

The Northville Record.

Vol. XXIV, No. 41.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1893.

$1.00 per year, in advance.

$778,730.

That is the Assessed Valuation of the Village of Northville.

$5,000 RUNS IT THIS YEAR.

The Taxes Will Be About Six and Two-fifths Mills.

According to Assessor Booth's figures, and they are undoubtedly as nearly correct as any assessor ever made them, the assessed valuation of our little village this year is $778,730, real and personal property. The council votes to raise $5,000 to run the village for the present year and this brings the taxes about six and two-fifths mills, or in other words the taxes will be just about sixty-four cents on every one hundred dollars assessed valuation.

The valuation is divided as follows: Real estate $554,730; personal $124,000. The real estate valuation is considerably above that of last year while the personal is a few thousand less, chiefly caused by the removal of the Keeley Cure company and some errors in last year's assessments.

WILLIAM LANNING

Died Last Friday Afternoon, Aged 79 Years.

After a residence of more than forty-four years in the village, William Lanning quietly passed away Friday afternoon. He had been ill for about two weeks so that his death was not unexpected. He was a quiet, honest, industrious old gentleman and respected by all.

Mr. Lanning was born in Rome, New York, May 28, 1814. He was married in 1847 and settled in this village in 1849 where he has since resided.

For over fifty years he was a faithful member of the Baptist church.

The funeral services were held at the Baptist church Sunday afternoon, Rev. G. F. Arnold officiating.

COMING AMUSEMENTS.

Here are a Few Dates to Bear in Mind.

Friday evening, May 26, Detroit talent give a musical and reading entertainment at the opera house.

Monday evening, May 29, the Francis Labadie company play Damon and Pythias at the opera house.

Wednesday evening, June 4, Lacy & Altman's comedy company will be seen in "Blooders" at the opera house.

Thursday evening, June 22, the commencement exercises of the High school will be held in the opera house.

Wednesday evening, June 21, the pupils of the High school below the 12th grade have a prize elocutionary contest at the opera house. There will be about twelve participants.

Special G. A. R. Order.

In obedience to the order of Department Commander Kidd, Allen M. Harmon Post and Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans will hold a memorial service at the M. E. church Sabbath evening, May 28, the Rev. J. M. Belding officiating. Subject, "Silver Lined War Clouds." The memorial service, May 30, will be at two o'clock, participated in by the Post, Corps and children of the high school. All are invited to be present and bring flowers. All old soldiers and S. of V's are especially invited to march in line and honor our comrades gone before. Details from the Post will visit outlying cemeteries in the morning.

Dated Northville, Mich., May 22, '93.
Henry M. White
Secretary
Post Com.

Communication.

From the RECORD'S point of view there appears to be a sort of presumptive evidence that "X" does not belong to the "constant reader" class. But as regards the name of Northside, others also have the impression that the majority of sixty, or more, voters, who changed their votes to accord with the minority of forty-and-one, did so, not from real choice, but to be rid of a vulgar name, the senseless odium of which had vexed them for a long time.

Even the polysyllabic name of North latitude-forty-two-and-one-half-degrees though rather long, is vastly better than that of the kitchen-garden vegetable which has been unanimously rejected.

Try S. W. Knapp's 50 cent Japan Tea. It is a hummer.

Around the Country.

Out of the seventy-two teachers who were examined for certificates at Wayne, May 8 and 9, only twenty-seven successfully passed.

A Holly school teacher wants her pupils to bring bird's eggs to school for a collection. A few last year's hen's eggs mixed in the lot would be a mighty good treat for that teacher.

Among the sufferers in Saginaw's disastrous fire Sunday were H. M. Jackson and family, formerly of this place, now in the auditor's office of the F. & P. M. railroad company. They lost everything they possessed.

D. E. Reed's 6-year-old son Arthur, who was struck by the engine of the fast train on the Detroit Lansing & Northern Railroad, Friday noon, died at his home in South Lyons, a few hours later.

We find upon close examination that the Holly walks are not in the best condition.—Holly Advertiser.

We used to have the same complaint before we took the Gold Cure. The walks were always bad or too narrow.

On the evening of Decoration day, Mrs. R. C. Yerkes of Northville, assisted by Miss Mabel Grace, Clark and Mrs. Belle Randolph-Long, will give an elocutionary and musical entertainment at the town hall.—Farmington Enterprise.

The board of education at Lyons will not employ home teachers in the local schools, "on the ground that home grown teachers once employed must be employed all the time, no matter about their qualifications." A remarkable argument and a remarkable board of education.

Holly was visited by a lively little cyclone Tuesday morning. It knocked the roofs off or the windows out of every building in town till it reached the Advertiser office where the counteraction proved too great for even a Michigan cyclone, and giving up the struggle it started off in a half-pickled sort of hap-hazard way towards the Highland vinegar works.

These newspapers that are attempting to injure the World's Fair by publishing stuff about the exorbitant prices charged for everything on the grounds, ought to let up. The charges are reasonable, and if cents pays the admission to the grounds and all of the buildings.—Fenton Independent.

The Jennings' have all got passes—we think.

Considering the rainy evening, a very good house greeted the Ideal Dramatic company of Northville at the G. A. R. hall last Friday night in "The Spy of Gettysburg." The play was well received and the company proved itself equal to high expectations all the parts having been uniformly well taken. Should the company return, under favorable circumstances, they would undoubtedly draw a crowd of house.—Milford Times.

It seems to be a prevailing habit of the boys now to go fishing. It is lots of sport and is usually attended with good luck, but it would seem as if last Saturday night was an exception. The boys captured the fish but unfortunately the boat tipped over and its occupants received an impromptu bath. Now this is lots of sport, but boys don't you think it is rather early to go swimming?—So, Lyon Picket.

Now we call it a right down mean trick for Bro. Callahan to lay this off on to "the boys." We have it on good authority that the Picket man was one of the occupants of that liquid baited fishing boat.

In a portion of this edition, the diagram illustrating the cyclone was turned in the column so that the arrow indicating the direction of the storm, pointed toward the northwest instead of the northeast as the facts required.—Ypsilantian.

Seems as though the Ypsilantian ought to know by this time that a cyclone is a thing that turns round. No apology was necessary.—Adrian Press.

The question now arises, does this settle the cyclone business? If not, Editor Osband will be justified in turning his arrows in a southwest direction.

Notice to Advertisers.

Owing to the large demand for advertising space in this paper and the extra amount of labor required to put them in shape each week, it is necessary that hereafter all copy for change of ads be in the office not later than Tuesday noon of each week.

It will be some time before the real estate boom goes out of business for want of material to work upon.

HERE is an argument in favor of learning something. The number of prisoners locked up in fourteen of the Western and Middle States is 110,533, and of this vast number of offenders but one-sixth know how to read.

PADEBRAWKI sailed for home with 160,000 American dollars in his pockets. He would have to mail a piano about 600 years in Europe to obtain that much money, and it never will be a surprise to him to learn that the gold-buck man flourishes in the United States.

THE WORLD'S Fair has been made more active by the presence of a real Viking ship, fully manned, a picture of which is given herewith.

These ancient days when Thor still ruled in Norway. The Norwegian decided to take to the sea as a model to build and sail across the Atlantic such a vessel as had accompanied the great ship of Lief the Lucky when he coasted New England nine centuries ago.

A paragraph has been the round of the papers to the effect that several wealthy residents of New Haven offered to place their villas at the disposal of Queen Victoria for the summer. The fact is that every such offer which was received was accompanied by a demand for a one-cent rent, one cent a day, being valued by the offerer at the easy rate of $4.00 per week.

WASHINGTON'S SWORD.

The sword which George Washington wore when he surrendered his commission as chief of the American force Dec. 23, 1783, is at the World's Fair.

The sword was bequeathed by Maj. George Lewis to Samuel Lewis, his son, by him to his oldest son, Judge George Washington Lewis, who presented it to Westmoreland County, Virginia, in 1812.

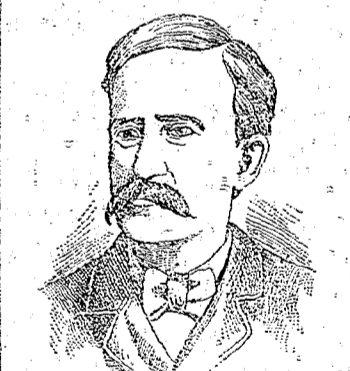

For the first child he was to furnish one grain, two for the second, four for the third, and so on, always doubling the number of grains for each successive birth.

The Millet Seed Bet and the Chevalier d'Éon—The Dramatic Exploit of Manager John Sloman—Man or Woman.

A practice was for a long time prevalent in Genoa, and from it, in all probability, the old system of lotteries originated. The five senators who, with the doge, governed the republic, were chosen by lot from those nobles who were qualified, to the number of 110.

For the first child he was to furnish one grain, two for the second, four for the third, and so on, always doubling the number of grains for each successive birth.

Previous to the passing of the betting acts, action used to be allowed in this country, says the London Standard, and Lord Mansfield tried several. One was where two spendthrift, young noblemen wagered which of their two fathers would die first, and the verdict was given for Lord March.

Some fifty years ago John Sloman, the actor, who was then manager of the five theatres comprised in what was called the "great circuit," made a bet of $200 that he would act the part of Tom in the interlude of "Intrigue" and sing a comic song at three of his theaters on the same night between the hours of 7 and 11.

A Queer Custom of Abyssinia. At Axum, in Abyssinia, a singular custom is observed. When any person is injured he gets hold, if possible, of his adversary's garment and ties it to his own. If he could do this the offender never attempts to deliver himself, but quietly follows to the presence of his superiors, who are to judge him.

"German Syrup"

My acquaintance with Boschee's German Syrup was made about fourteen years ago. I contracted a cold which resulted in a hoarseness and cough which disabled me from filling my pulpit for a number of Sabbaths. After trying a physician, without obtaining relief I saw the advertisement of your remedy and obtained a bottle. I received quick and permanent help. I never hesitate to tell my experience. Rev. W. AN ANTIQUE.
She gazed on the full old clock on the stair; A relic of days long ago,
A costly timepiece, a treasure rare,
But lately purchased and perched up there,
"A quaint old gem," she said.
"Did you stand in some old colonial hall,
Where the bright flickered red
On polished floor and carved wall,
Where fell the shadows of chair backs tall
And straightly still," she said.
"Did you look, perchance, on a wainsome maid—
Alas! a century dead,
Softly demure and sweetly staid,
In a tortoise-shell comb and a gay brocade
With a very short waist?" she said.
"Did you see her lover, a comely swain,
A-bending his stately head
To kiss her lips and to touch again
Till her fair cheeks warmed with a crimson stain?
O quaint old gem," she said.
"Oh, the wondrous pictures once known to you!
And the tales that you have read!
By the old clock forced a grin to view,
I wonder what she'd remark if she knew
I was made last week!" it said.—Harper's.

Love in Lodgings.

BY FLORENCE WARDEN.

CHAPTER VII.—CONTINUED.
He produced the coin and played at heads and tails with it quietly by himself while his brother made up his mind.

"Oh, anything to get out of the house," said the latter at last; and snatching the shilling, he went out. All Temple's movements at present were regulated by hypotheses connected with Linda Frere. Thus, on the supposition that she might be taking a walk in the neighborhood of "Seaview," he passed the green-grocers' shops, which were near, and made his purchase at a modest establishment some distance off. Of course he wanted his beans and his potatoes sent home. The greengrocer, an elderly man with an honest, careworn face, asked dubiously, "Where to?"

On hearing the answer, "To Mr. Monk, of 'Seaview,'" the man's face lighted up with interest.
"Beg your pardon, sir, but was you the new Mr. Monk of 'Seaview'?"
"You see, sir, I know the old gentleman very well; most everybody did that was poor or in trouble, along of the ladies that lived with him. Miss Hutchinson and her mother. Could you tell me, sir, what's come to the poor ladies?"
"I haven't the least idea, I'm sure," answered Temple rather haughtily. "But I've no doubt that wherever they are, they are well enough off. They had plenty of time to feather their nests in the years they were with him."

The man looked at him very gravely and shook his head.
"Them that has told you that, sir, has had their own fish to fry," said he, "take my word for it! Nobody could speak against those two ladies, without he had a bad motive or a bad heart."
It was as if a severe Presbyterian had been suddenly assured, on personal knowledge, of the goodness of the pope. Accustomed from his childhood to hear the Hutchinsons spoken of with the word "adventurers" as the very lightest of the slurs put upon them, Temple was at first too much surprised to make either comment or objection. The man went on:

"Those ladies, sir, whatever you may have heard, would sooner have died than have taken advantage of a penny. They couldn't have done it; wasn't in them. But—" He pulled himself up with a short laugh; "I'd best not say any more, sir, or I shall maybe get into trouble."
"Not through anything you say to me," said Temple, who was getting interested. "I'm not old Mr. Monk's son, but only a much more distant relation. Go on."

"I'll speak out, with your leave, Mr. Monk had left them every halfpenny he had, he wouldn't have done no more than was just right by them two ladies."
"What and leave out his own son altogether?"
"What's his own son done for him? Why by what I can hear, just sponged on him for years and years to get all he could out of him, and then when he couldn't get no more he left him all to himself and never come nigh him, though he knew the old gentleman was bad half the time, and like enough to die at any minute. Now, sir, what did he owe to a son like that, to what he did to a woman that nursed him night and day, and saved his life half a dozen times; and to another that brought a ray of sunshine into his life that was medicine better than the doctors? Why, they say Mrs. Hutchinson will never be herself again through the way she slaved nursing him! It was all her daughter could do to pull her round after the old gentleman was gone."

"And you think all that devotion was disinterested?" asked the young man sceptically.
"Indeed, I do, sir. But even if so be they had a thought for themselves, who's to blame them? What's Mr. Monk's son done but just be brought into the world by him, and fed and clothed and educated and kept, and then no thanks, but spends his time waiting for the dead man's shoes, against those poor ladies' devotion and keeping of him alive and happy?"
Temple made no answer. He nodded thoughtfully, in a low, ponderous manner, like a person who has recently received a well-directed brick at his head, and is scarcely yet sure that he has not been seriously injured. Then he said he would take his parcel home himself, and he wished the man "Good morning," and departed crest fallen and extremely quiet.

When he reached home he went straight down into the kitchen, where Cameron was already wrestling with the cookery book. Temple sat down on the opposite side of the table, with his back to the window. He was so quiet that his brother looked up curiously and raised his eyebrows in astonishment at sight of the parcel.

"Bring them home yourself!"
"M." "By Jove!"
There was a pause. From curiosity Cameron passed into uneasiness. Was it sunstroke? Temple, finding his brother's eyes fixed inquiringly upon him, spoke in a less affected tone than usual.
"We often hear that there are two sides to a story, don't we?"
"Well?"
"Well, I never took that in till to-day."

"What story is it?"
"Our story."
Slowly, interspersing the narrative with his own comments, Temple repeated the account he had heard that morning of his grandfather's obligations to the Hutchinsons. To his surprise, instead of receiving it with a passionate outburst, Cameron listened gravely and attentively, and said, when his brother had ended:
"There's something in it, Tem. To tell you the truth it's been in my head all night—nearly as much as to-day's dinner. We have been waiting for dead men's shoes—all of us. And it's a beastly trade! I'm ashamed of it. Aren't you?"

But the reason was simple enough. They had been accustomed from their earliest childhood to look upon their grandfather's money as their right, and the impatience of their parents to inherit it had for a habit seemed perfectly natural and unblameworthy. Now, in a moment, the bluntly spoken opinion of an uneducated stranger cleared their sight. The Tory Temple and the Radical Cameron both began to perceive that their grandfather, whose money had come to him, not by inheritance, but by a distinguished career at the bar, had some right to a voice in the disposal of his own property.

"And if the two old women really did do so much for him," went on Cameron, "they deserved their half of the property at least as much as we do ours."
"I shall write and tell the governor what we think about it," vowed Temple decidedly.

But the new feeling of camaraderie which had sprung up among the brothers since they had been cast together upon their own resources was already so strong that the elders resolved to consult the other two before concealing the important letter. With Harry their task was easy. The course proposed pleased his boyish sense of romantic honor. With Hildred they had a little more trouble. The fact that he was himself intended for the bar, his grandfather's profession, seemed to him a good enough reason why he should benefit handsomely by his grandfather's money. Hildred mildly pointed out that it was they who were inconsistent, not he, and there was a hot discussion before he gave in.

Then Temple was left alone to concoct an epistle which should overwhelm his parents by its eloquence, its logic, and its determination, which should prove to them in fact, that "the boys" were no longer children or puppets, but reasoning men, entitled to have a voice in the affairs of the family.

The conference, and the little altercation it involved, had taken up so much time that Colonel Frere's bell rang for luncheon before the slightest preparation had been made for that meal. Temple heard wild scurrying to and fro, clattering of pans, banging of doors, voices terrible with excitement. Then he heard Cameron himself go out and there was peace for a little while, but presently that distinguished chef came back like a whirlwind, and the clattering and the scurrying were more frantic than ever.

It was about an hour after this that Cameron, purple, exhausted, with temperature abnormally high and spirits abnormally low, ran out into the garden to smell the fresh salt sea, and to wish that he lay peacefully beneath its waves. Fate was kind to him: There was a veranda on the ground floor next door, and sitting in it, her fingers busy with some needlework of the severely useful kind, was his pretty neighbor. If she had been pretty in yesterday's half-light, what word could describe her in the full glare of the sun? Cameron felt that the sight of her gave him the first sensation of pleasant coolness he had had that day. Her white dress, made of some stuff as soft and fine as an angel's robe in a picture, her fair hair, her sweet, calm face, shaded by a big white sunhat, formed a vision so refreshing that the poor, worried head-cook stood quietly for some moments in the shelter of the arbor, drinking in aesthetic delights, too downcast to add to this pleasure that of hearing her speak to him.

But presently one of the loose boards rattled under his feet, and the girl looked through the trellis work and caught sight of him. "She was a tender creature, and divining at the first glance that he was in some trouble, she rose from her seat, brought her work to the end of the veranda nearest to him, her flying fingers moving as busily as ever along the coarse holland she was hemming.
"It is very warm to-day, isn't it?" she said.
"Oh, you're not warm, surely! You look as—" Cameron stopped short, feeling that he was about to say something rapturous and ridiculous. He grew a few shades nearer still to the glowing magenta, and began to cough to give himself time to remember what a civilized European ought to say and do when he has fallen hopelessly in love with a lady who cannot be expected to feel the slightest warmth toward him in return.

One gentle sentiment, however, she did feel, and her kind eyes said so. This was pity.
"I am afraid Eliza has not proved the treasure you expected her to be," said she. "You look as if you were worried."
"I am worried," answered poor Cameron frankly; "but it isn't Eliza. She's a queer, a divinity. But you can't expect a divinity to do the cooking."
Annie shook her head regretfully.
"No," she said; "I knew she couldn't cook."
"But she might have tried!" said Cameron ruefully. "I did all I could to persuade her to, but she only smiled in that rather irritating way she has, and said she hadn't been used to it."
His pretty neighbor laughed outright.

"She has an irritating smile, I know. But she is not so self-satisfied as she seems. She is not, indeed."
"She need not have giggled all the time just now though, when she took up the tray with the luncheon! I had cooked it myself as well as I could; and though I don't say it looked quite as trim and neat as a chicken does when it is done by a proper cook," and an anxious expression crossed his face—"still it wasn't for her to criticize me. And besides, I had everything to do myself for I was so late in getting it that I couldn't wait at the shop to have the feathers taken out; I thought I could do it quicker myself at home."
Annie began to look apprehensive.
"Dear me," she said, "I wish I had known!"

"But it's all right." And Cameron tried to assume a little cheerfulness. "For if there had been anything so very wrong with it, you may depend I should have heard about it from that wretched colonel before now."
"Alas! He spoke too soon. At that very moment the sounds of a domestic indoors reached their ears; and Cameron, glancing apprehensively behind him, saw Hildred burst open the door and run out to him with a pale face. He was followed by Lizer, whose irritating smile had now become a maddening grin. She bore in her hands a dish, in which lay a formless something, at the sight of which even the gentle Annie could not repress her laughter. Cameron cast on the thing a savage glance of rage.
"It didn't look like that when I sent it up!" he said. "He's been pulling it about. I tucked away the head."

"But—but," said Annie, looking contritely out to sea, and trying to be grave and calm, "you ought to have cut off the head and taken out the inside, and—and it would have been better if—I if I hadn't left on it quite so many feathers."
Cameron pushed away the dish, which Lizer was holding close for his inspection, and turning sharply to his brother, told him that it was no business of his, and that he had better go indoors.

"But the matter concerns me and all of us as much as it does you," protested Hildred. "I was coming down stairs, and the colonel bust open his door, and showered abuse upon me. He said that when he ordered a chicken he did not expect to be served with a set of bag-pipes, and that he would not stay another week to be treated in this manner."
"Well let him go then—at once if he likes."
"But consider—Cameron!"
"I do consider Cameron. And Cameron's the only person I'm going to consider. If he wants a French chef at two hundred a year, let him go to the Grand Hotel."

And leaving his brother abruptly, Cameron ran down the garden, and unlocking the little door in the wall at the bottom, went for a walk to cool his ruffled temper.
He was too much ashamed of his mishap to glance back at the next door balcony, or he would have seen a pair of sweet gray-eyes watching him remorsefully.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]
He Was Coolly Suspicious.
"Even a statesman is picked up sometimes," remarked the congressman to a crowd of listeners. On one occasion I was going over my district to get posted, and in my rambles I ran across an old fellow away up on the headwaters of the creek. He was hoeing corn in a field near the road, and I stopped to talk with him.
"Good morning," I said pleasantly.
"Mornin'," he responded, but never stopped his hoeing.
"Right nice looking field," I remarked.
"Might be wurs," he replied, still hoeing.
"Excuse me," I ventured, "but I'm the member of congress from this district."
"Are you?" he asked, still hoeing.
"I voted for you."
"I'm much obliged, I'm sure," I said. "I'm up here now taking a look over the country."
"Well, I hain't no objection," he said, still hoeing; "ef yer don't take nothin' else," and he looked at me so suspiciously that I bade him good day and rode on.—Detroit Free Press.

The Girls Were Ready.
At Vassar college the other day, one of the professors failed to put in an appearance. After waiting ten minutes, the class, instead of bolting, as boys would have done, appointed one of their number teacher pro tem; and when the professor walked in some half hour later she found the recitation going on as usual.

POLITICAL ECONOMY LESSON.

The City of Philadelphia and the People's Rights.
When you have four big towns, some one must own the land and the houses. If a few own them, the many will not like it. They ought not to like it. In a city where everything is right, every family will own something. This will not come about unless the laws are right. The laws are not good unless bread is cheap, unless men have skill in their work, and are of saving habits; and unless wrong-doers are locked up at once. But all these things will not bring about the right city, in which most people own something, unless the laws make it easy for a man who works with his hands to buy the house he lives in. If a man owns that, he will care more about looking after his home than about making a row because somebody else is richer than he is.

This row is what the older people call the "social question," says St. Nicholas. Now, a man who owns the house he lives in does not want to make a row. He is too busy taking care of his house. You cannot make a rioter out of that man. He is a "capitalist." He will never be a turbulent striker. He is, in the best sense of the word, independent. Riches are worth what they give. The best things that they can give are comfort and security. The man who owns the house he lives in has these. In Philadelphia any industrious, saving man can own his house before he dies; and more such men own houses than do not. Philadelphia is the only city in the world in which this is true. This is the biggest and best thing which can be said of any city.

The law in Philadelphia has made this easy, in the first place, by separating the owning of the ground on which the house is built and the owning of the house which stands on the ground. This is done by what are called "fixed ground-rents." A ground-rent is paid for the use of the ground independent of the house which stands on it. In Philadelphia, a ground-rent once fixed by the man who first sells the land, cannot be changed and lasts forever. A ground-rent does not grow if the ground gets to be worth more. It stays the same. If the ground and house get to be worth more, the man who owns the ground-rent does not benefit by this, but the man who owns the house. Practically, when a house is bought under this plan, only the house is bought; the land is paid for by a fixed yearly sum which cannot be added to.

The law did this. This is one step. The next must be a desire to save money, and ability to use it after it is saved. This is done in Philadelphia by savings-banks, which depositors themselves manage, in order to get together the money for each to pay for a house. When you and 10,000 other persons put your pennies in a savings-bank they make many dollars. These dollars are taken by those in charge of the savings-bank and lent to men who pay interest. This interest is finally paid to you, less the cost of taking care of the money.

Sleep Fifty—even Years.
Irving's "Rip Van Winkle" is believed to have its foundation in the wonderful story which Pliny relates concerning the extraordinary experience of a shepherd named Epimenides. The scene is laid in Crete; the time summer, and Epimenides a boy of some 15 years. During the very warm part of the day he found that some of the sheep were missing, and at about the same time heard prolonged beating from the almost inaccessible portions of a neighboring mountain. He grasped his crook and started off in the direction of the sounds. The path was a very difficult one to travel over, the day hot, so that long before he reached the straggle sheep he was so overcome with fatigue that he lay down in a dry place in a cool cavern to sleep. He slept, Pliny gravely informs us, 57 years. At last, when he had finally managed to shake off the terrible lethargy that had held him spellbound for more than half a century, he returned to the herd only to find a brother younger than himself a tottering, gray-haired grandfather. That "all-will" proverb is very appropriate in this case, for we find that Epimenides' enraptured slumbers had endowed him with miraculous powers. He became a great epic poet and Gnostic philosopher, and even defied death itself for nearly three centuries, not dying until he had celebrated his 235th birthday.—St. Louis Republic.

She Hoed.
There's a young man in Detroit who persists in paying attention to a girl who would very much prefer that he would not liquidate in the aforesaid manner.
"Ah," he said to her the other morning, meeting her on the street, "I was at the theater last night and saw you at a distance."
"Yes," she answered sweetly, "I hope I shall see you often that way."

VICTOR BICYCLES

With the only complete bicycle plant in the world, where every part of the machine is made from A to Z, is it any wonder that Victor Bicycles are acknowledged leaders? There's no bicycle like a Victor, and no plant so grandly complete as the one devoted exclusively to the manufacture of this kind of wheels.

PERSONALS.

Those Who Come and Those Who Go.
 Hiram Jackson of Saginaw is in town visiting relatives and friends.
 Miss Irene Cook is back among Northville friends for a brief visit.
 R. C. Cunningham of the Detroit News spent part of Sunday with Rev. J. M. Belding.
 Orr Webster is now employed in a Syracuse, N. Y. photograph gallery.
 J. P. McFarlin and wife soon start for Toledo where he will take care of a stock farm.
 Mr. and Mrs. McCleary of Bay City are the guests of Wm. Thurtle and family this week.
 Mr. and Mrs. Hollingshead, of Detroit were the guests of their sister, Mrs. H. Veckes, over Sunday.
 "Tip" Brigham has moved his family back to Northville and intends to be a Northvillian from now on.
 Dr. Armstrong and wife from the Moravia land are visiting among old friends and relatives in this village.
 S. H. Whitney of Bay City is acting as agent at the F. & P. M. depot here during Mr. Lake's absence in the west.
 Mrs. M. A. Patterson and daughter Clara of Plymouth have been visiting her brother, Peter Ely, for a few days.
 John Hammond, the tinner in the employ of Geo. E. Waterman & Co. is called to the bedside of his sick wife, who is visiting in Chicago.
 Mrs. A. M. Randolph and Mrs. Jennie Johnson left for Chicago Tuesday to attend the world's fair. They are stopping at the home of Rev. Henry S. Jenkinson.
 Frank Woodman rode out from Detroit Monday on his wheel in the remarkable time of 1 hr. and 34 min. Frank is fitting himself up for the 25 mile road race Saturday.
 Miss Nina Ambler, after a four months apprenticeship in the trimming dept. of the wholesale millinery store of Wm. H. Mitchell & Co. Detroit, has returned home for a summer vacation.
 Mrs. A. E. Rockwell and daughter, Inez, left Monday for Chicago. They will attend the world's fair this week and Sunday with relatives at Milwaukee. While in Chicago they stop at Rev. H. S. Jenkinson's.
 Dr. A. J. Cowles of Durand was here Tuesday to accompany his wife home, who had been visiting at J. D. Covert's for a week past. Dr. Cowles, it will be remembered, was with the mob who came near lynching the Durand murderer Monday night. He was not with them Tuesday night when the feat was accomplished however.
 Our old friend, O. F. Carpenter and family, have, we are sorry to say, taken their departure from our village and by this time are settled in their new home at Tukhamock, Pa. If it were not for being so near about it, we should wish that they would have such luck there that they would be glad to move back to Northville where they would be properly cared for; where they are needed and had no business to leave. As it is, we commend them to the kindly consideration of Tukhamock people, to which town they will prove worthy acquisitions.

Mrs. Sherman Brush of Rochester is visiting in town.
 Mrs. E. K. Simonds is again quite seriously ill.
 Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Snyder of Detroit were guests of their son's Fred and James Withee, Sunday.
 Miss Lou Reed is at present assisting in the job printing department of the Record office.
 Lee Lamereaux is back at work again in the Globe shop at his old post—the turning lathe.
 H. E. Lake and wife left today for a western vacation. They will stop a short time at the world's fair after which they continue on towards the Pacific slope.
 Tuesday evening Miss Mandi Richardson was most agreeably surprised by the sudden and unlooked for appearance of about thirty of her young friends who met at her home on High street in this manner to commemorate her 19th birthday. After spending a delightful evening, visiting, games, banqueting and the like, the company departed taking with them pleasant recollections. She was the recipient of several fine presents from family and friends.

FREE RIDE TO DETROIT.

A Great Chance Offered by the Chicago Bankrupt Clothing Co.
 One of the greatest opportunities ever offered to the people of Michigan is that now given by the Chicago Bankrupt Clothing Co. of No. 4 Menomac ave., Detroit. The immense stock of the well known clothing and furnishing goods manufacturers, Messrs. Schloss, Adler, A. O. of 23 and 25 E. Second street, Detroit, was last week put into the hands of a receiver. This stock has been placed in the mammoth store No. 4 Menomac ave. and will be sacrificed at a price that is a matter of order to close out the stock as quickly as possible. The company makes this special offer to parties living out of town in order to close out the stock as quickly as possible. To every purchaser to the amount of $10 in clothing or furnishing goods, or less, a railroad fare will be paid one way and to the purchaser of $25 or over fare will be paid both ways. Cut out the notice, bring it with you and after you have made your purchase present it to the manager. Your fare will be deducted. Remember this stock is to be sold without reserve; every article must be sold at once, no matter how great the sacrifice and those that are early in taking advantage of this splendid sale will have the best chance for selection. Don't forget the place, No. 4 Menomac ave. opposite city hall and next to the German American Bank. Here you will find thousands of bargains that are being offered. Cut it out and bring it with you.

Things Said and Did in the Liveliest and Prettiest Village in Michigan.

Mystic Lodge No. 100 will observe Memorial day June 11.

How about the Northville bicycle club. Isn't it about time it was reorganized?

Don't forget the entertainment at the opera house tomorrow, Friday, night.

Wm. Thurlie, our landlord, has sold his matched team to C. J. Whitney of Detroit for a very good figure.

New constitution and by-laws for the Northville fire company are being issued from this office this week.

F. D. Butler has purchased the dray business of H. F. Jackson for $500 and is now carrying on the work.

A very neat and tasty catalog for 1893-94 has just been issued from this office for the Northville schools.

The Presbyterian's are making a move to improve their church surroundings and push ahead their annual house cleaning.

If anyone wants a dollar real bad we have one which we will give them. We don't know just who passed it off on us, but we do know it is real bad.

Mrs. Joseph Lewis, sister of Chancy Hoffman, of this place, died at her home in Grand Lodge last week and was taken to Detroit for burial Saturday.

The firemen will give an ice cream social Saturday evening. The time and place will be noted by the sweet music rendered by the Northville cornet band.

Rev. J. M. Belding requests that all who attend the missionary meeting this evening bring a small contribution. The meeting promises to be very interesting.

The Labadie-Rowell company which appears at the opera house Monday night is undoubtedly the strongest attraction ever seen here, being the cream of two consolidated companies.

When in Detroit stop at the Hotel Wayne, opposite the M. C. depot, where you will be well entertained and handsomely cared for. It costs no more to stop at the best hotel in the city than the cheapest.

The morning worship at the Methodist church next Sabbath will be a sort of family gathering, the children and young people all being invited and expected to attend. Brief service and short sermons, followed by Sunday school.

A recent issue of the Amsterdamp (N. Y.) Daily Democrat contained a very fine portrait of Rev. J. M. Belding of this place. The sketch was run in connection with a lengthy, and very interesting article entitled, "From my note book—sketch in the dim shadows of 1790," from the pen of the reverend gentleman.

We have another signed "P" communication this week regarding Northside's name, etc. It is rather a late hour for anyone to kick about it and as every thing was amiably and fairly settled months ago we see no use of a grumble now and any further communications on the subject are respectfully declined.

The entertainment at the opera house tomorrow, Friday night promises to be of more than ordinary merit. The vocal soloists, Fredrick Peters and J. H. Marvin, and Mrs. Perry Courtwright as a reader, have an almost state reputation. A glance at one of the programs will certainly commend the entertainment to Northville people.

The Northville High school class in chemistry has discovered, through chemical analysis, that the gum on the obverse side of the Columbian stamp is medicated and warranted to cure catarrh, brace up a torpid liver, mend broken chairs, destroy the appetite for alcohol, morphine and tobacco, relieve that tired feeling, cure warts and kill delinquent subscribers as well as potato bugs.

The Gypsy Festival at the opera house Saturday and Monday evening was a very successful and meritorious entertainment. The May-pole dance and the dancing of Lillian Amsden of Detroit were especially good. Hattie Yerkes and Ethelwyn Dubuar played some very pretty duets. Miss Agnes Whipple and Mr. Fred Wager each sang a very pleasing solo. Mrs. Riggs is deserving of much credit for her earnest work in getting up the entertainment and it certainly deserved a more liberal patronage.

The Chapman house is being put in apple order for the occupancy of Mrs. Lyman Yerkes.

Presbyterian Ladies Aid society tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. K. Starkweather at 3 o'clock.

The topic of the services next Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church is "Spiritual Gardening."

Sunday, June 10, is Maccabee memorial day and will be generally observed throughout Michigan.

Miss Mary Ely, a Northville high school pupil, won the Detroit Courier's $20 first prize for best original essay on Columbus.

The usual Sabbath Memorial services in honor of our dead heroes will be held at the Methodist church next Sabbath evening. The G. A. R. will attend in a body and Rev. Mr. Belding will preach in turns. Topic, "Silver lined war clouds."

While in Toronto, Ont., last week, E. D. Adams sold his Canadian patent to Myers Bros. of that city, who will at once commence to manufacture the Little Star ironed. They have several orders booked for the machines as soon as they can be got ready.

J. Miller, Highland Bros' popular meat cutter, and Miss Alice Stevens of Plymouth, were married the 17th inst by Rev. J. M. Belding of the Presbyterian church. The ceremony took place in the parlors of the hotel Normanda, Detroit.

The W. C. T. U. wish to thank all who assisted in the Gypsy Festival, also the parents of the children who assisted in preparing costumes. The profits, $9.00, goes toward the carpet. The entertainment tomorrow evening is for the same benefit.

There will be a musical and elocutionary entertainment at the Opera house tomorrow evening given by some Detroit's best singers and readers. The profits of this entertainment will go to help the W. C. T. U. ladies out of debt. Admission 20 cts; gallery 10 cts; children 10 cts.

Mr. Thurlie contemplates putting in a tell tale sewer from the opera house along Dunlap street to the river. The village will donate the crocks and he will ask a number of property owners to join with him and endeavor to extend the sewer from Hill or High street, clear through. This would be a neat thing for people along that beautiful avenue to enter into.

This evening at the Presbyterian church the topic will be Siam and Laos. These interesting countries will be discussed by the ladies of the church. Among those on the program are, Mrs. Dexter White, Mrs. J. A. Dubuar, Mrs. Lyman Brooks, Mrs. B. A. Wheeler, Mrs. H. Yerkes, Mrs. J. Q. Knapp, Mrs. E. S. Horson, Mrs. Geo. Bradley, Mrs. Dr. Swift, Mrs. L. E. Barium, Misses Emma Finkerton, Carrie Babbit, Jess Feckwell, Hattie Thompson, Katie White, Hattie Yerkes, Helen Breake, Ethel Gash, Harvie Root, Emma Conklyn, Ethel Dubuar, Mabel Clark, Lillian Covert, Miss Purdy.

The efficacy of the fire drill in schools is frequently shown. In New York City, a few days ago, a fire broke out in a parochial school building, and the scholars were quietly dismissed by a regular code of signals when the cries of fire and the noise of approaching engines were plainly heard by all, including some little ones not old enough to appreciate the danger of a panic. The fire drill is something that ought to be practiced in every school, frequently. We have repeatedly urged the adoption of such a drill in the Northville schools and it would not be a bad idea to make such a departure one of the features of the coming term.

On Monday evening next Mr. Francis Labadie and Miss Hattie Rowell, supported by one of the strongest companies ever here, will appear at the opera house in a gorgeous production of "Damon and Pythias." This play has been seen here before but has never yet had such an elegant production as it will receive this time. The supporting company consists of such eminent stars as W. J. Higby, Hubert and Oliver Labadie, C. C. Curmalla, Miss May Loranger and others. The costumes worn by the company are elegant, costly and correct in every detail. Considerable special scenery is used in the production. This company has played this piece for a long time and a first class entertainment is guaranteed. The price for Monday 25 cents, general seats 35 cents. Seats now on sale at Hueston's.

Brown's Colts and either the Ypsilanti or Ann Arbor college teams will play a game of ball here May 30.

J. O. Knapp has but one big toe now. He had two until Monday night when his horse stepped severely on his foot.

The Northville Masons who went to Detroit Tuesday evening, the guests of Oriental Lodge, report an elegant time and a right royal reception.

Prof. Bliss mastered the art of bicycling in 1884 and off of an evening may now be seen speeding along the village's shady avenues.

Lost—Since Monday, a long red pocketbook, containing certificate of deposit. Finder will please return to Luther Lapham.

E. S. Horton has purchased the remaining 50 acres of land belonging to the McFarlin heirs and intends to equip it with a neat farm house and barns.

The association kickers, chiefly Cleveland, are trying to oust Pitcher Yerkes from the D. A. C. ball club but Manager Leady says it is no go and he proposes to see that Don stays.

Last Saturday while Gus Dolph was on his way home he had to stop off in Saginaw, and had a good chance to see the fire. Gus says you can put Northville right in the burned district.

The endowment certificate of Mrs. Julia H. Blair, payable to Charles R. Blair for $500 has been paid by the Great Hive, L. O. T. M.; also Mrs. Name Patterson's payable to Myron A. Patterson of $1,000 has been paid.

Seth Tubbs' coil got frightened while being hitched up in front of Palmer & Slater's blacksmith shop yesterday and during the fracas, Mr. Tubbs received a few ugly scalp wounds, fortunately not serious ones however.

For the benefit of the Fenton Independent and its many readers we wish to say that the W. J. Stark who recently moved from here to Detroit to go into the meat market business is not Wilbur H. Stark of Stark Bros., formerly of Fenton. Those boys are still doing business at the old stand.

The Presbyterian pulpit paid the Record Job office a very neat compliment Sunday evening. It is very refreshing to occasionally find some one who knows a good piece of work when they see it and knowing it is not afraid to say so. No one appreciates such kindly courtesies more than the printer.

Johanni Tibom intends to go to Plymouth this week with a string of colts, which he will put in shape to do some fast going this fall. Among the number is the promising young colt "Den Harrison" owned by Starkweather & Johnson who expect to see him make some fast time as he is one of the best bred colts in the county.

A PURE FOOD BILL

Before the Michigan Legislature From the Lansing Journal.

"A bill for the preservation of the public health, and to provide against fraud and adulteration in food, drink and drugs," has been introduced in the Legislature at Lansing, by Mr. Neukirk. This bill is intended to prevent the adulteration of food and drink, and should it become a law, would no doubt go a great way toward protecting the public against the manufacturers of Alum and Ammonia baking powders. The leading medical authorities everywhere condemn the use of Alum in baking powders.

The Chicago Tribune, referring to the question of legislation on Alum and Ammonia baking powders, says: "It deals in a direct manner with an evil that must be cut down."

Following is a partial list of the names of the brands sold in this state that have been examined and found to contain either Alum or Ammonia. Many of the Alum and Ammonia powders are labeled and advertised as "absolutely pure" in order to mislead the public:

"Keaton," "Calumet," "Chicago Yeast," "Grant's Bon Bon," "Hotel," "Forest City," "Silver Star," "Monarch," "Rocket," "Home," "Perfection," "Unrivalled," "Town's Talk," "Loyal," "Snow Ball," "Climax," "Western Prince," "Crown," "White Cross," "Fos Fon," "Imperial."

In addition to the above list there is a multitude of brands sold with a prize. It is safe to reject all baking powders sold with a prize, as the tests show they are composed largely of Alum and cost but a few cents a pound. Also refuse any baking powder sold for twenty-five cents a pound, or less; it is sure to contain Alum.

Surely nothing but their cheapness could induce the public to experiment with unwholesome baking powders, at the risk of health. Aside from the question of health or wholesomeness, and viewed from the standpoint of economy alone, a pure cream tartar baking powder like "Dr. Price's" from its greater known strength and unquestioned purity will prove more economical to the user in every way.

AROUND THE STATE

AN OKEMOS WOMAN POISONS HER YOUNG SON.

When a Post Mortem was to be held the Body had Disappeared, but Later Recovered in a Deep Well.

The neighborhood of Okemos, six miles southeast of Lansing, was very much wrought up over the mysterious death of a little boy and several preceding events.

About a year ago Frank Harre, who lived near Okemos, was killed in the woods by a falling tree. Mrs. Harre with her son and two daughters continued to reside on the farm for a time but finally removed to the village for the reason as given by the mother that someone was constantly molesting and annoying them.

John Connor's saloon at Ishpeming was blown up with dynamite. Prohibits are suspected.

Fire at Reed City burned $1,000 worth of shingles belonging to Wenzel Bros. and Gerber & Merrill.

Daniel Murphy and George Smith were drowned in Portage lake, near Houghton, while playing in a small boat.

George Harriman, for killing Frederick Root, and George Lee, for criminally assaulting a 14-year-old girl, both of Saginaw sentenced to 10 years at Jackson.

Edwin Wooding, a prominent citizen of Augusta, committed suicide by hanging. He had been despondent for some time. His age was 38. He was a son of Anthony Wooding.

John Peters was drowned near Hart by the capsizing of a boat. His remains were found the next day in a standing posture in the water. Part of the head was out of the water.

Ered Todd and Robert Wolfried, employed in the News office at Saginaw, went for a sail and have not been seen since. It is feared that they are lost, as neither of them could manage a boat.

Mrs. Minnie Herre, the Okemos woman who poisoned her little boy, undoubtedly is insane. The effect of being confined in prison is telling on her, and she has broken down completely. She tears her hair and clothes, gives way to fits of crazy laughter and acts like a crazy maniac.

A northbound freight on the Michigan Central broke on the down grade south of the Grand Trunk crossing at LaPeer. An engine on the latter road stopped before the crossing, not knowing that the train had broken. The rear sections ran into the engine. Seven empty cars were smashed to kindling wood. Nobody was hurt.

Valentine Kohler, formerly a hotel-keeper of Big Rapids, committed suicide with the same revolver which he used about 12 years ago when he shot and killed a man named Johnson. For this he was sentenced to Jackson for life, but after serving a couple of months in prison he secured a retrial, which took place in Oscoda county, and was acquitted.

Stephen Martin, who lived near Blissfield, gave his dogs a sufficient quantity of water and meat to last them for some time and then committed suicide by taking strychnine. His body was found in his house three or four days later. He had separated from his wife and was despondent, having frequently threatened to kill himself. He leaves two sons and two daughters.

THE DURAND MURDERER CAUGHT IN DETROIT.

William Sullivan, wanted at Durand for the murder of Leyton Leech, and the attempted murder of the Leech's wife, was arrested at Detroit and locked up there. The prisoner declares that his name is not Sullivan and that he never was in Durand in his life, but six persons who have known him from his boyhood in his old home in New Haven, Mich., have positively identified him as the long-sought-for murderer.

St. Louis is to have free reading room.

The Lansing Iron & Engine works had a $1,500 blaze.

Mrs. John Gleason's residence, at Ishpeming, was burned; loss about $4,000.

Michael Cuhak, a boy 8 years of age, was drowned at Menominee while fishing off a log boom.

John Connor's saloon at Ishpeming was blown up with dynamite. Prohibits are suspected.

Fire at Reed City burned $1,000 worth of shingles belonging to Wenzel Bros. and Gerber & Merrill.

FREAKS OF THE FLAMES

$1,000,000 WORTH OF PROPERTY BURNED AT SAGINAW.

Eleven Men and 16 Horses Burned to Death at Lake City—Disastrous Forest Fires at Various Northern Points.

A fire which started in a deserted mill near the Saginaw river at East Saginaw destroyed over $1,000,000 worth of property and left 250 families homeless.

From the old mill sparks carried the fire to 700,000 feet of lumber near by and from there it spread with awful rapidity.

Bay City and Flint sent help, but still the flames rolled on. Wickler's big ice house, the Geo. F. Cross Lumber Co.'s planing mill and lumber yard and a dozen tenement houses went like tinder.

Soon the best residences were on fire; Jefferson avenue was swept clean for blocks and huge blocks of charred and blackened ruins are all that remain of five places on that street, on Emerson, Owen, Howard, Sherman and Warren and numerous houses on other streets.

Hoschke No. 3 on South Washington avenue caught fire while its tenants were fighting the flames and was completely gutted. Slade's mill and the McClellan-File factory, both being important industries, were threatened, but vigorous fighting saved them.

St. Vincent's Orphan's Home, a Catholic institution, was burned to the ground but fortunately all the inmates escaped. St. Mary's Hospital on South Jefferson avenue was saved although it seems hardly credible. Two dwellings near St. Mary's Hospital were also preserved, but everything except these three buildings for squares around was swept clean of every vestige of habitation.

While all this vast territory was a blazing furnace Germain's immense planing mill caught fire in the roof behind the smokestack and was soon a blazing mass. It was completely destroyed except a new warehouse. With the plant were also destroyed thousands of feet of lumber to use as material for manufacturing. This plant was one of the most important in the city.

There was but one fatality although there were many narrow escapes. Robert Turner, aged 39 years and quite feeble, wandered away from the home of his son-in-law while it was burning and was overcome by the smoke and heat. His charred remains were found some distance away, but the exact manner of death is unknown. A list of the losses made at a late hour indicates that they may not foot up more than one million dollars, with insurance about six hundred thousand dollars.

Another fire at Saginaw. The citizens of Saginaw had not recovered from their fright of the first fire when two days later, while a heavy wind was blowing a fire was kindled in the business portion of the town and the greatest excitement prevailed.

The Hotel Vincent and the Marshall house were in the block in which the fire was burning and the entire business portion of the city was threatened. By the hard work of the fire department, however, only $5,000 worth of damage was done. The Union hotel was destroyed and the guests and employes barely escaped with their lives and saved nothing.

Another heavy fire broke out in an occupied wooden building were also burned.

Big Forest Fires.

Special from Cadillac: Forest fires are raging all about this place. The lumber camp of Louis Sands, near Lake City, was destroyed and 12 men were burned to death. All the horses and paraphernalia of the camp were destroyed.

Edward Margeridge's sawmill, four miles south on the Toledo & Ann Arbor, was burned with house and boarding houses. Loss, $100,000. No insurance.

Lake City. Particulars of the terrific fire tragedy at Sands' lumber camp near Lake City, by which 11 men lost their lives, have been received. All the men in the camp, 60 in number, were assembled at dinner. The forest fire, which was burning all around, entirely surrounded the camp, cutting off all the escape. When the men, realizing their danger, rushed out of the building in which they had been sitting, the smoke so blinded them that they were unable to find their father and thither unable to find means of escape. Their horses were stampeded, adding to the confusion.

Eight of the men jumped into a well to escape the flames and there died of suffocation and were burned by falling timbers. Their scorched and blackened bodies were brought to the surface. Others of the men took to the woods and some of the teamsters thus escaped, but the bodies of two of them were afterwards found burned to a cinder. One man reached Lake City, terribly burned, and there died in a fever agony. Eight teams of horses were cremated.

Most of the unfortunates were strangers there, and the bodies were shipped to friends where known.

Forest Fires in the U. P.

Iron Mountain special: Forest fires are raging in every direction all over this region, and the loss will be very heavy. Norway was in great danger of being destroyed and help was asked for from England and several hundred men went from here to assist in fighting the flames. The railroads are experiencing much difficulty in saving the bridges.

At Bollman's camp, near Dollar Bay, a number of houses were burned, and over 40 families were forced to bury their household effects in the ground. A large number of horses were burned in the camp. Engineer Shea, with a wood train, was surrounded by a fire. He opened the throttle and made a race for life.

Killed While Fighting Forest Fires.

Meredith had a narrow escape from forest fires which were burning in the A. W. Wright Lumber company pine, west of the town. The company lost their camps and much valuable timber. With such rapidity did the fire burn that the men and the teams barely escaped with their lives. James Hendrie was killed by a falling tree while fighting the fire. The loss in this section will run into the thousands of dollars. Meister's shingle mill, seven miles north of there, also burned.

Loss From Forest Fires at Alpena.

Forest fires started in the woods adjacent to Alpena, and burned briskly. The farm house and barns, with contents, belonging to Paul Weine, near Long Lake, were in the pathway of the flames and were totally destroyed. The fire department of Alpena responded to five alarms in 21 hours, the most disastrous being that in the barn of C. B. Greely, which was destroyed with all its contents, consisting of a large quantity of grain, horses and camp supplies.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE—Ninety-third day—Bills passed: amending the charter of Alpena; amending the charter of Flint; amending the charter of Oscoda; amending law relative to commencing actions of tort; creating a jury court; judicial circuit; appropriation for colony house, new boiler and engine house, and other improvements; amending law relative to village of St. Johns; for separate boards of control of the city of Alpena; for separate boards of control of the city of Flint; for separate boards of control of the city of Oscoda; for separate boards of control of the city of Saginaw; for separate boards of control of the city of Bay City; for separate boards of control of the city of East Saginaw; for separate boards of control of the city of Houghton; for separate boards of control of the city of Ionia; for separate boards of control of the city of Jackson; for separate boards of control of the city of Lansing; for separate boards of control of the city of Marquette; for separate boards of control of the city of Muskegon; for separate boards of control of the city of Okemos; for separate boards of control of the city of Port Huron; for separate boards of control of the city of Reed City; for separate boards of control of the city of Saginaw; for separate boards of control of the city of St. Ignace; for separate boards of control of the city of Tawas; for separate boards of control of the city of Union City; for separate boards of control of the city of Warren; for separate boards of control of the city of West Branch; for separate boards of control of the city of Whitefish Bay; for separate boards of control of the city of Ypsilanti.

A WAR ROMANCE.

Written for Memorial Day.

THE LITTLE TELEGRAPH OFFICE at the foot of the mountain in Sam Chester rode up and down a burning day, and the evening air was still almost stilling.

Just beyond the door, which stood open, he caught sight of a faultless figure, and saw that the girl who watched the instrument was reading in the last light of the dying day. He knew her. Sam did, and he had often wondered what had brought her from a pleasant home at the North to a station like that in the heart of the Gila country.

The very loneliness of the place had thrown them more or less together, but nothing like love had, as yet, passed between them; though Sam, old soldier that he was, had thought what a pretty wife he would have if he could win her.

"Here're not all alike, the women," he would say to himself, when he was watching her from the platform, half fearing to address her, though he knew that he would meet with a welcome no matter how busy she was. "The boys used to say in the army that I was doomed to live out my days without a wife, but I don't know. I rather like Bess, perhaps, because we're both from the same state, but—"

"This would always be the end of his musing, and he would steal away if he happened to come in sight, and she would see nothing more of him the rest of the day."

But on this particular afternoon Sam came to the door, and touched his hat to the girl, who had the look aside and asked him if a storm was coming. "I can't know about that," said Sam. "I don't think we are going to have the sort of a storm you fear, Miss Bess, but the Indians are up again down on the river, and you are up to have trouble with them."

"Oh, I hope not. They came by here to-day and meddled unpleasantly to me. But just here, one of your ordinary companions dropped in upon me this afternoon."

"One of my parades," echoed Sam. "At least he said he was."

"What did he call himself?" "Jack Dawson."

In an instant Sam fell back, white as the lips, and the girl, who happened to be looking at his hands, saw them shut impulsively.

"He doesn't look for me. No, no, never dreams that I am here, and I could startle him out of his boots."

All at once the man in front of the shanty knocked the ashes from his pipe and looked up.

"What did he see?" "In the light stood the man he had not met in nearly twenty years!"

For a moment the twin stood face to face, and Sam, advancing, impulsively said:

"At last! You didn't look for me, Jack, eh?"

FIGHTING THE WHOLE BAND.

"For you in this country? Heavens, no! I heard you were somewhere in Arizona, but I never thought of being surprised in this manner."

"How are you fixed, Sam?" "Tolerable."

"Married?" "No, of course not. I've found one pretty girl in this God-forsaken land. I don't say that because she came from the old state, but she's an angel all the same. I mean the one up yonder at the station."

"Jesse?" "Is that her name?" said Jack.

"By thunder! you know it was," and Sam drew closer, and looked daggers at the undisturbed face of the man he hated.

"I did not ask her what her name was," was the reply. "I happened to pull up there the other day, and this very day, too. She is a pretty girl, Sam; but we'll not discuss beauty now. Where do you live?"

Livid with suppressed rage, Sam could hardly talk, but he managed to tell Jack that he had a little ranch, and was making a good living.

"I don't get to decorate to-morrow," said Jack, after a moment's silence.

"I hadn't thought of that."

"It's the 30th, you know."

"Yes."

"The boys will get the wreath and the eulogy, and we—why, hang it all, Sam—we won't get anything."

There was no reply, and Sam Chester looked at the old pard with eyes that boded him no good.

They swapped army reminiscences to some extent, but Sam Chester's heart was not in the game and he soon withdrew, declining the invitation to pass the night at Jack's shanty.

Sam Chester stood in front of his shanty and saw the soaring vultures as they soared in air wings over the plain and swooped down upon the fresh morsel which the night had brought for the carion feast.

It was the day after his sudden interview with his old enemy.

After breakfast he rode his ranch as was his custom, and then galloped toward the little railroad station where Bess held down the keys.

"Gods! What was that?" "He drew rein, and then stood erect in his broad stirrups."

"There's trouble at the station," he cried, sinking the spurs into the black steed's flanks, and in an instant was off like the wind.

Horror came to his face when he rode out from the corral and saw the little station-house.

Smoke was curling over a mass of ruins, and as he hastened on he heard reports of firearms, and then caught sight of some men who were not Indians circling off over the sand.

"Bandits!" "It was a raid, and when he thought of Bess's beauty, when he comprehended all that a border foray meant, he grew pale, and for an instant seemed to totter in the saddle."

Down upon the ruined station he came with the fury of a storm, and drawing a rein in front of the scene, looked around for a glimpse of Bess.

But the girl was gone, and though he looked everywhere he could see nothing that would remind him of her safety.

He turned to the bandits riding off, and now dark specks against the horizon.

"There was a fight here," he said, "but who resisted them—Bess?" "The rascals had cut the wires, and Sam saw that some sanguinary work had taken place, which probably accounted for the burning of the office."

"This was a premeditated attack. They knew the girl was defenseless, and that's why they came. They wanted to get even with the company for issuing that merciless order against bandits last summer. I think I know who did this piece of work, and he shall pay dearly for it."

Sam rode from the scene of ruin with a heavy heart.

He looked up at the cloudless sky and thought for a moment of the sacredness of the day. There were to be no memorial exercises for him, though he knew that his comrades scattered over the land would keep it sacred, and strew flowers in more than a thousand places.

But for him a hunt for vengeance! Sam struck a trail and followed it.

"I don't know what this means," he ejaculated. "Here I am going toward Jack Dawson's ranch. The trail leads from the station, and he said that Bess was a beauty—curses him! I wonder what this means, anyhow."

On, on, over the arid waste, and at last through the cañon pass which would let him out upon the ranch tenanted by his old foe.

Sam was breathing hard when he emerged from the bushes and rode into the cañon. He looked forward and saw the little shanty where he had encountered his rival. The door was open, and he caught sight of a figure standing like a statue there in the hot rays of the sun.

"Great heavens! it looks like Bess!" cried Sam, feeling his blood in his hot temples.

What his eyes and then opened them, but the vision was still before him. Bess was in the door, but she had not seen him, and he rode on, wondering what she would say and how he should meet her. Bess in Jack Dawson's shanty. It was a torture; it was the next thing to death!

All at once the girl turned and faced him. She looked at him a moment, and then bounded from the shanty.

"Don't!" cried Sam, holding up his hands. "I see all. You've been won by my old enemy, and—"

He did not stop her, for she came on, and then he saw how white she was and how the hand trembled when it was laid upon his knee while the blue eyes of the girl were lifted in mute appeal.

"Go in and see him," she said. "It was all for me, Sam. He came to the station just ahead of the bandits and faced them with the Winchester, fighting the whole band until they gave him the wound which has just finished him."

Something seemed to mount up into Sam Chester's throat and choke him. He looked toward the ranch shanty and then down into the eyes of Bess.

"You don't tell me he's dead?" he stammered.

"Come and see," was the reply. "I saved me from the bandits, but it cost a brave life."

Sam seemed to shrink from the order, but he dismounted and crossed the threshold of the loneliness, where, with an oared head, he stood gazing down upon the sunburnt face which, despite its shadow, wore the hue of death.

Bess stood aloof and looked on.

"It was the day before Gettysburg, and we were marching along the picket when we quarreled. I guess I would have finished him then if the Captain hadn't interfered, and if I had he wouldn't have saved you from the bandits, Bess."

The girl made no reply.

"I know what I can do, and that's not very much," continued Sam. "She watched him as he left the shanty, and after a while he came back to her."

"I've found a quiet spot," said he. "I don't think he's coming. I ever find it, and the vultures will miss a feast. You needn't help me, Bess. I had a volcano in my arms."

Courage like that sometimes accredited to the red man was witnessed at Steamokin, Pa., the other day. Irvin, Derk, Charles Shannon and Clarence Fredericks broke into Welly's powder mill one night and secured a large amount of duolin.

Next morning the boys found it frozen. Derk stacked 100 pieces as large as a candle around a stove to thaw. The lads went skating, and later Mrs. Derk discovered the explosive, partial y melted. She summoned her husband, who, after wrapping clothes around his feet and fitting gloves upon his hands, bravely crept up to the sputtering duolin. Piece by piece he laid it in the clothes basket, expecting every moment that he and the house would be blown to pieces. When he emerged with the explosives he was cheered by the by-standers.—Philadelphia Record.

Artillery Practice on Board Ship.

During a cruise of the ships of our white fleet the guns are fired with full charges once a month. But it costs hundreds of dollars to do this, and for purposes of drill between times a block is fitted into the barrel of each gun. This block is perforated with a bore not much larger than a rifle barrel, and to fire a blank cartridge through that only costs a cent. At the same time all the mechanism of the gun has to be used as in firing heavy charges, so that the sailors get the benefit of the practice.

THE FIRST USE OF GAS.

The Honor of Its Introduction Belongs to William Murdoch.

Great was the amazement of all Europe when, at about the close of the last century, William Murdoch discovered that gas could be used for illuminating purposes. So little was the invention understood by those who had not seen it in use that even the great and wise men (?) of the British parliament laughed at the idea. "How can there be a light without a wick?" said one member of that august body with a wink and a knowing nod. Even the great Sir Humphrey Davy ridiculed the idea of lighting towns and cities with gas. He one day asked Murdoch: "Do you mean to use the dome of St. Paul's for your gas meter?" Sir Walter Scott also made merry of the gas idea and of the coming attempt to illuminate London with smoke from a tar factory. "When the house of commons was finally lighted with the new illuminant the architect and custodian of the building, who imagined that the gas ran as fire through the pipes, insisted that they be removed several inches from the wall to prevent the building from taking fire! Several distinguished members were also observed carefully touching the pipes with their gloved fingers and then smelling of them to see if they could detect the odor of burnt leather."

The first shop in London lighted by gas was one of which a Mr. Ackerman, a German, was the proprietor. This shop was on the Strand, and the date was 1811. One of the ladies of rank who often visited the Ackerman shop was so delighted with the brilliancy of a gas jet on one of the counters that she requested the proprietor to let her take it home for the evening, promising to return it safe and sound on the morrow.

Although many lay claim to the honor of being the first to introduce gas for practical purposes, all the glory there is in it should be accorded to Murdoch, who was, no doubt, the original discoverer of the art.

Journals of Explorers in That Little-Known Country.

Captain Bower, the Tibetan explorer, has arrived in London with a mass of valuable information concerning that little-known country, which he has collected primarily for the benefit of the Indian government. In the course of fifteen months of travel across the wildest part of the country he learned many curious and interesting facts about the inhabitants. His journey was made during 1891 and 1892, and his route was almost due west to east, starting from Leh or Ladak and crossing the track of some other explorers who had traversed the country from north to south. He crossed, among others, the route followed by Al. Bonvalot, the French explorer, and his companion, Prince Henry of Orleans, but, like all other travelers in recent times, he found it impossible to enter Lhasa. His nearest point was about 15 miles from the holy city. The priests are practically supreme in the country, but nowhere did he meet with hostile treatment from the natives. The Sikkim war has had a wholesome effect, and the Englishman traveling in Thibet is now in no danger. Some idea of the difficulties and hardships of the journey may be gathered from the fact that much of the road was from five to eighteen thousand feet above the level of the sea, and that for weeks together he and his companions did not meet a single human being.

Be on your Guard.

If some grocers urge another baking powder upon you in place of the "Royal," it is because of the greater profit upon it. This of itself is evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

To insure the finest cake, the most wholesome food, be sure that no substitute for Royal Baking Powder is accepted by you.
