Vol. XXVIII, No. 31.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, MARCH 12, 1897.

1.00 per Year, in advance.

ANOTHER WRECK.

It Occurred Early Tuesday Morning.

The heavy fog, prevailing most of the week, was the cause of another wreck on the F. & P. M. about three-fourths of a mile north of here early Tuesday morning. As was the case in the one last Friday morning, the train broke in two above the curve on the down grade, and the crew not being able to see lights anyway, did not know that they were parted. The engineer slowed up, as before, and the tail end came tearing along at a terrific rate, bumping into the section ahead and pulling up loaded freight cars up, tearing rails and ties loose, and scattering debris in every direction. There was no one injured. This is the worst wreck on the F. & P. M. railroad in several years, and it looks as if they were not mere accidents, there being a strike on at this time. The wrecker got to work almost immediately, but the track could not be cleared for some time. Hundreds of people fringed through the mud and rain to visit the scene of the disaster, and disconsolate, disgruntled, travelers of the steiner sex from number 10 paddled forlornly past the wreck to a waiting train which was to carry them on their journey, while ladies and those who would not wait were transported in omnibuses.

WHIPPLE-MURRAY WEDDING

Was Celebrated at the Bride's Home Tuesday Afternoon.

A very dainty home wedding was solemnized at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the presence of the relatives and friends of the contracting parties, at the residence of the bride's father, John J. Thompson, the occasion being the marriage of Mrs. Leona Thompson-Murray to Mr. Charles Whipple of Northfield. Rev. Mr. Nightingale of the Baptist church performed the ceremony.

Without all was grey, misty and cheerless, but within as a type of the beauty of the life to be, there was only light, life, flowers and happy words. Under the softly shaded light of many lamps the spacious parlors looked doubly beautiful with their decorations of green and blood. Two corners of the room were hidden with massive banks of palms, and one was filled with a pyramid of potted mangleworts in bloom. The screens and dainty lace curtains fine as cobwebs, were decorated with trailing wreaths of smilax. Great vases of beautiful hall blown-roses stood on graceful, little stands, and above the heads of the bride and groom in the arch of the bay window, were two true lover's knots of smilax. The dining room was decorated with carnations and smilax and lighted by yellow shaded lamps. The guests were each given a boutonniere of fragrant violets, and served to an exquisite wedding luncheon in the most graceful, methodical and delicate manner by Miss Margaret and Mrs. Agnes Gage-Thompson and Messrs. "Eddie" Thompson and Orr Webster. H. F. Brown was master of ceremonies and the perfection of every detail testified to his artistic taste and executive ability.

The bride was attired in a handsome gown of pale blue Japanese silk, cut princess train and trimmed in white "fiere" lace, blue satin ribbon, and electric blue velvet. Her slippers were of blue satin and she carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Whipple, wore a dainty white organdie. The bridegroom and groomsmen, Henry Fry, were attired in the conventional black. Miss Thompson played the wedding march.

After a brief wedding tour to Grand Rapids, Mr. and Mrs. Whipple will be at home to their friends at Northfield.

Farmington News.

Miss Inez Riley has recovered from her recent illness.

Miss Anna Conroy was quite poorly last week but is now better.

Little Edwin Allen who has been so seriously ill is now convalescing.

Mrs. Lyman Sprague is now being entertained by the chicken-pox.

Mrs. Gertrude Place of Milford is the guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Ward, and other relatives in this vicinity.

Gale Collins and wife of Mt. Clemens have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Constantine Collins for the past few days.

Bert Roach and Miss Rhoda Sherman were entertained a part of last week at Royal Oak the guests of Miss Eva Hill.

A pleasant meeting was had by the Helping Hand society at the home of Mrs. J. H. Mc Gee on Friday afternoon of last week.

R. R. Owen, wife and son Markie have returned to their Detroit home, after a delightful visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Owen.

Geo. Edwards and family have been entertaining a son and brother Will Edwards, wife and daughter from Drayton, Plains for a few days past.

Quarterly meeting services will be held Sunday, Mar. 21st, in the Methodist church. Quarterly conference will be held the preceding Saturday.

Rev. C. T. Allen of Detroit will be present on both occasions and will deliver the sermon Sunday morning.

The Record correspondent had the pleasure of looking through the office of the Enterprise Printing Co. one day recently and inspecting the new presses. Farmington people feel quite proud of the fact that they have an up-to-date steam printing office in town and we give Editor Bloomer much credit for his push and enterprise.

The annual election of village officers occurred here Monday. The following gentlemen will look after our best interests for the next year: President, Fred M. Warner 02; trustee two years, William Kennedy 92; Elliott P. Holcomb 91, Edwin W. Parker 99; clerk, James J. Webster 93; treasurer, Harry W. Moore 57; Walter B. Shurwell 36; assessor, Lewis D. Owen 59.

The Misses Blanchard and Nellie Bloomer received certificates at the teachers' examination held at Milford. They have both secured schools: Miss Edna Blanchard began teaching Monday, Mar. 1, in the Clarenceville school. Miss Nellie Bloomer will begin the school in the Putnam Dist., Nov. 1, Mar. 22. May they both be successful workers in their new vocation is the wish of their friends, Record correspondents.

It quite often occurs that through the forgetfulness of a scribe many items of interest are omitted. Again it sometimes happens that through some good reason, items that are sent by a correspondent are not published. Everyone is fallible. It is hoped that no ill will is cherished against the Farmington correspondent of the Record, because of the non-appearance of a certain item as it was wholly unintentional on their part.

There was a large attendance in the Methodist church Sunday, evening to listen to the address by Mr. Edwin Hoop of North Farmington, a young man of christian integrity and possessing unusual powers as an orator and a fluent speaker. He is held in high esteem for both character and ability by many warm friends. He is an enthusiastic advocate of reform and is very anxious for the up-building and up lifting of humanity. His subject was "The Cross." His remarks were excellent and the congregation listened with untiring interest to the close.

A humorous entertainment entitled "The District School," consisting of three scenes, viz.: 1st Examination of Teachers; 2nd First Day at School; 3rd Closing Exercises of the School, will be given in the town hall Saturday evening, March 20, under the auspices of the Helping Hand society. Admission 15c and 10c. This promises to be an attractive entertainment and worth the price. The E. H. is a wide awake society and is increasing in numbers and interest all the time. Mrs. Dr. Holcomb makes an excellent president possessing fine executive ability.

On Tuesday evening, March 16th in the Methodist church a literary and social entertainment will be given under the auspices of the literary and social departments of the League. The literary program will be given as follows:

Invocation—Pres. Rev. D. M. Ward.
Music—Rev. D. M. Ward, wife, and daughter Josephine.
Recitation—Miss Rhoda Sherman.
Vocal Solo—Miss Marie Warner.
Reading—Miss Jennie L. White.
Vocal Duet—Misses Maud Edwards and Lella Sowle.
Recitation—Miss Inez Riley.
Vocal solo—Clyde Nichols.
Recitation—Miss Bessie Newton.
Music—League Quartette.

Instrumental duet—Fred Follette, Miss Grace E. Tremper.

The program will be followed by the social entertainment during which Bible words read in two ways will be

Suburban News.

Twenty tramps were entertained at the Holly jail in one night lately.

South Lyon is earnestly struggling for light (electric) but with no very brilliant prospects as yet.

The Young Woman's Guild of Pontiac had a pancake social last week. They also had losses, we infer.

The Ponton Independent had a novelty last week in the shape of a big local advertisement printed in red.

One of our exchanges chronicles the birth of a "baby girl." We had an idea all girls were babies at that early stage.

An Orion man who wanted some clover seed badly enough to take it without the owner's knowledge was sentenced last week to five years imprisonment.

One of the Belleville Enterprise's correspondence tells of a horse that is used as a mail carrier by tying letters to its neck and sending it around the neighborhood with them. That's evidently a horse on the editor.

The G. A. R. entertainment at Milford Feb. 22, was one of the most successful meetings of the kind ever held there. The receipts were $127.50. Expenses $52.19, so that the local post had a balance in its favor of $75.31.

Howard City has stepped into line with a curfew bell that makes the youngsters scarce on the streets at 7:30. This reminds us of a suggestion we saw somewhere that the governor should have a curfew for the legislators at Lansing.

The Wayne Review wants the legislature to pass a law compelling railroad companies to furnish a translator with their brakemen, and the men who call out trains at the larger stations, to follow along and tell the public what the fellow says.

The Plymouth Mail quotes the Courier item about the poor picture of Will R. Payne, in a recent issue of the Nanticoke. "Ann. Banner, and adds: 'It will pay him to think of it in the rear to come, but then he will probably have several little Paynes to keep his mind from dwelling on that.' Wonder how the Mail found out?—Ann Arbor Courier.

And the Mail man an "old batch" at that.

The editor of the Flat Rock News is a devoted poultry fancier and what he knows about poultry would compare well with what Horace Greeley knew about farming. A subscriber sent him this query recently: "What kills my hens? Every morning I find one or more of them keeled over to rise no more." The reply was: "The fowls are dead. It is an old complaint and nothing can be done except to bury them."

A correspondent of the Ypsilantian writes:

"Meeting your Uncle Solon the other day (?) with a face as long as a Cuban Trocha, I inquired the cause thereof. 'First,' he said, 'they wouldn't let me smoke in the House; then they took my pipe away, one that I have had so many years, and now, to cap the climax, Sawyer has introduced a bill to prevent me from going barefooted while here, and all for three dollars a day. I won't stand it!'"

Monroe theater goers are kicking about the literal manner in which a recent city ordinance on the head-gear question is being enforced in one of their opera houses. Even elderly folks who don't sit in the theater without some slight protection for their craniums are rigidly compelled to bare their devoted heads to sneeze dealing draughts, when their covering is of the most unobtrusive character. It is possible to have too much even of a good thing.

An item from the Orion Review is going the rounds concerning a cat that disappeared during the Oakland Cyclone last May and "came back" to her former home after an absence of seven months. There are some dark hints about "sea serpent stories" but that cat must have "had trouble of her own," and if she could only write poetry, her meditations would probably inspire something like this:

If all the catastrophe could but be told,
What a felicitous tale my news unfold!

The Record Printery is equipped with one of the prettiest and "slickest" running gas engines in the state. If any of our readers wish to see it at work they are invited to call any day from four to six or any Friday forenoon. Visitors always welcome.—Northville Record. Notwithstanding the Times has one just a little slicker than the Record's. Any of our readers are invited to come in and see it in operation. Oh, well, what's the use of trying to tell one larger than the Times has when all three are alike and made by the same company.—Plymouth Mail. And get both these offices, by actual

We notice that some of our sister villages of southern Michigan have put up but one ticket for the spring election. It rather looks as if that method was hardly a fair one to the voters.

A stereopticon show company that had advertised a date at South Lyon were obliged to cancel the engagement when the marshal called for a two dollar license. The company lacked four half dollars of having enough cash to pay the fee. They will steer clear of such up-to-date towns in the future.

About 40 Hollyites lately took pity on the editor of the Advertiser at that place, and brought him a lot of good victuals and even were kind enough to stay and help eat them. Jim was so glad to get the grub that he let them have all the fun they wanted to playing cards and "snap and catch em," feedle's eye, etc. with a few jigs thrown in.

A couple of Belleville ladies—mother and daughter—both dreamed of finding a lot of cash in an old couch and were so impressed by the coincidence that they proceeded to demolish the article of furniture and were rewarded by finding some ancient and rusty pins and hairpins. Probably they will not trust such stuff as dreams are made of again.

The editor of the Grass Lake News has a prospective fortune, according to the Ploverville Observer, which discounts anything ever thought of by the Ann Arbor Heirs, and he doesn't have to share his expectation with any one either. 30 years ago he let out eight chickens to double every year. He has been figuring the matter up and finds he is entitled to over 17 million fowls which he values at 30 cents each, thus footing up considerably more than 5 billions of dollars. Don't say editors are never rich.

The Record has received the annual school manual of Oakland county published by Harry H. Snowden, commissioner of schools for that county. It is a well-arranged treatise on matters pertaining to the educational interests of the county and shows that Mr. Snowden is abreast of the times, advocating much needed reforms in our system of education. Mr. Snowden has been nominated to succeed himself, and as he is not a politician, the office being non-political, it is presumed he will be reelected. He has certainly made the most efficient commissioner that Oakland county has ever had.

Novel Showing of Easter Hats.

Anovel method of presenting the newest and freshest Easterbide creations of Paris milliners has been adopted by The Ladies' Home Journal for March. In that magazine the new French hats and bonnets will be pictured as they are worn. This unique display is useful, therefore, in pointing out clearly not only fashion's decrees, but the styles in head-dress best suited to several contrasted types and faces.

The next speaker at the men's meeting is Rev. O. M. Thrasher of Salem. He is coming March 14, '97. Be sure that you hear him.

The address of J. H. Daniels at the meeting Sunday was as choice an exposition of scripture as one could well go to hear, and a great many availed themselves of the privilege. Mr. Daniels is certainly a most captivating speaker and thoroughly instructive.

Miss Kilbourne will be quite shocked some day when she sees Clifton Coyler handling a cigar with the air of an old timer, if she does not find out in the meantime that it is nothing but a lead pencil, one of the "just for fun" kind, you know.

AN ISLAND PEARL BY B. L. FARJEON INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER VI. (Continued.) "But Amos," she remonstrated, "what will let mother say?" "I am going to marry Mabel, not her mother." The thought of leaving Mabel in an uncertain position had disturbed me all along...

CHAPTER VII. On the day before Christmas Mabel and I were married, and as I placed the ring on her finger I felt that my happiness was complete. That same Christmas eve she, my mother and I were in Green-wich, where I had engaged rooms. The Christmas bells rang out auguries of a happy future...

that you could ever grow to doubt me? "You might as well ask me," I replied, "if I think the sun will not rise to-morrow. No, Mabel, it is impossible that I should ever doubt you; the mere suggestion would make me unhappy. I did not know you are all that is good and pure and constant."

CHAPTER VIII. Truly, man proposes and God disposes. I anticipated that I should be absent for not longer than twelve months, and it was three years before I stepped upon my native land again. Briefly, this is the reason why: We were bound for China, and while we lay there unloading the agents of the vessel accepted a profitable charter for Australia. The gold fields had just been discovered in that part of the world, and the chance was not to be missed. I fretted at the delay, but duty was before me, and that stood first. We set sail for the Australian coast. Our voyage was a disastrous one. When within two days' sail of our destination, our ship, the Blue Jacket, was overtaken by a violent storm, which so disabled her that we had to take to our boats. It happened strangely enough that another vessel, named the Blue Jacket, was caught in this storm, and went down with all hands. We were more fortunate. Only one man was lost—our skipper—so that the command devolved upon me. We were picked up and taken into Melbourne, and there I reported myself. My great anxiety now was to get home as soon as possible, but a temptation was thrown in my way which I could not resist. I was offered the command of a vessel belonging to the owners of the Blue Jacket. This vessel was to trade first to China, and there take in cargo for London. To successfully accomplish this to the satisfaction of my owners would be as good as the making of me. No more partings from Mabel, then, thought I, as I joyfully thought with a natural rue at the delay—accepted the offer. I wrote home to Mabel the denible good news of my escape from shipwreck and my promotion. You will understand that during all this time I had no opportunity of receiving a line from her, such are the exigencies of a sailor's life. I was kept in Melbourne longer than pleased me, and it was quite three months before I stepped on to my ship's deck with my clearing papers. The gold fever was raging so violently in those days, that it was no easy task to get a crew together for a humdrum country like Great Britain. However, we managed to muster a lot of scarecrows who knew little enough of the sea or a sailor's duties, and after an unreasonable long voyage—in consequence of my being compelled to be more than ordinarily careful because of the incompetency of my crew—we arrived safely at our destination, and there took in cargo for dear old England. I looked upon it as the happiest of happy omens that I arrived home at Christmas-tide. I had been absent exactly three years. With a joy stirring in my heart which I have not the power to express, I set out from the docks for the dear little cottage of shells in Brighton. It was evening before I could get free, and the night was dark—but not lonely. Flowers seemed to rise in the snow as I walked, seemed to grow in the air as I stepped onward. Cold? Not a bit of it. Everything was warm and beautiful and bright, as it should be at Christmas. All my anxieties and troubles were now at an end. How grateful I was that, by God's mercy, I was spared, and enabled to spend another Christmas ashore with my darling wife and my dear old mother! I recalled the memory of the last happy Christmas I had spent in their dear society, and of the lesson of love and faith I had then learned. And there came upon me in fuller force a dim, sweet hope I had nursed and cherished through all my wanderings—a hope which I hardly dared to shape into words. That when I reached home I should see in Mabel's arms a child who would call me father. How I had dwelt upon that hope! How I had cherished it! What resolutions I had formed to bring my child in a worthy way, and to make him proud of me, as I was of Becroft, Mariner, my father! I pictured him in my imagination dressed as I used to be, in tiny sailor-clothes; I knew full well they would dress him in no other fashion, out of love for me—and I saw myself carrying him in my arms through the Brighton streets, and showing him with pride to the people as the grandson of the best and bravest sailor that ever answered to the call of duty. My heart sung within me, and either my cheeriness, or my brisk step, or the brightness of my face, or all of them together mayhap, caused me to receive many a pleasant look from the passers-by—looks, be sure, which I returned with interest. Home! dear, sweet home!

Fisher, of Lawrence, Mich., from his recent illness, and being informed that he attributed his recovery to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a reporter called on Dr. Williams, and obtained the following statement which is sworn to: "George W. Fisher, a life-long Republican and nominee for the office of Sheriff of Van Buren County, Michigan, and the Union Silverite, baby first duty, says: 'Deposits and says that during the winter of 1888 his system became run down, and blood got out of order, continually tired out, and scarcely able to oversee his business. A little scotch whisky, however, caused a sore which grew in size and became very painful. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People being recommended to him by his wife and the neighbors, he was finally persuaded, though being adverse to patent medicines, and unwilling to look in any direction, to try them. He is now in perfect health, and should injure the skin anywhere on my body, the sore heals without assistance. The pills did the work.'"

INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT MCKINLEY

The procession left on past the capitol, wheeling into the street which surrounded the capitol grounds. The approach of the President and President-elect was signalled to the crowds on the capitol street by the cheering that greeted them and followed them up the hill. Accompanied by waving handkerchiefs and hats, Grand Marshal Porter, waiting at the top of the hill, signaled to the Cleveland troop, they wheeled into the capitol grounds and to the front of the steps of the senate wing, the carriage following at a brisk gait. Gen. Porter was the first to alight at the door of the carriage. Senator Mitchell

Cleveland beside him on the right. On the front seat were Senator Sherman, followed by Gen. Porter, and Senator Mitchell, of Wisconsin. Marshal Porter gave the word to advance. The troopers were in line, and the carriage moved forward. It was one continuous ovation from the start. The President raised his hat and gave a low bow and smiling, his acknowledgments. From windows, roofs and trees rang continuous cheers, while flags and handkerchiefs waved in a storm of approval. Mr. McKinley, feeling that his salute were continuous, at last sat bareheaded. He was followed by the crowd to the monument toward the treasury and white house. He and a half way was like gazing into a broad canyon. The cheering was so loud that women and boys, the buildings, low and high, and stars were almost completely covered by the streamers and banners. The cheering was so loud that women and boys, the buildings, low and high, and stars were almost completely covered by the streamers and banners. The cheering was so loud that women and boys, the buildings, low and high, and stars were almost completely covered by the streamers and banners.

After the soldiers came the civic organizations, numerous, in gallant trim, and well commanded by their chief, Marshal B. H. Warner, of Washington. From front to rear it was the best ordered column, both in its military and the civic sections that has marched in Washington since the veterans of the war passed through it from fields of renown to their homes. It was fitting that the war and navy building should be elaborately decorated to greet a column which the regular troops ordered to Washington by Secretary Lamont, and the numerous and interesting body of seamen present by order of Secretary Herbert, formed so large an element of the military display. The ranks passed beyond the president's stand and came in sight of the war department they saw the most complete and orderly decoration of any of the great buildings of the city. This joint work of Secretaries Lamont and Herbert was the most impressive, beautiful and interesting in Washington, and altogether in keeping with what they have always done when the resources, character and services of their establishments could add dignity and strength to any national affair. There have been few occasions in former inaugurations but there have been few so perfect an organization of the parade, or so prompt, so well equipped, so imposing movement as Gen. Porter and Gen. Dodge, with their leading aids secured on this occasion. The features of the day were heavily upon the President's aged mother and his wife and they left the stand early returning to the White House for breakfast. For three hours and more President McKinley and Vice-President, Hobart stood at the front of the stand returning the salutes of the passing multitude. There was no demonstration on the part pushed into the middle of the street and passed round the President, cheering and gesticulating like mad. Cheer after cheer was given as the great mass of people crowded around and struggled to get near the President. It seemed almost providential that many were not crushed in the great throng, for as the President and vice-president waited for a moment and then hastily left the stand and returned to the White House. The many stories of the day were eclipsed by the brilliancy of the various light displays. The brilliant and illuminated pension building that politics paid its tribute to society. There the distinguished guests of the occasion, said to be the President, McKinley and the new mistress of the White House, and later trampled the mazes of the dance. The inaugural ball is always the climax of the party. The many stories of the day were eclipsed by the brilliancy of the various light displays. The brilliant and illuminated pension building that politics paid its tribute to society. There the distinguished guests of the occasion, said to be the President, McKinley and the new mistress of the White House, and later trampled the mazes of the dance. The inaugural ball is always the climax of the party.

I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States. Thus did William McKinley, of Ohio, swear before Chief Justice Melville in the U. S. Supreme Court, and thus did he enter from the hall of Graves-Cleveland the reins of power, and become President of the United States to rule over the nation until March 4, 1901.

The ceremonies attending the inauguration of William McKinley as President were perhaps the most elaborate that have ever witnessed. With the aid of the most beautiful March days that could be wished for the citizens of the capital city of the nation turned out in full force and fully 50,000 strangers were there also. Washington was a mass of bright decorations and the scene which the President-elect looked upon from the carriage that warmed his heart with a grateful pride. The route of the parade was crowded with the shouting throngs. Every building on the line of march was draped in bunting of the national colors, and every window and point of vantage was occupied by the beautiful Stars and Stripes. Everywhere were seen with other appropriate banners and emblems. At least 100,000 throats voiced a continuous welcome from the time the procession started until the capitol was reached, and these vociferations were still more enthusiastically echoed on the return trip.

Mr. McKinley arose at about his usual time and, feeling that the day was very well, after breakfast with Mrs. McKinley, at his quarters in the White House, the president-elect's hours were spent largely with his wife and mother, and when at 10 o'clock Senators Sherman, Mitchell, of Wisconsin, arrived and announced that they had come to escort the President-elect to the capitol. He assented, and the party immediately started. The procession was packed with a cheering mass of people through which the police had to force a passage. The procession became deafening as he mounted the carriage step, to greet that he stepped and turned from the side with joyful head, his face expressing the approval that he felt. The President-elect was seated with Senator Sherman, from Ohio, in the Cleveland, Ohio, Cavalry Troop, McKinley's personal escort, about 100 men, of black chargers, opened the way through the mass of people, down Pennsylvania street to the White House. It was only a few minutes before the procession moved slowly to give the crowd a good view of the President-elect, and he was seated in the carriage. It was not five minutes after he left the White House that Mr. McKinley, accompanied by the members of his cabinet, drove to the north front of the White House. Entering the rotunda, they were at once shown into the blue room, with the exception of Secretary, Oliver and Gen. Mitchell and Admiral Rowley, Chief officers of the army and navy, were also present.

At a formal cordial interchange of courtesies President Cleveland joined the party on the journey to the capitol. Mr. Cleveland, accompanied by Mrs. Cleveland, the White House steps together and entered the White House carriage, which was drawn by four white chargers. The President-elect sat in the place of honor to the right, and amid the booming of cannon, the clatter of carriage wheels, the hoarse rattle of the drums, the measured tramp of many columns of infantry, and the blare of innumerable bands, the march to the capitol followed. The president's carriage following the President, rode Vice-President-elect Hobart and the senators were completing their business and preparing for their part in the inaugural ceremonies. When the presidential party arrived at the capitol the house of representatives, headed by Speaker Reed, proceeded in a body to the senate chamber, where seats had been assigned them. The members of the supreme court of the United States, robed in silk gowns, occupied a front row of chairs to the right of the President's office. Behind them, in their order of precedence, entered the diplomatic corps, all of whom, except the representatives of the Swiss and the Austrian Central American republics, were resident in official uniform, and adorned with the insignia of decorations conferred. Among the crowds of visitors in the gallery were: Mrs. Yang, wife of the Chinese minister, accompanied by Mr. See and a number of ladies; the former Queen Liliuokalani, the presidential family party was seated in the east reserved gallery. Mrs. McKinley, accompanied by her sister, took a front seat, reserved for her. She smiled frequently as she surveyed the crowd. Following came his venerable mother, Mrs. McKinley.

The vice-president-elect, Mr. Hobart, entered from the right door, bowed slightly to the standing senators and officials, and stepped to the seat near the president's desk. When promptly at noon, ex-President Cleveland and President McKinley entered the chamber, the whole assemblage arose to receive them as they took the seats of honor set apart for them. Mr. Hobart advanced to the desk, raised his right hand and took the oath in accordance with the constitution. Mr. Stevenson then delivered his brief victory address. Mr. Hobart now advanced to the president's chair, and for the first time exercised his official functions by calling the senate to order. He then moved aside for the blind chaplain of the senate, Rev. Dr. Milburn, who, in impressive tones delivered the first invocation to the new senate. As the exit began, the supreme judges going first, then Mr. Cleveland and President McKinley, and the other officials following. The President was escorted from the gallery to the east front of the capitol, where the oath of office was to be taken by Mr. McKinley. A dazzling and inspiring scene spread before President McKinley as he appeared on the steps of the senate wing to take the oath and deliver his inaugural address. The splendid military bands immediately in front, across of turned faces, were wedged so close together that the broad plaza and radiating avenues seemed a vast pavement of human heads. Through the limbs of the trees which, with the parade grounds, were of brilliant color—fragments of the pageant—gay plumes of horsemen, gorgeous uniforms, and the splendid military bands, streaming pennons, fluttering banners, thousands of gleaming gun barrels, and glistening bayonets, which, in the excitement of the troops of the escorting legions awaiting the moving of the procession. Mr. McKinley arose and uncovered, while Chief Justice Fuller, in his flowing robes, administered the oath in the presence of the tremendous multitude. The new President kissed the large, gilt-edged Bible presented by the bishops of the African Methodist church, to seal his oath. With a well-aimed salute, the people continued to roar. Holding the manuscript of his inaugural in one hand, he turned to the multitude of people by lifting up his hand, as if in admonition for order, began his inaugural address. He was greeted with a storm of plaudits ringing on his umbrellas, listened attentively to every word. Mr. McKinley's tones were clear and ringing. As he concluded his inaugural address, the multitude again cheered and the cannon in the distance roared as the signal office of the capitol flashed the signal over the city. A delay after Mr. McKinley had delivered his inaugural address, owing to the fact that it was deemed advisable for him to partake of lunch at the capitol before resuming the procession back to the White House. As President McKinley and Mr. Cleveland, arm in arm, emerged from the capitol after their lunch, the cavalry buglers sounded a salute. The troopers came to present arms, and the great throngs pressed forward to catch a glimpse of the new President. Cheers on every hand were given. Mr. McKinley took the rear seat on the left with Mr.

his patriotic suggested. First was the clean swept floor of the wide avenue, roped in throughout its length and clear of every object save the military and the President's. The wide pavements on either side throughout the line of march were packed with the throngs of people. The crowds in the shop windows, then the thick ranks of the balconies. Every window and cornice was full of people, and the sidewalks were lined with men along the edges of the roofs every available point of observation was not only filled but crowded to its capacity. The great stands which lined all the parks and reservations were, for the first time in the history of inaugurations, both attractive in plan and beautiful in decoration. They were built under specifications approved by the inaugural committee from architects of standing and taste. Over the triumphal way, and horoced by the magnificent preparation of the people and thousands of unending crowds, President McKinley was escorted to the White House, whence he proceeded to the stand in front of it to review the imposing columns of marching thousands which had followed him there. The President's stand was an unbounded admiration and a wild acclaim, which, at intervals drowned the music of their bands. The crowd's reviewing stand occupied two-thirds of the front of the White House grounds. It was a solidly built and handsomely decorated. The background was white, the columns were twined with green, and the national colors were draped designs were the chief ornament. The stand seated 1,000. The president's stand occurred just as the band of glass. The audience was notable in all its elements. The official life of the nation was fully represented by the ambassadors and ministers of all nations honored the occasion. The political magistrates of both parties had seats. The families of their bands. The crowd's reviewing stand and the press of the land was numerous, and ably represented. The parade was a famous column notably commanded. Gen. Horace Porter, grand marshal, at his head, recalled to all the attention of the crowd. Following his numerous and brilliant staff, upon which the sons of the great republic, the chief of their and their officers were prominent figures, came Gen. Granville M. Dodge, commanding the first grand division, which embraced the military organizations of the par-el, first, all right, then Senator Sherman, and then Gen. Porter gave a helping hand to President Cleveland and Mr. McKinley. The President-elect, Mr. McKinley, walked after his secretary of state, who towered above him. Thus they entered the senate wing of the capitol. The President-elect went at once to the vice-president's room, and President Cleveland and cabinet to the president's room. During the first parade the two benches of congress were completing their business and preparing for their part in the inaugural ceremonies. When the presidential party arrived at the capitol the house of representatives, headed by Speaker Reed, proceeded in a body to the senate chamber, where seats had been assigned them. The members of the supreme court of the United States, robed in silk gowns, occupied a front row of chairs to the right of the President's office. Behind them, in their order of precedence, entered the diplomatic corps, all of whom, except the representatives of the Swiss and the Austrian Central American republics, were resident in official uniform, and adorned with the insignia of decorations conferred. Among the crowds of visitors in the gallery were: Mrs. Yang, wife of the Chinese minister, accompanied by Mr. See and a number of ladies; the former Queen Liliuokalani, the presidential family party was seated in the east reserved gallery. Mrs. McKinley, accompanied by her sister, took a front seat, reserved for her. She smiled frequently as she surveyed the crowd. Following came his venerable mother, Mrs. McKinley.

Before the invaders departed, which in this case were the military organizations of the parade, the President and vice-president were escorted to the White House. The President-elect went at once to the vice-president's room, and President Cleveland and cabinet to the president's room. Cheer after cheer was given as the great mass of people crowded around and struggled to get near the President. It seemed almost providential that many were not crushed in the great throng, for as the President and vice-president waited for a moment and then hastily left the stand and returned to the White House. The many stories of the day were eclipsed by the brilliancy of the various light displays. The brilliant and illuminated pension building that politics paid its tribute to society. There the distinguished guests of the occasion, said to be the President, McKinley and the new mistress of the White House, and later trampled the mazes of the dance. The inaugural ball is always the climax of the party. The many stories of the day were eclipsed by the brilliancy of the various light displays. ### NORTHVILLE LOCALS.

More wedding bells. Maple sugar weather is with us. Thunder on Monday made it seem quite like spring. Miss Hattie Lowden is critically ill at her home, 42 Rogers street. The condition of the roads is to blame for a scarcity of fuel and butter on the market. 500,000 Lake trout filled a car sent by the U. S. Fish Station to Mackinaw Wednesday. Our merchants are complaining of slow freight caused by rush of business on the roads. The History class met at Mrs. Whelan's Monday night and will meet with Miss McRobert's next week. The home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Ward is made doubly bright by a tiny boy and girl who made their arrival March 8. Granulated Sugar 5c at Schantz Bros.

Don't lend your umbrella; you may need it yourself. Mackintoshes and galoshes are in general demand. Two more wards in Northville—this time the addition is to Bealton. The U. S. Fish Station ship today a caseload of trout to Wisconsin for general distribution. Don't forget the date of the lecture "A Peep into Another World Through the Microscope." The new ad. of A. K. Carpenter, who bought out his partner's interest in the hardware business, appears on the first page. James Merritt of the Base-line road west, is slowly recovering from his serious illness. Dr. Walker attending physician. Born to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wilson of South Lyon a daughter, March 2. Mrs. Wilson was formerly Miss Lulu Bogart of this place. Regular communication of Northville Lodge No. 159 F&AM Monday evening Mar. 15. Work on EA degree. A full attendance is desired. E. H. Roberts, who has been for some time afflicted with rheumatism is improving, and hopes soon to be able to throw the shuttles again. P. W. Doelle has leased No. 92 Main Street, formerly occupied by the Kate Buchner Millinery establishment, and will conduct a bicycle shop therein. The case of the people vs. Chas. M. Dingman and Melissa D. Fox came up before Justice Dunham at Nov. Tuesday for hearing. Part of the evidence was taken and the case was adjourned until March 25. The following telegram was received by Mr. Sessions: Farmer, N. Y. March 9, 1897. Ghas. A. Sessions, Northville, Mich. Accept my most sincere congratulations. F. S. Neal. Senator Holmes will be present to discuss the question and its issue. F. D. Murdock who has been running the cigar factory over Hutton's grocery has sold his business to Mr. Bradner the cigar maker who already has a factory in the Randolph building. Mr. Murdock will quit the business. There is a scarcity of good houses to rent in Plymouth and the men who have lately begun work in that place, are obliged to leave their families here and board there, or go down and back on the train each day. A few prefer the latter. Messengers E. N. Root and Lyman Brooks were shopkeepers for the young people's party at the Library rooms Tuesday night. This same club have a unique way of appointing annual officers. There are sixteen members and each week the young men select a different lady belonging to the club, in lady knowledge with whom she is to go until the gentleman arrives, nor does the escort know the place of entertainment until informed by the lady. Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Richardson were called to Holly last week by the serious illness of his mother, Mrs. Sarah Richardson who was confined to her bed seven weeks with cancer of the liver. She passed away Monday morning at 1 o'clock aged 75 years. Mrs. Richardson was very well known in the vicinity of Holly where she has resided since '63, and has many friends here. Mrs. Maude Bennett and Master Glen Richardson attended the funeral, which was held Tuesday afternoon. The regular thank offering anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church will occur one week from Sunday evening, March 21. Instead of the usual program an address will be given by Rev. W. M. Ward. Subject: "The preparation of the world for the coming of Christ." Judging from what has been, no one can afford to miss hearing this address. We bespeak a good attendance and let the offering be counted worthy of the church and congregation. A letter dated January 29, 1885, written on parchment with good black ink and in a readable state in 1897 was brought into the Record office by Mrs. Thos. McCutcheon, this week. The writer of it was one Edward Gove who was confined on Great Island near Portsmouth, New Hampshire, at the time of writing the letter, for rebelling against the reigning governor of the colony. He was tried for high treason but was pardoned by the King of England after being convicted of the charge by the court of the Province of New Hampshire and spending three years in the prison at Great Island and in the Tower of London. Edward Gove is an ancestor of Mrs. McCutcheon. Our 25c Tea can't be beaten. Schantz Bros. JUSTLY THE FAVORITE. It is given under the auspices of the Ladies Aid society. An omnibus full of old and young men went through the mud to Ann Arbor Tuesday to the preliminary hearing of the case of the people vs. Larkins, Jones and Lyons charged with the murder of "Hermit" Richards. The case was adjourned until the 18th so the stenographers can get the evidence in shape for the justice to review it. The following clipped from the Detroit Free Press will interest the many friends of the Rev. W. T. Jaques: "A special meeting of the The Detroit Presbytery will be held March 22, to take action concerning a notice given last Sunday by Rev. W. T. Jaques to the congregation of the church of the Covenant, that he had decided to accept a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church in Alhambra. Mr. Jaques came to Detroit about four years ago and has been very successful in his work here. The Alhambra church is considered one of the strongest in the state outside of the larger cities." Dr. E. N. Root has been receiving some very interesting letters from our old townsman, C. H. Stevens, who is located on a 10 acre "fruit ranch" 21 miles from Santa Ana, California. He is 35 miles from Los Angeles, and 11 miles from the coast, within hearing of the old Pacific's roar. His ranch contains 3/4 acres of blackberries, and has 400 apple, plum, Prune, apricot, peach and other fruit trees. He claims to be a veritable grainger, owns a cow and a horse, does his own plowing and cultivating, and is in excellent health. He lives only 4 miles from A. W. Carpenter, formerly of this place, who has a 30 acre ranch and is also interested in mining, having located two good claims. Our young people remember "Mamie," who married the only son of a ranchman, who owns 30,000 acres in one ranch, also about 900 acres of fine fruit lands. The last letter stated that this gentleman was sowing 2,000 acres of barley. Last fall he harvested 17,000 sacks of barley, of 100 lbs each for which he received $1.20 per sack. The Record has perused "C. H.'s" communications (through the courtesy of Dr. Root) with great interest, and is glad to notice the success of Mr. Stevens. To the Public. Having removed my bakery stock in to the east store of the Kellogg block, I desire to thank the citizens for their liberal patronage in the past, and ask for a continuance of the same in our new quarters.
