Norgreen, of Clare, tried to board a moving train at Farwell. He fell beneath a car. One of his legs was taken off above the knee. He will die.

MR. BARNES OF LANSING.

A Distinguished Citizen's Fortune Seriously Affected.

Lansing has had such a fright over financial matters as would almost turn its citizens' hair gray. For several days it had been noised about that a crisis was imminent in the affairs of the Lansing Lumber company and Iron and Engine Works, both of which institutions Orlando F. Barnes is president. The crisis was finally reached when both companies gave Orlando M. Barnes, father of Orlando F. Barnes, mortgages upon all their property, real and personal, to secure their paper, upon the greater portion of which he is the sole indorser.

The two mortgages therefore secure a total indebtedness of $701,000, which approximately represents the total liabilities of the two companies. By this arrangement, which was effected with the consent of all the Lansing banks which held a large proportion of the paper, O. M. Barnes practically assumes the ownership of both properties involved, and will combine his personal fortune, which will reach $1,000,000, with the assets of the companies, which represent an additional $500,000, for the purpose of meeting liabilities, which will not exceed $900,000. Mr. Barnes is entirely confident that he will be fully able to meet the emergencies and says that every dollar of indebtedness will be paid. He will give the business of both concerns his personal attention.

The fact that O. F. Barnes was also president of the Central Michigan Saving Bank precipitated a run on that institution and in a short time $29,000 in saving deposits was withdrawn. After consulting with Bank Commissioner Sherwood, who is in the city, Cashier Bradley decided that it was unfair to the majority of the depositors to permit the run to continue and so closed his doors. Commissioner Sherwood at once took possession and the bank will remain closed pending his examination of its affairs.

LIKE RATS IN A TRAP.

14 MEN DROWNED AT THE WATER WORKS CRIB.

At Milwaukee—They had Taken Refuge in the Intake Tunnel During the Storm.—Other News of the Hurricane.

Lake Michigan has been the scene of some horrifying windstorms, but one related in the following dispatches are doubtless without a parallel in the history of the great lakes. The disaster which occurred at Milwaukee could not be foreseen.

The crib at the end of the intake tunnel of the city water works, situated some 3,000 feet out in the lake, was washed away and 15 men who were employed there in the shaft which reaches to the shore, but one is known to be alive. Some were doubtless washed off by the huge billows which have been tumbling on the shore and others perished in the air shaft, which they sought shelter, and which filled with water. At daylight no vestige either of the crib or the house that surmounted it could be seen and there were but faint traces here and there of the government breakwater that was hidden in the mountains of surf that broke over it. The entire prospect, as far as the eye could reach was one awful spectacle of seething, boiling, roaring billows that seemed to unite with the clouds in the sky. On the beach were two lumber-laden crafts that had vainly sought shelter behind the breakwater, while the shore was strewn with wreckage.

About 200 feet of the breakwater, which was thought to be staunch enough to withstand the severest storm, had been washed away, and the massive timbers and planks were tumbled in disordered heaps upon the shore.

LATER—Thousands of people gathered on the shore when the news of the disaster had been made known. About 9 o'clock when the crowd which had been straining their eyes to see the bottom of the crib (which, being anchored by stonework to the bottom of the lake, still remained), which was visible between the huge waves. Suddenly someone cried out: "I see a man." Powerful glasses were soon sweeping the angry waves, and sure enough there was a man clinging to the pump, the only remaining piece of machinery.

The tug Welcome, with a lifeboat and men, started at once for a battle with the waves. It was a heroic struggle, and when Capt. Peterson finally reached the crib with a rope and a life preserver a sorry sight was presented. Three corpses were rolling about the crib, and James Miller, the sole survivor, was too weak to longer help himself. After being cared for at Emergency hospital he told the following story:

"It was 5 o'clock in the morning when we found that water was entering the air-tight compartment of the shaft where we had taken refuge for the night. I took a vote to decide whether we would risk leaving the shaft. It was decided to leave. Only five of us succeeded in reaching the outside. The nine men who were not strong enough to get out were drowned by the water coming into the shaft and four out of the five who got out were mangled or drowned by the tremendous floods which were lashed over the crib. At what hour the house was washed away I do not know. It had disappeared when we got out of the shaft."

Unless an unforeseen reason for its postponement should occur the international monetary conference will convene in Brussels on May 30. All of the commissioners have tendered their resignations, and but one of them—Henry W. Cannon, president of the Chase National Bank of New York City—has been re-appointed. It is understood that Honorable John P. Jones, United States senator from Nevada, has been requested to withdraw his resignation.

A camp of Sons of Veterans has been organized at Hopkins with 25 charter members.

The Chapman Portable Forge company, Marcellus' latest acquisition in the industrial line, has commenced operations.

Hundreds of sheep have died in parts of Berrien county from a mysterious disaster which the local veterinary surgeons are unable to diagnose.

W. H. H. Chapman, one of the prominent men of Chesaning, has been appointed a member of the world's congress auxiliary on farm and cereal industry.

The body of Frank White, a Lansing carpenter, who has been missing since April 3, was found in the Grand river, four miles below the city. He undoubtedly fell into the river while intoxicated. He leaves a wife and four children in destitute circumstances.

William Christie, a Cass county farmer, furnishes the first large vegetable story of the season in southwestern Michigan. He brought into market the other day a parsnip which measured a trifle over four feet in length and girth 36 inches around the waist.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict that the deaths of the three men killed in the wreck on the Ann Arbor road at Farwell were due to the carelessness of George A. Ringer, the engineer of the wrecking train, which backed on the main track. Ringer has skipped.

John Hicks, of Port Huron, is contesting the will of his wife. In 1875 he deeded her all his property, and she made a will in his favor. Before her death, in 1891, she became provoked at her husband and made a new will in favor of her sister.

The nine heirs of the deceased brother misers, Thomas and John Fagan, of Holly, were made happy by the discovery of $9,345.50 in gold in a small jug and an earthen bottle which had been hidden in hay. This makes the entire estate worth about $42,000, of which $34,000 was in money.

The body of a man was found on the Saginaw Valley road near Jackson mangled in a horrible manner. The head was severed and the arms and legs cut to pieces. The body was searched but nothing could be found which would disclose his identity, but was afterwards identified as Robert Smith, a stonecutter.

THE LEGISLATORS.

SENATE—Seventy-third day.—The Governor has approved the bill repealing the law relative to the confinement of United States prisoners of the Michigan State and Normal School appropriation bill. A communication from the House calling for a committee of conference on the bill was received. The bill passed: Amending the law relative to the number of pupils in the normal schools, and providing that one sewing machine for each family shall be exempt from levy and sale on execution making a provision for foreign insurance companies legally admitted to do business in the state from placing or causing to be placed insurance on property, and the taking or catching of fish in the inland waters of the state; amending the general railroad act, and providing for the passing through or under gates at crossings; amending the law for the prevention of the spread of cholera, and providing for companies common carriers. A bill providing for seats for lady clerks in stores did not pass. A bill providing for the incorporation of the state and local organizations of the Happy Home club was passed. Hawaiian National Guard Soldiers Poisoned by Wholesale—Emperor William and Pope Leo Meet.

Advices from Honolulu give a few particulars of a wholesale attempt to poison the soldiers of the National Guard. Thirty soldiers at the barracks and thirty members of the National guard were taken with violent vomiting spells. Surgeons were hastily summoned and found that the men showed symptoms of irritant poisoning. Capt. Good at the barracks said that the bill of fare at dinner was roast beef, boiled tongue, peas and fresh vegetables with tea and coffee. He had eaten dinner at the barracks but he had escaped illness. The men laid blame to the boiled tongue and did not hesitate to accuse some one in the employ of the royalists of an attempt at poisoning.

Five Chinamen are employed in the kitchen at the government but no suspicion is attached to them. In all about 60 men, 30 at the barracks and 30 in Company A of the National Guard, were rendered unfit for duty, but most of them soon recovered and none are likely to suffer permanently. Much mystery surrounds the affair and it has caused a great sensation. The royalists very indignantly deny the existence of a plot to destroy the government forces in this murderous manner.

Emperor William Visits the Pope.

Cable from Rome: The emperor and empress of Germany called on the pope and Wilhelm and Leo spent a full hour in conversation while the empress was being shown about the building. The royal Germans were received with great ceremony. The emperor remained in conversation with the pope, while Freiherr Marshall von Bieberstein was in attendance in the ante-chamber. The interview lasted 58 minutes after the departure of the empress. The pope was more affable than usual, while the emperor, although amiable, seemed to be somewhat preoccupied and nervous. At the end of the interview the emperor's suite was presented to the pope. Upon leaving the emperor was accompanied by the pope, contrary to the etiquette of the Vatican, through the ante-chamber to the throne room.

As they parted the emperor made a movement as if to kiss the pope's hand. The pope quickly withdrew his hand, then grasped the emperor's and shook it cordially three times. The emperor joined the empress and visited with her St. Peter's and the treasury. The departure of the imperial party from the Vatican was accompanied by a repetition of the ceremonial with which they were received.

HURRAH FOR WOME RULE.

The Grand Old Man Pushes the Measure Through a Second Reading.

London cable: The house of commons was crowded with members and spectators on the occasion of the second reading of the Irish home rule bill. Mr. Balfour closed the opposition and his arguments were repeatedly cheered. He said there were no reasons sufficient to meet this important constitutional change; that it was absurd to hold England responsible for Ireland's woes; that the bill was a decisive step toward a final separation and that it would result in the disintegration of the empire; that the bill, if it passed, would entail loss and hardship upon all classes in Ireland. Irish ambitions would center in the new Dublin parliament. Irishmen would regret the imperial parliament as a foreign and defeated body. "If you commit this great political crime," said Mr. Balfour, in closing his speech, "you make yourselves responsible for any irreparable national disaster and all hopes of a peaceful and united Ireland will vanish forever." Prolonged cheers and counter cheers followed this peroration.

When Mr. Gladstone arose to close the debate there was tremendous cheering. The old gentleman was in fine condition and his voice clear and distinct. He said: The principal assertions, persistently exaggerated, constant misconstruction and copious, arbitrary and baseless prophecies. True, there were conflicting financial arrangements to be dealt with, but among the difficulties nothing existed which ought to abash or terrify men desirous to accomplish a great object. The present bill sought to close a controversy that had lasted for centuries. Ireland's loyal acceptance of the present bill should cause distrust and disbelief to vanish. There had been no dissatisfaction of the Irish mind since the door of hope had been opened. The persistent distrust of the Irish people, despite all they could do, came simply below the level of civilized mankind. When the boon of self-government was given to the British colonies, was Ireland alone to be excepted from its blessings? To deny Ireland home rule was to say that she lacked the ordinary faculties of humanity.

Mr. Gladstone's closing words were: "You cannot be surprised that we have undertaken the solution of this great question, and as on the one hand, it is not the least of the arduous efforts of the liberal party so, on the other hand, it will have its place in history—aye, and not remote, but early history—as not the least durable, fruitful and blessed among its accomplished acts." The bill passed the second reading by a vote of 347 to 391.

Carter Talks Seal Intelligently.

In resuming his argument before the tribunal of arbitration Mr. Carter, United States counsel, claimed that the seals were not ferre naturae, but private property when nourished and tended by man. The seals frequenting the Prebost islands were; Mr. Carter contended, guarded and cherished by the United States and therefore a species of husbandry was formed, giving a property right in the seals.

A WHITE WORLD.
I never knew the world in white so beautiful could be. As I have seen it here to-day Beside the white sea. A new earth, bride of a new heaven, Has been revealed to me.
The sunrise blended wave and cloud In one broad pool of gold, But touched with rose the world's white robes In every curve and fold; White blue air did over all Its breath in wonder hold.
Earth was a statue half awake Beneath the sculptor's hand; How the Great Master bends with care Above the work he planned; Easy it is, on such a day, To feel and understand.
—Lucy Larcom.

"MAJOR AND MINOR."
It was on an evening in February that I first saw the major. Business duties had temporarily placed me in Chicago, and it was in a semi-geeting boarding house that our first meeting took place.
In appearance he was of the medium height, and inclined to stoutness. A thin fringe of gray hair still lingered in the neighborhood of his neck. Under the influence of violent emotion little waves of color mounted to his forehead and rippled to the back of his neck.
He had the prominent eyes and apologetic cheeks of Lever's military heroes. A tweed suit of a doubtful pattern, which, from constant wear, had assumed the outlines of his rugged form, was his week-day wear. On warm Sunday mornings a blue and white striped linen blazer was his favorite costume, but upon winter nights he assumed a gorgeous quilted saffron smoking jacket, a present from a fair acquaintance.
Our regard for each other was to a certain extent mutual, and many an evening, I spent in the little prophet's chamber on the third floor that he called his own, smoking the pipe of friendship, and occasionally indulging in the stronger and less transient delights of East liquor.
The major was a host in himself. A fund of anecdotes was always at his disposal, and a certain degree of wit, perhaps not entirely free from vulgarity, favored his reminiscences.
Twice a widower, his only child was a little sharp-featured woman who paid him annual visits, and described herself vaguely as being in "millinery."
Our acquaintance had lasted several months, with every sign of becoming permanent when an incident occurred that threatened to end it.
Not finding the major in his room one evening I commenced to make inquiries, and found to my astonishment that he had taken to playing poker. My surprise was unbounded. Here was a man who had passed his sixtieth milestone of life unscathed, suddenly falling into the embraces of the gambling goddess.
I found the major on the top floor of the house. He flushed and looked a little ashamed as he met my eye. There was a half apologetic tone in his voice as he said, "It's down, boy, and take a hand." I begged to be excused, but stayed for a little while to see the major's luck.
The party was made up of five persons, mostly boarders in the house, and it was evident, even to my inexperienced eye, that the major was getting the worst of it.
Despair sat solemnly on his features as the game progressed, and gradually but surely his small stack of blue and red chips dwindled away and his opponents' stacks grew larger. It must have been five in the morning. An unhealthy ray of returning daylight stole into the room, giving the gas a sticky hue, discovering worn patches in the shabby carpet and discolored smears in the cheap paper on the walls. It was a back room. The only window looked upon a dismal yard where an early-rising, villainous-looking cat stole softly over the fallen snow. A light breeze shook the window frames and blew feathery flakes of snow against the panes. The major's face looked haggard; the pouches under his eyes heavier and more pronounced; the dull red of his complexion had faded into a dull drab and his lusterless eyes followed the cards as they were rapidly dealt with an eagerness that was almost painful. An hour later the party broke up. It was then 6 o'clock on Sunday morning. Snow had ceased to fall and the ray of sunshine, multiplied several times, stole into the room. A couple of sparrows perched on the window sill and announced the arrival of day by a number of excited chirps. The major was the last to go. He had lost all he had. His unsteady footsteps echoed along the passage to his room. I heard him shut the door and look it, then I went to bed.
When the passion of play seizes a man there is only one slavery that can be compared to it—the slavery of drink. The major was fairly in its toils.
I said good-by to all the pleasant little evenings spent in his strong-hold. I sat alone on the steps in front of the house during the warm summer months that succeeded winter and spring. The fall came and business compelled me to leave the city, the major came to see me off. As the train pulled out of the depot I saw him standing on the platform waving his adieu. He had aged greatly. The bright morning sun revealed and heightened the shabbiness of his clothes, the wrinkles in his cheeks, the thousand and one characteristics that mark the rapid advance of old age. Twice again I saw the major. Under what circumstances? You shall see.
Two years later I returned to Chicago. Winter again had the city in its icy grip. I was living then three miles from town, and was glad on returning home to exchange my wet overshoot for a warm pair of slippers and an easy chair in front of a blazing fire.

I must have dozed off and slept a great deal later than I expected, for I woke with a start to find the fire almost out, and the lamp very low. I was not alone in the room. Seated in a chair by the expiring embers of the fire was one of the most pitiable objects that I had ever seen.
In the thin-pinned cheeks, the shrunken form and the shabby garments I had difficulty in recognizing my quondam acquaintance, the once jovial major.
The melting snow ran in little rivulets from his clothes and formed pools of water upon the floor, and icicles glistened in his bristly gray mustache. One shaking hand held a battered brown derby, the other was thrust into the semblance of a pocket in his seedy great coat.
He explained in a rambling way how he happened to be there. By some instinct he had found out where I lived, and finding the door only partially closed had found his way in and sat patiently waiting for me to wake up. His story was of the old threadbare type. The story told of Adam of a man's weakness, of a general descent into the pit of degradation from which one gambler in a thousand is digged. The evening games of poker had been exchanged for the more open and deadly fascinations of the professional gambling-house.
His face had become as familiar to patrons of Hankins' (then in its zenith) as that of the city hall. Becoming at last too penniless and shabby to be granted admission even there, he had drifted from one to another of the smaller and less reputable gambling houses that flourish in Chicago. When fortune smiled he dined, when she frowned he starved. Possessed always of one idea, following the same insane will-o-the-wisp that had lured thousands to destruction, the hope of making a lucky coup that should enrich him at a stroke, he lived out his miserable existence.
His wretched story was followed by an appeal for money, just enough to give him another start as a loan to be repaid when he brought off his coup. He left the house an hour later with money in his pocket; once I saw him again.
It was Christmas Eve, late in the hour, the streets were still filled with people. It had been an exceptionally mild winter, and a drizzling rain fell. The sidewalks, sticky with half-melted snow, made walking anything but a pleasure. Quite as much as a matter of precaution as anything else, for I was in one of the lowest and most dangerous parts of the city, I took to the middle of the road. I had arrived at a quiet and little-frequented street, not a soul was in sight. The noise of my footsteps on the sloppy stones was the only sound that broke the silence. A sudden turn brought me close to the river. A small crowd had gathered there, and I joined them. In the center of the group lay a dark indistinctish mass dripping with water; a policeman knelt beside it. As the crowd slightly separated I pushed my way to the front, and saw that the object was a body just taken from the river.
At that moment the policeman raised his lantern and the light fell full upon the face of the corpse. Swollen and bloated beyond description, were the features; sodden with water, all reeking with the river slime, "dead for several days," said the policeman as he allowed the head to fall back and rose from the ground. The friendly darkness hid the body from view. The glance I had had was sufficient. I had taken my last look at the major—Chicago Inter Occa.

WORLD'S EXPOSITION
SCENES OF ACTIVITY IN THE GREAT WHITE CITY.
A Street in Cairo Faithfully Reproduced on Midway Plaisance—Mosques and Minaret—Faqehs and Dancing Girls Galathea—Turkish Gorgeousness.
[Chicago Correspondence.]
YET THE MOST interesting group of foreigners at the World's Fair Grounds is that which took up its abode on Midway Plaisance the other day. It came all the way from the territory of the Nile. The principal members of the group are from Cairo. They came to occupy the Egyptian city which for a year had been in course of construction at the fair grounds. A street in Cairo is faithfully reproduced in every particular, including the theater and hotel. The Egyptians are 118 in number, thirty-two of them being women who have thirteen children to look after. The mosque priest, who will climb up into the minaret and cry out the first Mohammedan prayer ever heard in America, is a patriarchal looking man, with loose flowing robes and long whiskers. His name is Ali All Arab. Accompanying the party is still another notable character—Khadel Nada the famous conjurer of Egypt, who swallows swords as long as a raka handle and makes flowers and plants spring from bare floors. During the voyage to America a tall Egyptian workman of the name of Samed Mehren Effendi fell violently in love with Miss Bill El Nour, and if their plans are carried out they will be married by the old priest in a few days.
The men wear flowing coats of blue or red or yellow silk, thrown back at the chest to display vestings of the hues of the rainbow. Some of the men are musicians composing an Egyptian band. They have instruments like drums, flutes, clarinets, tom-toms and mandolins. Others are dancers. They are easily distinguishable because of their garments, which are looser and brighter of hue than the robes of their companions. A few are magicians clothed in bright entire splendor in this building, represent a value of $150,000. Jerusalem and Damascus are at work on their booths in the grand bazaar hall, and it is expected the village will be complete in all of its magnificent detail before the Exposition is formally opened.

POSTERS OF PARIS
They are Generally Artistic and Always Attract Notice.
[Paris Correspondence.]
Cheret is an artist in his way, which is the bill poster's way. He introduced to the Parisians the artistic poster full of color and of exquisite drawing, and it became a success at once. This triumph is due to his excellent taste. Realizing the destination of his work, he has always forced the note of his color, that it might tell against the distraction of a bustling crowd. Within the narrow limits of a rosin his reds and yellows, his blues and pinks, might appear strident; but he has mastered the craft of open-air decoration, and his "jolliest" design appears merely gay when it is properly placed. As he understands the limits of lithography, and his drawings are always perfectly adapted for reproduction. He has portrayed the amphis Perrot, the merry harlequin, the gaily-shod columbine with extraordinary spirit and harmony. His yellow ladies, with their fans, their eyeballs, or their nose-gays, are a perpetual fascination. How strikingly, for instance, does the dazred or in black. The women far outshine the men in beauty, in fancy, in all. They are very beautiful. Their features are regular and refined. Their eyes are big and brown and quite expressive, too. Their complexion is a rich, deep bronze. Their hair is black and glossy. Had the leading dancer of the village been here last fall Miss Rehan might not have posed for the silver statue of Montana's goddess. The colored robes of the women do not destroy the lines of their figures.

The Egyptians have with them forty-seven snakes, which will be charmed by three women. The serpentes vary in size from 6 inches to 7 feet. They are varicolored and of many species. One of the finest specimens is a big-headed cobra. The head of the sixteen donkeymen and donkeys is Achmat, who is well known to many Americans as a guide in Cairo. Achmat's favorite donkey is Yankee Doodle, so named by the American consul at Cairo. The best's closest friend is Poco, a dancing monkey owned by another member of the party named Abdone Magid Homosini. There are seven camels, six of them trained to perform tricks as well as carry burdens.
The animals are kept in a native barn at night and exhibited in the street during the day. The natives bring with them an immense amount of freight. This includes building material, tapestries, bric-a-brac and merchandise. The street in Midway is far more picturesque and on a bigger scale than the one which interested so many thousands at the Paris Exposition. There are native slaves, a big mosque, an imposing reprodu-

Hart Dim.
He—Some things are awfully provoking. The other evening as I was writing a note before going out to a reception I got an ink spot on my shirt bosom. My roommate was fearfully out up about it. She—Why should he feel any worse than you? He—It was his shirt.—Judge.

SCENES OF ACTIVITY IN THE GREAT WHITE CITY.

particularly varied in style and exquisite in workmanship.
It would seem that strange people and strange things are heading toward Chicago from every seaport and railroad center in the universe. There is great activity in the Turkish village, where 450 simon-pure Turks, sixty horses and forty camels and dromedaries have arrived. The party left Turkey March 27. The flag flying from the peak hundreds of the boat will be a strange one to many old sea dogs in our harbors, for a Turkish vessel floating the Turkish emblem has never been seen in American waters. The Turks bring with them a score or more dancing girls, a troupe of actors and actresses, a native band and orchestra and several Mohammedan priests. Their arrival in Midway Plaisance was celebrated by religious services in the mosque, at which no Christians will be admitted, only shrines in good standing. Workmen and decorators are now putting the finishing touches on the buildings in the village. A silver bedstead weighing 3,400 pounds will be set up in the princess' chamber in Exhibit Hall, and the rugs, tapestries and draperies, many of them worked in gold, which are to form a display of dazzling ori-

entire splendor in this building, represent a value of $150,000. Jerusalem and Damascus are at work on their booths in the grand bazaar hall, and it is expected the village will be complete in all of its magnificent detail before the Exposition is formally opened.

POSTERS OF PARIS
They are Generally Artistic and Always Attract Notice.
[Paris Correspondence.]
Cheret is an artist in his way, which is the bill poster's way. He introduced to the Parisians the artistic poster full of color and of exquisite drawing, and it became a success at once. This triumph is due to his excellent taste. Realizing the destination of his work, he has always forced the note of his color, that it might tell against the distraction of a bustling crowd. Within the narrow limits of a rosin his reds and yellows, his blues and pinks, might appear strident; but he has mastered the craft of open-air decoration, and his "jolliest" design appears merely gay when it is properly placed. As he understands the limits of lithography, and his drawings are always perfectly adapted for reproduction. He has portrayed the amphis Perrot, the merry harlequin, the gaily-shod columbine with extraordinary spirit and harmony. His yellow ladies, with their fans, their eyeballs, or their nose-gays, are a perpetual fascination. How strikingly, for instance, does the daz-

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

President H. N. Higginbotham has issued the following statement concerning the fair:
To the Public: Because of many misrepresentations and misstatements relative to exposition management and affairs being in circulation through the press and otherwise, both in this country and abroad, and in reply to many letters of inquiry or complaint touching the same matters, it seems advisable that some official statement regarding them should be made to the public. Therefore I respectfully ask that the widest publicity be given to the following facts:

1. The exposition will be opened in readiness for visitors May 1.
2. An abundance of drinking water, the best supplied to any great city in the world, will be provided free to all. The report that a charge would be made for drinking water probably arose from the fact that hygeia water can also be had by those who desire it at one cent a glass.
3. Ample provisions for seating will be made without charge.
4. About 1,500 toilet rooms and closets will be located at convenient points in the buildings and about the grounds, and they will be absolutely free to the public. This is as large a number in proportion to the estimated attendance as has been provided in any exposition. In addition to these there will also be nearly an equal number of lavatories and toilet rooms of a costly and handsome character as exhibits, for the use of which a charge of five cents will be made.
5. The admission fee of fifty cents will entitle the visitor to see and enter all the exposition buildings, except the exhibits, and in short, to see everything within the exposition grounds, except the Egyptian village and the reproduction of the Colored shift dwellings. For those as well as for the special attractions on Midway Plaisance a small fee will be charged.
6. Imposition or extortion of any description will not be tolerated.
7. Free medical and emergency hospital service is provided on the grounds by the exposition management.
8. The bureau of public comfort will provide commodious free waiting rooms, including spacious ladies' parlors and toilet rooms in various parts of the grounds.
H. N. HIGGINBOTHAM, President.

Notas.
The statue Germania, which is to adorn the imperial portal of a new German parliament building in Berlin, will be shown at the world's fair. Through the efforts of Herr Werruth and the consent of Emperor William this masterpiece of German sculpture will be exhibited at Chicago. It will be placed in the manufacturers building, as the growing piece of the German section there. When Germania is in place there will be seen represented a typical German mounted on a war horse, with an imperial flag in the right hand and an old German shield with the war eagle in the left. A youthful warrior, with sword and laurels, shows himself to be the recipient of the gifts of the goddess of victory heralding the glory of victorious battles. These are stationed on either side of the figure.
Bretros Effendi Helweh, the famous oriental decorator, has arrived in Chicago from Paris with forty large boxes, containing the parts of a wonderful work which is to be displayed at the world's fair. It is to represent the luxurious splendor of a room of an eastern sultan. It is made of 2,000,000 pieces of mosaic and took ten years of Effendi Helweh's life to make it. It is in the form of a kiosk, and the interior is made up of rich eastern designs and legends, inlaid with mother of pearl and rich woods. When reconstructed the kiosk will be placed in the Tunisian part of the French section. Effendi Helweh brings letters from Carnot, Eiffel, the late Jules Ferry and other distinguished Frenchmen. He is about forty-eight years old, and is considered the greatest living oriental designer and decorator.

Forty-five precious historical documents relating to the voyages and discovery of America are to be exhibited at the world's fair. The duke of Veragua, the living descendant of Columbus, has agreed to lend them. The forty-five papers form almost a history of Columbus' career as a discoverer. In the list is the original commission given to Columbus by Ferdinand and Isabella upon his departure for the first voyage. It is dated Granada, April 30, 1492. In it he is appointed grand admiral of the ocean seas, vice king and governor general of all the lands he should discover. Every document in the collection is either written by Columbus or signed by Ferdinand or Isabella.
Jeldie, the Norwegian sculptor of Minneapolis, will represent Hiawatha bearing Minnehaha in his arms across wild rushing rivers. This is to be in the form of a statue for the Minnesota building at the world's fair. The women of the state pay for it. The conception is said to be exceptionally fine, and, after being produced in plaster for presentation during the exposition, it will be cast in bronze and placed at Minnehaha falls in the state park. The ladies have gathered the sum required for this sculpture by means of penny contributions in the schools. Mrs. H. T. Brown of Minneapolis, one of the lady managers for the state, has been particularly active in the enterprise.
Italy, which for a long time declined to participate in the world's fair has made an appropriation of 277,500 lire, or about $55,500, for its representation. The Italian chamber of commerce and other financial interests have also supplied funds with liberality.
Visitors to the world's fair will have the opportunity of going to the roof of the manufacturers building—the largest in the world—and enjoying there a half-mile promenade. Four elevators, with a capacity of 600 an hour, will take the people to a great platform, 200 feet above the floor, from which a magnificent bird's-eye view will be afforded of the interior of the mammoth building with its acres of exhibits beneath. From the platform the visitors will pass to the promenade on the roof, where an unsurpassed bird's-eye view of the entire grounds and buildings will be unfolded.
